PRELIMINARY PROGRAM (as of 5/12/2016)
This document is subject to change. Any changes made will be made to the online program.

Tuesday, August 23

The length of each daytime session/meeting activity is one hour and forty minutes, unless noted otherwise. The usual turnover is as follows:
- 8:30am-10:10am
- 10:30am-12:10pm
- 12:30pm-2:10pm
- 2:30pm-4:10pm

Session presiders and committee chairs are requested to see that sessions and meetings end on time to avoid conflicts with subsequent activities scheduled into the same room.

7:00 am Meetings

ASA Business Meeting
The ASA Business Meeting is an opportunity for members of the Association to discuss important issues facing the discipline and profession. Members are encouraged to attend this meeting convened by the ASA President Ruth Milkman.

Summary reports on the Association and its key activities this year will be given by President Ruth Milkman, Secretary Mary Romero, and Executive Officer Sally T. Hillsman. The meeting concludes with the traditional transfer of the gavel, marking the transition of duties from President Ruth Milkman to incoming President Michèle Lamont.

This open forum is an opportunity for members to share their insights, reactions, and suggestions. Please consult the flyer in your convention tote bag for details on the Business Meeting agenda.

As noted in the May/June issue of Footnotes and the posting of meeting information on the ASA website, members seeking to present formal resolutions should be prepared to provide background materials on the issue to be discussed. Members who missed the July 13 submission deadline may bring their resolutions and supporting background documentation to the onsite ASA Office by 3:00 pm on Monday, August 22.

459. Thematic Session. Sexuality and Social Change
Session Organizers: Patrick Ryan Grzanka, University of Tennessee
Emily S. Mann, University of South Carolina
Presider: Tom J. Waidzunas, Temple University
Panelists: Amin Ghaziani, University of British Columbia
Jyoti Puri, Simmons College
Jessica Fields, San Francisco State University
Georgiann Davis, University of Nevada, Las Vegas
Discussant: Tom J. Waidzunas, Temple University

Critics of neoliberalism have argued that the early years of the 21st century have been marked by largely symbolic victories for various social justice movements. Rather than transform the structures of social inequality, social movement politics and discourses have been coopted by conservative institutions that reconstitute equity and justice in the image of corporations and the global power elite. Tolerance, inclusion, and assimilation have displaced the approaches to radical social change advocated by various identity-based social movements, including critical race and ethnic, feminist, workers’ rights, disability, and LGBTQIA* activists. This panel explores the capacities of contemporary social movements to intervene in and disrupt neoliberal policies and practices that engender, sustain, and exacerbate social inequality. The panel will foreground forms of marginalization and domination that are organized by/through sexuality and other intersecting forms of oppression. Accordingly, the panelists will explore the contradictory and shifting landscape of sexual, gender, racial, class, and national politics characterized by the uptake of homonormative subjectivities into the upper echelons of power structures in the U.S. and worldwide, as well as potential strategies for resistance that might produce meaningful social change in the cultural, institutional, historical, and spatial terrain of global sexual worlds.

460. Thematic Session. Social Protests in China
Session Organizer: Ching Kwan Lee, UCLA
Presider: Ching Kwan Lee, UCLA
Panelists: Eli David Friedman, Cornell University
Manjusha S. Nair, National University of Singapore
Yang Su, University of California, Irvine
Guobin Yang, University of Pennsylvania
Discussant: Dingxin Zhao, University of Chicago

This panel examines the major types of social protest and their interaction with the Chinese authoritarian state. Analyzing the internal dynamics and political economy of labor, land and environmental protests, we ask: are these popular mobilizations instances of class formation? Do they insinuate new organizations and imaginations of Chinese citizenship? Are protests a force of social change in China? What do Chinese protests imply for theories of social movement and political sociology?

461. Special Session. The Integration of Immigrants in the United States: A National Research Council Report
Session Organizer: Mary C. Waters, Harvard University
Presider: Mary C. Waters, Harvard University
Panelists: Richard D. Alba, Graduate Center, CUNY
Nancy Foner, Hunter and CUNY Graduate Center
Cecilia Menjivar, University of Kansas
Daniel T. Lichter, Cornell University
Discussant: Min Zhou, Nanyang Technologica University

This panel will present some findings from a National Research Council of the National Academy of Science panel on immigrant integration. The interdisciplinary panel completed its work from January 2014 to October 2015. The committee was charged with (1) summarizing what we know about how immigrants are integrating into American society; (2) discussing what the implications of this knowledge are for informing various policy options; and, (3) identifying any important gaps in our existing knowledge and data availability. We explored the evidence on immigrant integration in the following domains: residential location, education, employment, earnings, occupation, poverty, citizenship (naturalization), voting, electoral representation, language, religion, crime, intermarriage, fertility, family structure, health and life expectancy. Immigrant integration is defined as the opportunities for immigrants and their descendants to achieve their goals in a society through participation in major social institutions, as well as to gain social acceptance. Greater integration implies parity of critical life chances with the native-born American majority. Integration may happen because immigrants change once they get here, or because native born Americans change in response to immigration. The process of integration takes time and we measure it both in terms of time since arrival for the immigrants themselves—the first generation, as well as by comparing across generations, tracing the integration of the children of the immigrants—the second generation and the grandchildren of the immigrants—the third generation.

Session Organizer: Vincent J. Roscigno, Ohio State University
Critics: Zhenchao Qian, Brown University
Michael J. Rosenfeld, Stanford University
Grace Kao, University of Pennsylvania
Author: Dina G. Okamoto, Indiana University

463. Policy and Research Workshop. How to Write a Successful Proposal for the Fund for the Advancement of the Discipline (FAD)
Session Organizer: Nicole V. Amaya, American Sociological Association
Leader: John W. Curtis, American Sociological Association

The Fund for the Advancement of the Discipline (FAD) program is jointly supported by the American Sociological Association and the National Science Foundation. The goal of the FAD program is to advance the discipline of sociology by funding small (up to $8,000), groundbreaking research initiatives and innovative research conferences. The ASA FAD PI and program manager will give an overview of the program, including its history and what to expect from the funding application and review processes. Three recent award recipients make up the panel and will discuss how they wrote their proposals, what was emphasized, how they built the argument that their research or conference would advance the discipline, and how they incorporated evaluations received from the FAD committee. The purpose of this workshop is to encourage applications, especially from scholars in the early stages of their careers and those in departments without extensive research support. Workshop attendees are encouraged to bring questions regarding their own proposals and about the program more broadly.

492. Thematic Session. Rethinking Civil Rights Movement Outcomes
Session Organizer: Belinda Robnett, University of California-Irvine
Presider: Aldon D. Morris, Northwestern University
Panelists: Douglas McAdam, Stanford University
John Skrentny, Univ. of California, San Diego
Belinda Robnett, University of California-Irvine
Discussant: Aldon D. Morris, Northwestern University

What has been the long-term social, political and economic impact of the U.S. Civil Rights Movement on American society? How did the movement’s successes shape national political party agendas; facilitate or hamper the political efficacy of post-civil rights movement organizations; and, influence public policies and private sector practices that shape economic and social equality outcomes? Drawing on their research, four panelists will address these issues. The panelists include Doug McAdam, whose recent book (with Karina Kloos), Deeply Divided, illuminates the ways in which, in the aftermath of the movement, race shaped political party polarization between democrats and republicans and undercut public policy aimed at the poor. Another panelist is John Skrentny. His book, After Civil Rights: Racial Realism in the New American Workplace, argues that Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 that prohibits workplace discrimination, leads to a “color-blind” approach to hiring with negative consequences for non-white employees. He proposes a race-aware approach, instead. Finally, Belinda Robnett’s research for her book in progress, Surviving Success: Black Political Organizations in “Post-Racial” America, 1970 to 2008, chronicles how, in the aftermath of the civil rights movement, political and cultural racial-ethnic discourses that emphasize colorblindness and diversity have undercut the efficacy of the NAACP and the SCLC, and by extension Black progress. Aldon Morris, author of the Origins of the Civil Rights Movement, will serve as the discussant.

Session Organizer: Ruth Milkman, CUNY Graduate Center
Presider: Jennifer Romich, University of Washington
Panelists: Ellen Appelbaum, Center for Economic and Policy Research
Janet Gornick, The Graduate Center / City University of New York
Heidi I. Hartmann, Institute for Women’s Policy Research
Ellen Bravo, Family Values At Work

In the 21st century three states have passed legislation creating paid family leave programs, and political momentum in support of such programs is growing in other states as well as at the federal level. This session, which includes leading experts and policymakers, will discuss the nature and impact of the new programs, the political dynamics that led to their creation, as well as the prospects for their extension to additional states and to the nation in the coming years.

We Are Not Weeds! Planned Shrinkage, Broken Windows, and Gentrification in the Community Gardens of East New York. Justin Sean Myers, Marist College

With the growing trendiness of urban agriculture, community gardens are gaining visibility in the public consciousness, often imagined as spaces of feel-good, get-your-hands-dirty, community-building and healing amidst gritty and conflictual cities or atomizing suburbs. But while community gardens can provide respite and an alternative to prevailing social relations, they are inextricably part of neighborhoods and social structures around them. Whether sharing a piece of land or neighboring small plots, community gardeners reinvent their relationship to the natural and social environment, negotiate norms, perform and challenge social roles, and grapple with power structures within and beyond their gardens. Sociologists are well positioned to explore the workings of community gardens in a way that sheds light on central sociological questions, from the formation of solidarity and community, to microdynamics of social reproduction and inequality, to successes and challenges of social movements. Yet, sociologists lag behind geographers and anthropologists in seizing the opportunity to study community gardens. In this session, we bring together sociologists who study community gardens from a diversity of perspectives, beginning the conversation on the unique contributions of sociology to the study of community gardens – and the contribution that such a study can make to sociological subfields ranging from social movements to race and ethnicity to urban and community sociology. The session promises to provide a stimulating mix of original research and theoretical discussion that would push the study of community gardens in new and exciting directions.

495. Special Session. Teaching On-line: Is the Movement in Higher Education Toward On-line Teaching Right for Sociology?
Session Organizer: Barbara Jane Risman, University of Illinois-Chicago
Presider: Andrea Nicole Hunt, University of North Alabama
Panelists: Mitchell Duneier, Princeton University
David B. Grusky, Stanford University
Melinda Jo Messineo, Ball State University
Jay R. Howard, Butler University
Discussant: Maxine P. Atkinson, North Carolina State University

There has been a great deal of controversy about the effectiveness and value of on-line teaching, using MOOC’s in the classroom, flipped and hybrid classes. In this panel, we will explore the costs and benefits at the classroom level, and the impact of new technologies on the academy as well.

496. Special Session. Visual Sociology and Inequality
Session Organizer: David Charles Schalliol, St. Olaf College
Panelists: Douglas Harper, Duquesne University
David Charles Schalliol, St. Olaf College
Julia Yezbick, Harvard University

Despite the dominance of visual investigation of the social world, serious attempts to interpret the visual research techniques of photography and filmmaking are surprisingly rare, and rigorous attempts to visually represent the social world are rarer still. This panel draws together the creators of innovative visual sociological projects, each of whom have produced work where inequality is foregrounded as an object of study. The panel pursues the distinctive possibilities of visually directed ethnography from the freight trains of the Western United States to the dance halls of Detroit.

498. Regional Spotlight. The Changing City: Housing, Residential Mobility, and Neighborhood Stratification in Seattle
Session Organizers: Kyle Crowder, University of Washington
Tim Thomas, University of Washington
Presider: Tim Thomas, University of Washington
Panelists: Brenda Anibarre, Seattle Office of Civil Rights
Cindi Barker, City Neighborhood Council
Catherine Benotto, Seattle Planning Commission
Jon Grant, Seattle Housing Affordability and Livability Agenda Committee

Matthew Hall, Cornell University

With some of the fastest growing housing costs in the nation, Seattle’s recent trends in local economic and housing development raises vital questions about the structural transitions and social inequalities that come with a rapidly changing city. What social, economic, and political forces drive differential changes in affordability across the city’s neighborhoods? How do changes in affordability affect patterns of residential mobility and neighborhood change? What is the impact of these patterns on access to jobs and other opportunities? To what extent do these changes differentially impact members of various economic and ethno-racial groups within the city? And what do these rapid changes tell us about the future of social inequality of American metros?

499. Departmental Management and Leadership Workshop. Preparing for Successful Program Review
Session Organizer: Cynthia M. Siemsen, California State University, Chico
Leader: Cynthia M. Siemsen, California State University, Chico

This workshop will be especially helpful to individuals from programs that will be submitting self-studies in the near future. While it is never too early to prepare for a program review, it can be too late. In this workshop we will discuss the usefulness of self-reflection, program narratives, the importance of institutional data to support programmatic claims regarding necessary resources to continue high quality program delivery, student satisfaction, assessment of student learning outcomes, student retention and graduation rates, career outcomes for students, and a program’s contributions to its university’s mission and values.

500. Policy and Research Workshop. What You Need to Know about the New “Common Rule” (sponsored by COPE)
Session Organizer: Thomas L. Van Valey, Western Michigan University
Leader: Thomas L. Van Valey, Western Michigan University
Co-Leaders: John M. Kennedy, Indiana University
Sally T. Hillsman, American Sociological Association

The proposed changes to the Common Rule that were recently announced, if implemented as proposed, appear to substantially reduce the amount of oversight that will be required for social and behavioral research. In addition, the proposed changes to the Common Rule will undoubtedly call for changes in the ASA’s Code of Ethics. The ASA Code is currently being reviewed by a subcommittee of the ASA’s Committee On Professional Ethics, and in the next year, this subcommittee will propose changes to the ASA Code to update it. In this workshop, a panel consisting of members of the subcommittee, along with experts on the federal regulations and IRB operations, will discuss the implications of the proposed changes to the Common Rule and the ASA Code and the implications they will have for sociological research.

501. Teaching Workshop. Teaching Introductory Sociology for New Instructors
Session Organizer: Nancy A. Greenwood, Indiana University Kokomo
Leader: Nancy A. Greenwood, Indiana University Kokomo
Co-Leader: Stephanie Medley-Rath, Indiana University Kokomo

The goal of this workshop is to help new instructors who are teaching introductory sociology or other first-year courses explore ways of designing and adapting a course to better fit with program goals and to help them design activities and readings which enable students to meet course learning goals. We will also present ideas for discussion from the SoTL literature about core content, variation in types of readings, and best practices for this course. Participants are encouraged to share and bring issues or questions they would like to discuss. We would also like participants to share their own list of core concepts and readings used/or to be used in their classes.

529. Thematic Session. Allies and Obstacles: Parents of Children with Disabilities and the Disability Rights Movement
Session Organizer: Allison C. Carey, Shippensburg University
Panelists: Pamela Block, State University of New York-Stony Brook
Allison C. Carey, Shippensburg University
Richard K. Scotch, University of Texas at Dallas

“The role of parents of children with disabilities in disability rights activism has provoked some contention. Some scholarship positions parents as vibrant, path-blazing advocates who fight selflessly for the rights and needs of their children (Blum 2007; Jones 2010). Other work, however, characterizes parents as a barrier to social change, especially insofar as they often espouse models of disability rooted in tragedy, medical narratives, and paternalism. For example, historiographer Kathleen Jones (1998) shows the ways in which mothers in the early twentieth century accepted the pathologization of their children in the hopes of normalizing them and enhancing their own status as “good mothers.” Anthropologist Gail Landsman (2009) similarly shows that in the modern era mothers still largely judge their value as mothers (and/or feel judged by others) in terms of the normalization and successful adaptation of their disabled children which inhibits the formation of disability pride and resistance (see also Ketay 2009).” This panel, titled Parents of Children with Disabilities and the Disability Rights Movement, will explore the complex historical and contemporary relationship of parents of people with disabilities to the Disability Rights Movement. In particular, we will draw on three different disability communities: intellectual disability, autism, and mental illness. Through comparing experiences within each community, we will provide a systematic comparison/contrast related to the strategies, goals, and rights positions of different parent groups to understand the historical specificity of each case and to examine the factors that shape parent activism in relation to disability rights. Rather than creating a dichotomy of “good” and “bad” parents, we will explore the complex relationship between parents and disability rights, both in terms of organizational agendas and individual narratives. The presenters on the panel are currently working on a book on this topic.

530. Thematic Session. Psychiatry and Social Movements: Persistent Questions and New Directions
Session Organizer: Karl Bryant, State University of New York-New Paltz

Panelists: Meredith R. Bergey, Brandeis University
Jenny L. Davis, James Madison University
Allan V. Horwitz, Rutgers University
PJ McGann, University of Michigan

This invited session addresses the conference theme of “rethinking social movements” by bringing together a range of scholars analyzing the formation, development, and transformation of social movements addressing psychiatry. Psychiatry has long been the focus of a great deal of social movement activity, with a wide range of problems identified by social movement actors, and a wide range of tactics and strategies adopted to seek out varied remedies for those problems. Social movements have developed critiquing the scope and form of psychiatric treatments, formal institutions built around psychiatry, and even the notion of mental illness itself. Some social movements have formed around a critique of specific diagnostic categories and have sought depathologization, while others have sought recognition through the development of new diagnostic categories. Social movements focused on psychiatry thus provide fruitful terrain for examining the changing nature and range of a specific subset of social movement activity. Panelists will examine both longstanding issues in the study of psychiatry and social movements, as well as new developments, via their analysis of a range of specific cases, including social movements coalescing around aspects of Past Traumatic Stress Disorder, Attention Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder, Body Integrity Identity Disorder, and Gender Dysphoria.

531. Thematic Session. Social Movements and the News Media
Session Organizer: Edwin Amenta, University of California, Irvine
Presenter: Neal Caren, University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill
Panelists: Edwin Amenta, University of California, Irvine
Kenneth (Andy) Andrews, University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill
Jennifer Earl, University of Arizona
Myra Marx Ferree, University of Wisconsin

This session will address the influence of movements on the news media and vice versa, including old media, such as print media and television, as well as new media, such as through the Internet, twitter, and other more decentralized electronic media. Some of the questions to be addressed potentially include under what conditions do movements receive coverage and coverage that is substantive or favorable in other ways in mainstream news media? What is the relationship between old media and new media? How have the possibilities for movements gaining attention changed with the decline of print newspapers and news magazines and the loss of centrality in television networks and rise of new forms of media? The session will be run as a “Koppel-style” session with a moderator and panelists answering questions circulated in advance.

532. Thematic Session. Transgender Identities, Institutions, and Social Change
Session Organizer: Tey Meadow, Harvard University
Panelists: Avgi Saketopoulou, Psychoanalyst
Susan Stryker, University of Arizona
Eric Stanley, University of California-San Diego
Eric Plemons, University of Arizona

Can social movements change more than just conversations? How much pragmatic, institutional change results from significant shifts in identity categories and individual self-understandings? Participants on this panel will discuss the impact of transgender identities and communities on a range of social institutions, including law and the state, psychoanalysis, biomedicine, and psychiatry.

533. Special Session. Revitalization, Relocation, and the Right to the City

Directions
Session Organizer: Gregory D. Squires, George Washington Univ.
Presider: Gregory D. Squires, George Washington Univ.
Panelists: Lance Freeman, Columbia University
Derek S. Hyra, American University
Pramila Jayapal, Washington State Senator
Nick Licata, Seattle City Council Member

Who owns the city? Who has the right to the private amenities and public services provided in the nation’s metropolitan areas? Who gets what and why, and who should get what and why? The persistence of racial segregation, concentrated poverty and uneven development generally – the signal features of metropolitan areas in the US – clearly privilege a small minority at a time of surging inequality. Gentrification, and what to do about it, have been at the heart of recent policy debates and will be the focus of this panel. Housing policy is often the most concrete topic of discussion. Questions are heatedly debated over the merits of relocation versus reinvestment, with most observers calling for both. Lost in much of this debate is the larger context of inequality, brought forcefully by the Occupy movement to the attention of policymakers, scholars, organizers and other observers. In recent years many innovative coalitions have come together to spark progressive responses to the dynamics of uneven development. LAANE in Los Angeles, ONE DC in Washington DC, progressive mayors in New York, Seattle, Minneapolis and other cities, and other forces have joined to create affordable housing via inclusionary zoning rules in previously unaffordable areas, raise the minimum wage to $15 in some communities and accomplish other previously assumed unachievable goals. This panel brings together a Seattle city council member, a Washington state legislator, a planner, and a sociologist to explore how these changes have emerged and how we can build on these achievements.

Session Organizer: Mary Romero, Arizona State University
Presider: Roberto Rivera, University of California Riverside
Critics: Víctor M. Ríos, University of California, Santa Barbara
Hillary Potter, University of Colorado at Boulder
Robert D. Crutchfield, University of Washington
Author: Waverly Duck, University of Pittsburgh

535. Professional Development Workshop. Negotiating an Activist Identity as a Disabilities Scholar
Session Organizer: Robyn Lewis Brown, University of Kentucky
Leader: Robyn Lewis Brown, University of Kentucky
Presider: Robyn Lewis Brown, University of Kentucky
Panelist: Alexandra Catherine Hayes Nowakowski, Florida State University College of Medicine

Activism played a key role in the development of disability studies and remains an important topic within the discipline. For many scholars, however, balancing activist and academic identities presents unique challenges. This panel of junior scholars will candidly discuss these challenges, as well as the opportunities that come from pursuing them.

536. Teaching Workshop. Teaching the Sociology of Law
Session Organizer: Mikaila Mariel Lemonik Arthur, Rhode Island College
Leader: Mikaila Mariel Lemonik Arthur, Rhode Island College
Co-Leaders: Michael Friedson, University of Wisconsin-Whitewater
Yvonne Zylan, Hamilton College
Laura Spitz, lauraspitz@cornell.edu

This workshop brings together presenters from a diverse set of instructional settings in a conversation about innovative approaches to the teaching the sociology of law. Panelists will address topics including the sociology of law classroom as a venue for understanding race and other forms of social inequality in the United States; approaches to utilizing case law materials in the sociology of law classroom; and ways to make the legal system come alive for students with diverse professional interests. Participants will leave the workshop with both new ideas about conceptualizing sociology of law courses and specific examples of activities to enliven their coursework. The workshop will include a broader discussion in which participants can share their own experiences and strategies relevant to the sociology of law classroom.

Discussant: Nitsan Chorev, Brown University
Transnational mobilization is now part of global politics, but whether transnational movements can have a consequential impact on global policies and institutions remains an open question. This session explores one key challenge for transnational social movements: how do they relate to each other? Are they likely to operate in “silos,” each movement pursuing its own issue by itself? Or, can they develop synergies – cross-issue connections and alliances that will expand their leverage? Naomi Klein argues in This Changes Everything (2014:7) that “the climate crisis could form the basis of a powerful mass movement, one that would weave all of these seemingly disparate issues into a coherent narrative.” Her argument implies that the transnational environmental movement can provide a master narrative around which other movements can coalesce. In contrast, Michael Burawoy is skeptical that movements can coalesce sufficiently to shift global power structures, suggesting instead (2010:312) that what he calls “third wave marketization” “destroys the very ground upon which a ‘counter-movement’ could be built.” The presentations in this panel will look at the “eco-system” of transnational social movements from four different vantage points building a composite contribution to the debate on the potential of transnational social movements as agents for changing power dynamics.

Participation of Industry Strikes in Southern China: Emotion, Social Norm, and Rationality. He Gaochao, Sun Yat-Sen University
Organizing the Fragmented: Workers, Unions and Strikes in the Fast Food Industry. Maite Tapia, Tashlin Lakhani, The Ohio State University
Resisting Dualization: Comparing Immigrant Worker Protest in European Public Hospitals. Akasemi Newsome, University of California-Berkeley
This panel will re-assess theories of the strike and worker activism from a global perspective. In particular, we are interested in explaining the surprising convergence of increased extra-legal strike activity in both the global North and South. Additionally, the panel will look at the relationship between worker activism and democratization, both within the workplace and more broadly in the political sphere.

562. Thematic Session. The Immigrant Rights Movement, Ten Years after the 2006 Marches
Session Organizer: Kim Voss, University of California Presider: Kim Voss, University of California Panelist: Maria Elena Durazo, American Federation of Labor and Congress of Industrial Organizations
The Dreamers are Dead, Long live the Dreamers: From “Exceptional” to “Ordinary” Immigrant Rights Activism. Walter Nicholls, University of California-Irvine; Justus L. Uitermark, Erasmus University Rotterdam; Sander van Haperen, University of Amsterdam

The Role of Contentious Politics in Shaping the Behavior of Legislators on Immigration Policy. Chris Zepeda-Millán, University of California-Berkeley; Sophia Wallace, State University of New Jersey-Rutgers
Discussant: Veronica Terriquez, UC Santa Cruz
In spring 2006 millions of protestors took to the streets in cities and towns across the United States to demand immigrant rights. This thematic panel will examine the movement today, assessing the trajectories of different streams of the movement, including youth activism and the alliance with organized labor. It will also take up the vexed question of how the movement has shaped the behavior of policymakers over the past decade.

563. Special Session. Rethinking Slavery
Session Organizer: Monica Prasad, Northwestern University
Presider: Orlando Patterson, Harvard University
Panelists: Martin Ruef, Duke University
Crystal Marie Fleming, STATE UNIVERSITY OF NEW YORK Stony Brook
Walter Johnson, Harvard University
Recent work on slavery is posing a challenge to theories of the origins of industrial capitalism, showing capitalism’s dependence not only on the profits generated by slavery but also on many of the methods and techniques developed for managing slaves. This panel aims to establish how this newer work on slavery challenges or reaffirms older scholarship on slavery and on capitalism.

Session Organizer: Celeste M. Watkins-Hayes, Northwestern University
Van C. Tran, Columbia University
Presider: Van C. Tran, Columbia University
Critics: Philip Kasinitz, CUNY-Graduate Center
Tomas R. Jimenez, Stanford University
Patricia Fernandez-Kelly, Princeton University
565. Regional Spotlight. Wages and Labor in Seattle: $15 Per Hour Movement
Session Organizer: Michael William McCann, University of Washington
Presider: Jennifer Romich, University of Washington
Panelists: Jonathan Rosenblum, Activist Sarah Cherin, United Food and Commercial Workers Local 21 Gerald Hankerson, NAACP and Mainstreet Alliance
In November, 2013, the small suburban city of SeaTac passed Proposition 1, authorizing a $15 minimum wage policy phased in over several years; after surviving a lawsuit filed by business groups, the policy went into effect in January, 2014. Six months later, the Seattle City Council expanded a similar $15 minimum wage policy. The victories in the Puget Sound catalyzed a proliferating array of campaigns to raise the minimum wage in cities and states around the nation as well as at the national level. This panel will reflect on the lessons that can be learned from the struggles by a broad coalition of labor unions, community partners, and elected officials around a host of issues concerning low wage workers’ rights in the years following the Occupy movement, both in Seattle and beyond.

566. Regional Spotlight. Wages and Labor in Seattle: Gender Inequality

567. Policy and Research Workshop. Using the Wisconsin Longitudinal Study
Session Organizers: Pamela Herd, University of Wisconsin-Madison Carol Lynn Roan, University of Wisconsin -- Madison
Leader: Pamela Herd, University of Wisconsin-Madison
Co-Leader: Huey-Chi Vickey Chang, University of Wisconsin - Madison
The Wisconsin Longitudinal Study is a panel study covering nearly sixty years, making it an excellent data source for researchers interested in linking early-life factors to later-life outcomes. The study is a sample of one-in-three Wisconsin high school graduates, and a selected sibling from the class of 1957. WLS is unique among social-scientific resources for the length with which it has followed a large population-based cohort sample and the inclusion of siblings. The most recent round of data was collected between March of 2010 and December of 2012. The data cover nearly every aspect of the participants’ lives from early life socioeconomic background, schooling, family and work to health, social participation, civic engagement, well-being, and cognition. The study also has a wealth of unique data including examples such as administrative IQ scores from high school, information collected from high school yearbooks that include measures of attractiveness, proxy measures for obesity, anthropometric and functioning, and complete lists of student activities for all respondents. Currently, the survey data can be merged with genetic data on ~90 SNPs and soon GWAS data will be available. In addition to genetic data we are studying participants’ microbiomes. We collected ~300 stool samples from the graduate and sibling participants and ~100 samples from their spouses. The WLS also has administrative data including Medicare records, Social Security records, and resource data on primary and secondary schools attended by participants. This workshop introduced the study to researchers and attendees will be provided with a USB containing the data.

568. Teaching Workshop. Teaching Quantitative Literacy and Reasoning in the Social Sciences
Session Organizer: Sarah Hoiland, Hostos Community College
Leader: Sarah Hoiland, Hostos Community College
Panelists: Esther Isabelle Wilder, Lehman College Jill Bouma, Berea College Kate Wolfe, City University of New York-Hostos
This teaching workshop will explore ways to integrate quantitative literacy and quantitative reasoning (QR/QL) into assignments, classes, progressive learning structures, departments, and campuses. Panelists will discuss areas of expertise including curriculum mapping; QR/QL in an urban, diverse community college; assessing student perceptions of their own QR/QL abilities; and factors that promote QR skills and ways to promote QR through the curriculum.
