Job Description:

The Sociology Department at Princeton University is seeking a postdoctoral or more senior researcher to work with Assistant Professor Janet Vertesi on a project related to NASA's organizational and fiscal history. The goal of the research is to characterize how tough economic times affect scientific and technical work, specifically by tracking budgetary changes and trade-offs made with respect to particular missions dating from the 1960's. Job requirements include travel to relevant archival resources, collection of archival materials and information related to costs and costing mechanisms, oral history interviews with decision-makers involved in mission development, and the creation of a database containing historical costing information, relevant fluctuations and trade-offs. We seek candidates with expertise in any of the following areas: science studies broadly construed; economic sociology or economic history; historical and archival practices or history of science and technology; and oral history interviews. The project will also potentially include interpretivist work such as ethnographic or observational studies. Experience working with NASA projects or understanding large, distributed, technical projects, regulatory environments, government agencies, or contracting relationships is strongly recommended. Ph.D required. The preferred start date will be summer 2018. The position is for one year with opportunity for renewal based on performance and continued funding. Applicants must apply online at <https://www.princeton.edu/acad-positions/position/6601> and submit a cover letter describing research experience and interests, CV, two papers, a writing sample, and email addresses for three references. This position is subject to the university's background check policy.

Job Description:

Executive Search for the

Associate Professor and Chair of the Department of Criminal Justice and Sociology

at Columbus State University in Georgia

See complete details in the Search Profile at <http://myersmcrac.com/skins/userfiles/files/CSU-Chair-Soc-CJ.pdf>.

Columbus State University, a unit of the University System of Georgia, invites applications and nominations for the leadership position of Associate Professor and Chair of the Department of Criminal Justice and Sociology. Specializations within the field of sociology, criminology, or criminal justice will be considered. This position is available July 1, 2018.

The Opportunity - Columbus State University (CSU) seeks an academic leader to serve as the next Chair of the Department of Criminal Justice and Sociology, a tenure-track position with the rank of Associate Professor. Criminal Justice and Sociology is one of the 10 academic departments within the College of Letters and Sciences, the largest college at the University.

The Chair will report to the Dean of the College of Letters and Sciences, Dennis Rome, Ph.D., who joined CSU in 2014. Prior to his current post, Dr. Rome served as Associate Provost and Associate Vice Chancellor for Academic Affairs at the University of Wisconsin – Parkside. The author and co-editor of several books, Dr. Rome currently serves as Director of the Honors Program for the American Sociological Association (ASA).

Along with administrative duties, the Chair will have teaching responsibilities that may include, but not limited to, courses in the areas of race and ethnic relations, policing, corrections, urban sociology, women studies, family, and/or social welfare. The Chair also will be expected to use active learning strategies that increase student engagement in the learning process.

Candidates committed to encouraging underrepresented minorities to become engaged in the field of social scientific research are strongly encouraged to apply.

Qualifications - Candidates must have an earned doctorate in Criminal Justice, Criminology, Sociology, or related field. A solid record of scholarly achievement and teaching experience commensurate with a tenured faculty appointment at the rank of Associate Professor are required.

Other requirements are:

- *A record of strong teaching performance at the undergraduate and graduate level
- *A record of publishing in peer-reviewed journals in criminal justice, sociology, and related disciplines
- *A commitment to mentoring students and collaborating with colleagues to enhance research
- *A demonstrated track record of initiating and conducting funded research and/or contracts with external constituencies
- *The ability and willingness to employ technology in teaching

Department of Criminal Justice and Sociology

The Department of Criminal Justice and Sociology has 9 full-time and 19 part-time faculty. Four programs are offered:

- *One-year professional certificate
- *Associate of Applied Science degree in Criminal Justice
- *Bachelor of Science degree in Criminal Justice
- *Bachelor of Science degree in Sociology (online and face-to-face)

The Associate of Applied Science in Criminal Justice degree program is designed for students who are seeking a degree that will meet the minimum educational requirements of various law enforcement agencies for entry and/or promotion. All criminal justice majors are strongly encouraged to take and complete the associate degree in criminal justice before taking any bachelor degree criminal justice courses.

The Bachelor of Science degree has the largest enrollment in the department, with 235 students as of Fall 2017. The program provides students with a general knowledge of law enforcement, legal research, corrections and criminology. Graduates understand the principles of criminal justice systems, gain knowledge of law enforcement organization and procedures, receive skills of legal research and analysis, learn concepts of punishment and rehabilitation in the context of correctional systems and become knowledgeable of the major theories of criminal behavior.

With 171 students enrolled in Fall 2017, the Sociology program leading to the Bachelor of Science degree is offered completely online as well as face-to-face. The extensive curriculum teaches a broad range of topics in sociology. Using the latest technological teaching innovations, the sociology online courses are easy to navigate, provide multiple opportunities for interaction, and deliver course content in an effective and comprehensive manner.

The Criminal Justice program also offers advanced professional training and graduate degrees through the Georgia Law Enforcement Command College and the Columbus State Graduate School respectively.

Columbus State University is a comprehensive regional university located 100 miles southwest of Atlanta. A flourishing institution, CSU is known for its quality, affordability, and unparalleled local support.

The University has a diverse student population. While serving students primarily from the Southeast, it also attracts international students, with 20 nations represented within the student body.

CSU provides a creative, personal, and relevant college experience, which values diversity and inclusion in all forms. The University aspires to have faculty and staff reflect the rich diversity of its student body and the Columbus region.

The University offers undergraduate and graduate degrees, including a doctorate in education. The University also provides a variety of online offerings, including full-degree programs, and an extensive continuing education program.

U.S. News & World Report most recently ranked Columbus State No. 45 in its “Best Colleges” rankings among public regional universities in the South. Affordable Colleges Online ranked the University No. 1 among the “Best Online Colleges in Georgia” for providing the best opportunities and value for students seeking online training and educational programs. Three of the institution’s online programs - business, graduate education and bachelor’s in nursing - have been recognized as being among the best in the nation.

The University occupies two campuses. One is in suburban Columbus and houses programs in the sciences, business, and humanities. The other, called the RiverPark campus, is in the city’s historic downtown on the banks of the Chattahoochee River and includes some of the country’s most sophisticated teaching and fine and performing arts spaces.

The University also offers courses at Fort Benning, the U.S. Army’s Maneuver Center of Excellence headquarters.

Columbus State University has a nationally recognized track record of partnership and outreach through efforts such as the Cunningham Center for Leadership Development, Coca-Cola Space Science Center, Oxbow Meadows Environmental Learning Center, and its own residence – the Spencer House – in Oxford, England.

CSU is a Division II member of the National Collegiate Athletic Association. The Cougars field 14 intercollegiate teams.

Additional information on the University and the College of Letters and Sciences are available at www.columbusstate.edu.

Columbus, Georgia, is one of the South's most cosmopolitan cities with endless dining, entertainment, and family adventures to explore. It also is home to world-class enterprises, such as Aflac, Synovus, W.C. Bradley Company, TSYS, and Fort Benning, the U.S. Army's Maneuver Center of Excellence headquarters.

The Columbus region has more than 350,000 residents and is located within two hours of the capitals of Georgia and Alabama. The city is known for its cultural arts, largely due to the RiverPark campus. The extensive offerings of visual and performing arts programs and special performers at CSU attract thousands of visitors annually. The city also has the longest urban whitewater course in the world.

Application and Nomination Process - Confidential inquiries are welcomed and nominations are invited.

To Apply - Application packet must include: a) Letter of Interest (Including a description of how your teaching and/or scholarship will contribute to the understanding of diversity and enhance the intercultural competence of all students is encouraged); b) Current curriculum vitae; c) Statement of Teaching Philosophy; d) Statement of Interest Delineating Relevant Credentials/Experiences; and e) At least three references with full contact information, including e-mail addresses (References will not be contacted without consent from applicants.)

Submit application packet to CSU@myersmcrac.com by May 10, 2018, for best consideration. Applications are accepted until the position is filled.

Submit nominations to CSU-Nominate@myersmcrac.com with complete contact and e-mail information for the person being nominated.

Job Description:

Beloit College invites applications for a full time (five course) visiting faculty member in the Department of Sociology for the 2018-19 academic year. Members of underrepresented minority groups are strongly encouraged to apply. The Department seeks to hire a sociologist who engages in theoretically-informed research, and who will teach courses in his/her /their respective area of specialty. The Department especially encourages applications from candidates whose research and teaching are in the following areas: Sociology of Education; Political Sociology; Sociology of Labor; or Sociology of Immigration. The successful candidate should demonstrate an ability to teach a diverse student body and must have already earned (or be near completion of) a Ph.D. in Sociology.

Because equity and inclusion are central to our students' liberal education and vital to the thriving of all members of our residential learning community, Beloit College aspires to be an actively anti-racist institution. We recognize our aspiration as ongoing and institution-wide, involving collective commitment and accountability. We welcome colleagues who are committed to and will actively contribute to our efforts in advancing inclusion and equity. In that spirit, we invite applicants to demonstrate in their letter of application how their teaching and research areas of specialty can contribute to the Department's commitment to social justice.

Located in a diverse community close to Madison, Milwaukee, and Chicago, Beloit is a selective undergraduate liberal arts college that attracts students from across the United States and the world. The college emphasizes excellence in teaching, learning beyond the traditional classroom, international perspectives, and collaborative research among students and faculty. It is recognized as one of the Colleges That Change Lives.

Applicants should submit a letter of application (including a statement of teaching philosophy), a curriculum vitae, at least one syllabus for a proposed course, and three recent letters of recommendation. Submit materials via email to sociologysearchS18@beloit.edu. Review of applications will begin immediately and continue until the position is filled. Job Description:

The Survey Research Center (SRC) within the Institute for Social Research (ISR) at the University of Michigan has an open rank (tenured or tenure-track) position in its highly successful research program in Health and Retirement.

We are interested in appointing a scholar with exceptional leadership skills and demonstrated commitment to scientific excellence. The candidate must have a proven track record of scholarly achievement and the ability to thrive in the entrepreneurial, interdisciplinary, and collaborative environment of SRC. The central function for this position is the coordination of instrument development in the Health and Retirement Study (HRS). As a multi-mode and mixed mode survey with a consistently high pace of innovation, the HRS is constantly developing new content in multiple modes, evaluating existing content, and adapting to technological innovation in computer-assisted interviewing. Coordinating instrument development entails working with colleagues who are subject-matter experts, bringing to bear sound principles of survey methodology on the design of measurement approaches, working with technical staff on the implementation in specific programming environments, and documenting these processes for a demanding user community. Ideally, this person would also manage the closely-related tasks of managing sample assignments across the many overlapping sub-studies within HRS.

The research program in health and retirement is anchored by the Health and Retirement Study (HRS), a global leader in innovative multi-disciplinary survey research. Allied research projects in medicine, economics, psychology, sociology, epidemiology and other fields build on and complement the HRS. The successful candidate will work with HRS investigators and support scientists to adapt its measurement approaches to new realities and new technologies. S/he will be expected to:

- 1) Effectively collaborate as a member of the HRS scientific team
- 2) Conduct scholarly research in the substantive areas of aging research enabled by the HRS, and/or in areas of survey methodology important to the HRS
- 3) Strengthen established ties to the national and international network of longitudinal studies harmonized to the HRS
- 4) Actively participate in development of research funding for the HRS and related projects

The successful candidate will develop and maintain a portfolio of independently funded research projects. Salary is highly competitive.

The Health and Retirement Study (<http://hrsonline.isr.umich.edu/>) is a public resource supported by the National Institute on Aging (U01AG0009740) and the Social Security Administration. It supports over 15,000 registered research users of the data and over 150 annual publications in peer-reviewed journals. SRC (<http://www.src.isr.umich.edu>) is an international leader in interdisciplinary social science research involving the collection and analysis of survey data. SRC also advances the scientific method of social research through teaching and training.

Applicants should submit a letter describing their scholarly activities, funded research programs/plans, and interests in SRC and HRS. Please include a CV, names of (but not letters from) three references, and two or three recent publications. A doctoral degree is required.

Please send applications, nominations and inquiries electronically to srcsearches@umich.edu. Reference position #156006. Review of applications will begin immediately and continue until position is filled. The University of Michigan is an Affirmative Action/Equal Opportunity Employer and is responsive to the needs of dual career couples. Women and minority candidates are encouraged to apply.

The Institute for Social Research (ISR) at the University of Michigan seeks to recruit and retain a diverse workforce as a reflection of our commitment to serve the diverse people of Michigan, to maintain the excellence of the university, and to ground our research in varied disciplines, perspectives, and ways of knowing and learning.

Academic Program Specialist - Workforce Development
Job ID: 18519
Location: School of Professional Studies
Full/Part Time: Full-Time
Regular/Temporary: Regular

CUNY SPS provides online and on campus degree and certificate programs that meet the needs of adults who are looking for a seamless way to finish or transition into a bachelor's degree, earn a master's degree or certificate in a specialized field, advance in the workplace, or change careers.

Home to the first fully online degree programs at the City University of New York, CUNY SPS offers fully accredited online degree and certificate programs for students who want the flexibility and convenience of online education.

The Joseph S. Murphy Institute for Worker Education and Labor Studies is a collaboration between the University and New York City labor unions for the purpose of serving the educational, policy, and research needs of unions and their members. The mission of the Institute is to: 1) offer undergraduate and graduate programs in labor and urban studies; 2) expand working adult access to colleges throughout the CUNY system; 3) partner with labor unions and employers to address training and education needs of union members; and 4) serve the labor and broader community by conducting researching, offering leadership development programs, hosting forums and national conferences, and publishing articles, books, and a national labor journal to promote debate on issues critical to labor's future and its policy role.

The Workforce Development Program at The Murphy Institute provides academic and administrative support to union workers, working adults, and nontraditional students who are seeking to earn a degree or certificate from a college within CUNY; enhance their skills; and improve career opportunities. The Program is searching for a Program Specialist to assist in overall program administration, including communications, outreach, recruitment, coordination of support services, and liaison with program partners.

The Worker Education Program Specialist reports to the Associate Director of Workforce Development.

In addition to the CUNY Title Overview, responsibilities include but are not limited to:

- Assist in developing and implementing training programs and support services
- Coordinate student support services, such as tutoring, student success workshops, and various basic-skills mini-courses.
- Assist in developing and implementing outreach activities and program recruitment
- Supervise and coordinate off-campus information and educational/career advising sessions
- Coordinate data collection and assist with the creation of institutional reports for internal and external distribution
- Act as a liaison between the Workforce Development program, other units of CUNY, and external program partners
- Work with the Workforce Development team to develop and maintain a communication strategy, using print and technology resources, including social media such as Facebook and Twitter
- Oversee various administrative functions on behalf of the Program Manager

Selected candidate will need to work a flexible schedule with some evenings and weekends and to travel to the five boroughs in New York City

QUALIFICATIONS

Bachelor's Degree and four years' relevant experience required.

Other Qualifications

- Master's degree in higher education, or other related field
- Experience in higher education and/or adult education and workforce development
- Detail oriented, with strong organizational skills, demonstrated ability in strategic planning, ability to manage multiple assignments, and meet deadlines
- Knowledge of college admission practices and enrollment services preferred
- Knowledge of CUNY programs and degree requirements
- Experience with successful implementation of programs for a diverse student population and successful college-wide collaborations
- Demonstrated proficiency in various software programs, including Excel
- Ability to work a flexible schedule with some evenings and weekends and to travel to the five boroughs in New York City
- Responsiveness and professionalism in collaboration with diverse internal and external stakeholders
- Strong written/verbal communication and interpersonal skills, with the ability to make presentations and lead small-group discussions

CUNY TITLE OVERVIEW

- Participates in the daily coordination of academic and administrative activities of a College's specialized academic program under management direction.
- Supports program development, student service delivery, outcome evaluation and instructor/student recruitment, enrollment, and retention.
- Recommends, implements and evaluates strategies to expand program offerings
- Prepares analytical and statistical reports for management
- Develops and maintains relationships with various College offices to improve student and faculty services
- Serves as resource expert regarding program policies and procedures
- Oversees office recordkeeping; manages updates of program web and print materials
- May supervise office operations and/or department budget
- Performs related duties as assigned.

Job Description:

The sociology department at Pacific University invites applications for a full-time, one-year (with possibility of renewal) Visiting Assistant Professor in the undergraduate sociology program beginning in Fall 2018. The teaching load is 24 credits per year, which is typically six four-credit courses. In the first year, these six courses include: two sections of Introduction to Sociology, Qualitative Research Methods (SOC300), Families (SOC309), Gender and Sexuality (SOC316), and a 200-level public sociology course in the candidate's area of expertise. All areas of expertise will be considered, but preference will be given to candidates with interests that complement the expertise of current faculty members.

Pacific University is located in Forest Grove, Oregon, twenty-five miles west of Downtown Portland. The Sociology Department is part of the College of Arts and Sciences, a residential liberal arts campus that emphasizes small class sizes and student-centered learning. The student body primarily comes from the Pacific Northwest while approximately 20% of the student body comes from Hawai'i. In alignment with the university's mission, the sociology department strives to mentor students into individuals who "think, care, create, and pursue justice in our world." Therefore, individuals whose work is informed by culturally inclusive and social justice approaches are strongly encouraged to apply. To apply send (1) cover letter, (2) curriculum vita, (3) a diversity statement that demonstrates ability to contribute to the university's mission of creating a diverse community that pursues justice in the world, (4) a teaching statement, (5) a statement discussing research agenda, and (7) the names and contact information (email and phone numbers) of at least three professional references—all in a single PDF—to: Rebeka Andrade: randrade@pacificu.edu.

For more information about Pacific University visit www.pacificu.edu.

Review of applications will begin immediately.

Job Description:

The Pacific Basin Research Center (PBRC) at Soka University of America, a premier Liberal Arts University in Orange County California, is pleased to announce a call for applications for the sixth annual John D. Montgomery Post-Doctoral Fellowship. The Fellowship is intended to support young scholars (no more than two years beyond defending their dissertation) whose research emphasizes humanistic development in and connections among the peoples of the Pacific Basin. This year's theme is "Asian American Studies." We are interested in applications from scholars with research interests in the histories, lives, cultures, challenges, and contributions of Asian-American communities.

The successful applicant will receive a stipend of $50,000. The Fellow will be expected to teach one course in each of the fall and spring semesters (a 1-1 teaching load), consisting of INTS 342 (Asian America in Comparative Perspective) in one semester and a related introductory course in the other. The successful candidate is expected to contribute to the PBRC by organizing talks, connecting to students, conducting independent research, and contributing to the 2018 Western Conference of the Association of Asian Studies (WCAAS) annual meeting, which we are hosting at Soka University.

Soka University of America is located in Aliso Viejo, southern Orange County. Opening its breathtaking campus in 2001, SUA has quickly joined the ranks of some of the world's best liberal arts campuses. The US News and World Report College Rankings places Soka in the top fifty national liberal arts institutions, first for faculty resources and financial resources, second in student diversity, and seventh for best value.

Boasting an average class size of 13 students, a 1:8 student to teacher ratio, and a diverse student body, SUA is committed to helping students become global citizens.

Job Description:

Job Description

The Josef Korbel School of International Studies at the University of Denver is an interdisciplinary professional school that prepares students for careers in the public, private, academic and nonprofit sectors. Our program provides students with the knowledge, skills, and networks to design policies, implement programs, and realize outcomes that enhance human capabilities around the world. The Josef Korbel School has approximately 400 undergraduate majors, 300 MA students and 20 PhD students. The Josef Korbel School is committed to building a culturally diverse, inclusive, and equitable educational environment.

The University of Denver is the oldest independent university in the Rocky Mountain region, with approximately 11,700 students in undergraduate and graduate programs. DU is classified as a Doctoral/Research University with high research activity.

Position Summary

The Josef Korbel School of International Studies at the University of Denver is seeking a tenure-track assistant professor in the area of African Studies. We seek candidates with broad competence in African Studies and teaching and research interests in conflict, economics, development, gender, and/or human rights. Candidates with a record of successful peer-reviewed publishing and grant winning and an interest in the policy implications of their work are particularly encouraged to apply. We especially welcome applications from those at the assistant professor level who have teaching experience in an interdisciplinary program. The position will begin on September 1, 2018.

Diversity Statement, Josef Korbel School of International Studies, University of Denver

The Josef Korbel School of International Studies is committed to fostering a diverse, equitable and inclusive learning environment for all students, staff and faculty. We value the diversity of backgrounds, ideas and individuals that enrich our community. By diversity, we include the broad range of identities that individuals and groups bring, including (but not limited to) race, ethnicity, religion, gender, gender identity and expression, sexual orientation, socio-economic status, class, language, culture, national origin, generation/age, ability, veteran status, documentation status, academic experience, and intellectual perspective. We also recognize a special responsibility to undertake particular efforts to include the participation and voices of those from historically underrepresented groups who have experienced systematic marginalization, oppression, and lack of access. Diversity and inclusivity, therefore, also entail a commitment to equity, to understanding that not all individuals have had the same opportunity of access, and a collective responsibility to try to make such access more equitable. In all of this, diversity alone is not the only goal; we also strive to hear, listen to, and incorporate all respectful and inclusive voices in our teaching, research, and service. Diversity and inclusivity must also be accompanied by the provision of resources and an openness to listening to and making space for new voices. We hold that embracing and supporting new perspectives, individuals, and ideas invigorates academic excellence and pushes our entire community forward in today's rapidly changing global marketplace. As a school of international studies, within a university dedicated to the public good, a commitment to diversity, equity, and inclusive excellence is critical for preparing and ensuring the success of the next generation of community and global practitioners, scholars, and leaders.
