Job Description:

Associate Professor or Professor of Africana Studies; Africana Studies Program Chair Lafayette College seeks an Associate Professor or Professor with significant teaching, research, and administrative experience in Africana Studies to teach in and direct an evolving interdisciplinary Africana Studies program. This is an anticipated dedicated position in Africana Studies, beginning in the fall of 2012. A joint appointment, shared between the Africana Studies Program and another department or program, is also a possibility for this position. Salary is competitive. Field of academic specialization is open (applications from candidates with strengths in the areas of African-American history, gender studies, and/or critical race theory are especially encouraged). Candidates should have a strong commitment to undergraduate education and the liberal arts, as well as a willingness to develop and contribute to an evolving and integrative Africana Studies curriculum. Along with pedagogical excellence and a strong scholarly record, the successful candidate will ideally be able to demonstrate a record of administrative leadership and collaborative interdisciplinary program building. Africana Studies at Lafayette is an interdisciplinary program devoted to the study of the histories, political and cultural movements, institutions, economies, and identities of Africans and the African diaspora across the globe. One of the college's longest-running interdisciplinary programs, Africana Studies currently supports a major and a minor, and offers a course of study that combines core Africana Studies courses with coursework in other departments and programs in the college. Program website: <http://africana.lafayette.edu/> All application materials (letter of application, curriculum vitae, a statement of teaching philosophy that includes interest and/or experience in teaching a diverse student body, and three letters of recommendation) should be submitted electronically to AFSSearch@lafayette.edu. Review of applications will begin January 23, 2012. Applications will be accepted until the position is filled. The search committee co-chairs welcome questions and correspondence: Mary Armstrong armstrom@lafayette.edu (Associate Professor and Program Chair, Women's and Gender Studies) and/or Curlee Holton holtonc@lafayette.edu (Roth Professor of Art and Department Head, Art Department). Lafayette College is located in eastern Pennsylvania, 70 miles from Manhattan and 60 miles from Center City Philadelphia. Lafayette is a most competitive liberal arts college of approximately 2,400 students offering degrees in the humanities, social sciences, natural sciences, and engineering. The College emphasizes one-on-one student-faculty interaction, high level research, small class experiences, and community based learning. Interdisciplinary study and global education are strategic priorities and Lafayette is in an exciting phase of sustained development in these areas: <http://magazine.lafayette.edu/2011/11/18/the-new-face-of-global-education/> Lafayette is committed to creating a diverse community that is inclusive and responsive and is supportive of each and all of its faculty, students, and staff. All members of the College community share a responsibility for creating, maintaining, and developing a learning environment in which difference is valued, equity is sought, and inclusiveness is practiced. Lafayette College is an equal opportunity employer and encourages applications from women and minorities.

The full position announcement is listed at this site as well as application instructions. IMPORTANT: If you have specific questions concerning this position please contact the department at 303-556-3090. If you have technical questions please refer them to the MSCD Human Resources at 303-556-3120. SUMMARY: The candidate will be an integral member of the Sociology faculty program as well as the Sociology, Anthropology, and Behavioral Science department. The candidate will be required to follow those responsibilities outlined in the MSCD Handbook for Professional Personnel. Primary teaching responsibilities include teaching Criminology and Sociological Writing courses. Additional consideration will be given to candidates who are able to teach Theory, Social Statistics, and Global Area Studies. The position requires teaching day, evening, or weekend classes (four courses, 12 hours per semester), student advising, scholarly activities, and college/community service. RESPONSIBILITIES: Teaching: Teaching involves activities that impart knowledge and critical thinking skills to students. It includes preparing for courses assigned, assessing student progress, conducting curricular review, curricular development, and program review, including the use of new technology, as appropriate. Advising: Advising involves activities specifically directed to assist the student in choosing career options, choosing a degree program, successfully completing his or her degree, obtaining employment or graduate school placement, and keeping informed of College policies. Scholarly Activities: This is a process which includes activity that brings enrichment to the faculty member and the profession and results in new material that can be presented to students, as well as new skills which benefit the College community and are related to the faculty member's assigned responsibilities. It may include investigative work or basic research; infusion of isolated facts with meaning and perspective; making connections across disciplines; placing the specialized in broad context; making knowledge broadly accessible; the solving of problems through the use of scholarly expertise, pedagogical research, creative exploration and production; and methods for the transformation and extension of knowledge, so long as such activities enhance the faculty member's teaching and/or the faculty member's ability to perform his or her assigned responsibilities. Service: Service involves contributions to the improvement of the welfare of the College at any level, and typically unpaid public service to the community or professional organizations which benefits the College. EO STATEMENT: Metropolitan State College of Denver is an equal opportunity employer and encourages women and minorities to apply. QUALIFICATIONS: Required Qualifications: Doctorate in Sociology conferred no later than July 1, 2012. Job Description:

National Research University Higher School of Economics Vacancy Announcement in Sociology The National Research University Higher School of Economics (HSE) invites applications for tenure track positions in sociology in St. Petersburg, as well as Moscow, Nizhny Novgorod, and Perm. We welcome candidates with excellent backgrounds in all sub-fields and a proven ability to conduct high-level research based upon empirical techniques using appropriate research designs and methods. The NRU HSE is a major Russian university aspiring to enhance its profile as an internationally recognized research university. The HSE is the only Russian university in the social sciences to receive the status of a "National Research University" by the Russian federal government in 2009. The candidate would be expected to publish in reputable peer-reviewed journals with research support provided by the university's Centre for Advanced Studies – a collaborative endeavor with Moscow's New Economic School -- and work with research groups in the Faculty of Sociology. A working knowledge of Russian would be an asset. The tenure track appointments will start in September 2012, for 3 years in the first instance. Successful candidates are required to hold a PhD degree in sociology or a related field by the time of the commencement of the appointment. The degree should be from a program with a strong research orientation. It is desirable that the candidate have at least one publication in a peer-reviewed journal and a clear potential for further professional development. University teaching experience is important. The teaching load is negotiable but will not exceed two classes (80 minutes each) per week. The salary range in the 2012-2013 academic year would be 1.3–1.7 million Russian rubles annually (approximately $43-57 K per year at the current exchange rate) depending on experience and qualifications. Russian income tax is a flat 13%. An exceptionally promising candidate could be considered for a higher salary. The HSE salaries are indexed to inflation. In addition to travel support and other benefits, significant research grants can be provided. Please refer to <http://www.hse.ru/en/> for HSE, <http://soc.hse.ru/en/> for the Faculty of Sociology in Moscow, <http://www.hse.spb.ru/departs/faculty-sociologies/> for the St. Petersburg Sociology Faculty (in Russian), and to <http://cas.hse.ru/> for the Centre for Advanced Studies. Interested applicants should submit a CV, a recent research paper, a statement of research interest and at least 2 letters of reference forwarded directly. The submission of applications by email to Professor Martin Gilman, Director, Centre for Advanced Studies (cas@hse.ru) should be received no later than February 24, 2012.

Job Description:

The Stanford University School of Education invites applications for an open-rank tenure-track faculty position in Education and Social Policy. We seek applications from scholars with a distinguished record of research and teaching regarding the influences of educational and/or social policies on educational processes and outcomes. Candidates' research might focus for example, on evaluating educational or social policies; on investigating the mechanisms and processes through which social and educational policies affect schools, school personnel, and students; or on understanding federal, state, district, or school-level policy-making processes. The successful candidate will have a program of research that is empirically rigorous and that addresses important, policy-relevant issues in education. We encourage applications from scholars who can teach courses both on policy-relevant substantive topics and on applied quantitative methods, though the latter is not a requirement. In addition, we encourage applications from scholars whose work has implications for understanding and remedying patterns of educational inequality and for improving the education of children from low-income families. Candidates should have a doctorate (or be near completion of a doctorate) in education, public policy, or a relevant social science discipline, such as economics, political science, sociology, psychology, or human development. The successful candidate will be affiliated with the Stanford Center for Education Policy Analysis (CEPA), and with one or more of the three program areas in the School of Education (Social Sciences, Humanities, and Interdisciplinary Policy Studies in Education; Developmental and Psychological Sciences; or Curriculum Studies and Teacher Education). Review of applications will begin February 1, 2012. We will continue to consider new applications until the position is filled. Online applications are available and highly recommended. Interested candidates should submit a full vita, three examples of scholarship (articles, chapters or books), and a research statement. Please include the names of three scholars who would consent to write to us in confidence about your qualifications if contacted. Syracuse University David B. Falk College of Sport and Human Dynamics Department of Public Health, Food Studies and Nutrition The Department of Public Health, Food Studies and Nutrition in the David B. Falk College of Sport and Human Dynamics at Syracuse University invites applicants for a full time tenure track position in food studies, rank open, to begin August 2012. We seek an Associate or Full Professor, but will also consider promising applicants at the rank of Assistant Professor. The department seeks a high-energy faculty member with expertise in the interdisciplinary study of food, foodsystems, and foodways. This academic appointment is in anticipation of establishing undergraduate and graduate programs in food studies. Responsibilities include developing a stream of high-quality research; program and curriculum design; mentoring, advising and instructing undergraduate and graduate students; fulfilling service responsibilities through department, college, university and professional avenues; and establishing professional liaisons with organizations in the local community and the global field. Minimum qualifications include an earned doctorate related to food studies, an active portfolio of externally funded research and peer reviewed publications (or evidence of potential to develop such a portfolio), and teaching experience at the university level. We are willing to consider candidates trained in a variety of disciplines but with research and teaching expertise in food studies. The Department of Public Health, Food Studies and Nutrition offers undergraduate and graduate degrees in nutrition and public health and is building a food studies program. The department focus is on health issues among diverse populations. Approximately 400 undergraduate and 40 graduate students pursue degrees in this department. Extensive opportunities exist for collaboration at Syracuse University and with the State University of New York (SUNY). The Department of Public Health, Food Studies and Nutrition is a leader in the University's emphasis on publicly-engaged scholarship and applications from scholars with engaged research portfolios are encouraged to apply. Priority consideration will be given to applications received by February 1, 2012 and the search will remain open until the position is filled. For online application instructions go to www.sujobopps.com, (#028629) and attach the following: a cover letter, curriculum vitae, and contact information for three references. The University and surrounding community offer a dynamic intellectual and cultural atmosphere; a diverse community; affordable housing; and many other assets that make Syracuse a great place to live and work. Syracuse University strongly embraces diversity. Women and members of underrepresented groups are especially encouraged to apply. ### Job Description:

The University of Pittsburgh Kenneth P. Dietrich School of Arts and Sciences is offering up to eight postdoctoral fellowships in the humanities and social sciences for the academic year 2012-2013. Fellows will teach one course each semester, complete scholarly work, and participate in the academic and intellectual communities of the departments with which they are affiliated and across the Dietrich School of Arts and Sciences. To foster interaction within the group of fellows and with ongoing concerns of the Humanities Center and other programs on campus, we seek applicants with projects that engage the concept or practice of comparison—across time, space, language, genre, discipline or other category. How do we, at this moment, compare? Why do we compare? What can be compared? What do we gain by comparing? What do we lose? While we welcome any proposal relating to these issues from all humanities and social science disciplines, we are also seeking to establish a research sub-cluster addressing the general topic in relation to the theme of “Enlightenments/Counter-Enlightenments.” We invite applications from qualified candidates in the humanities and social sciences who have received the PhD between December 1, 2009 and January 1, 2012. The annual stipend will be $45,000. Fellows may apply for an additional year renewal. Applications must be received by 5 p.m. EST, March 1, 2012. We expect to announce the awards by April 15, 2012.
