309. Thematic Session. Adolescent Sexualities in Context

Session Organizer: Peggy C. Giordano, Bowling Green State University

Presider: Peggy C. Giordano, Bowling Green State University

Panelists: Ann Meier, University of Minnesota
Peggy C. Giordano, Bowling Green State University
Stephen T. Russell, University of Arizona
Lorena Garcia, University of Illinois-Chicago

Recognizing limits of the "problem behavior" perspective on adolescent sexuality, panel members explore individual, relationship, and broader contextual (school, neighborhood) influences on sexual experiences and their impact on well-being. One panelist explores how these contextual factors matter for understanding later mental health, while another focuses on variability in the character of these experiences (casual sexual experience, involvement in concurrent relationships) as influences on young adult relationship dynamics (including relationship satisfaction, intimate partner violence). Two panelists draw more explicit links to policy: one suggests the need to move beyond the focus on issues of identity and family support to consider how structural conditions (of schools, but also political climate) make a difference for understanding LGBTQ health and well-being. A fourth panelist uses the example of Chicago's new school-based sex education initiative to highlight ways in which intersections of race/ethnicity, gender, and sexuality necessarily complicate the successful implementation of a broad-based curriculum.

310. Thematic Session. Sexualities in the Penal World

Session Organizer: Megan Lee Comfort, RTI International

Presider: Megan Lee Comfort, RTI International

Panelists: Jessica Fields, San Francisco State University
Valerie Jenness, University of California-Irvine
Erin M. Kerrison, University of Pennsylvania
Laura Beth Nielsen, American Bar Foundation and Northwestern University

Jay W. Borchert, University of Michigan

Discussant: Megan Lee Comfort, RTI International

In correctional facilities in the United States, the expression of sexuality is framed as problematic and requiring heavy censorship, and sexual behavior is prohibited and considered as grounds for further punishment. This Thematic Session delves into this repressive environment to illuminate how incarcerated people think about, enact, and manage sexuality. Presenters will explore the questions and insights that arise when conducting participatory sexuality research with women in jail; the challenges facing transgender prisoners as they navigate a highly binary, genitalia-based classification system; how the Prison Rape Elimination Act has in turn eliminated possibilities for consensual sex among prisoners; and the repercussions of formerly incarcerated queer women constructing heteronormative households in an effort to conform to parole officers' expectations.

311. Thematic Session. Sexuality and Space or Place

Session Organizer: Amy L. Stone, Trinity University

Presider: Eve Ilana Shapiro, University of California-Santa Barbara

Panelists: Japonica Brown-Saracino, Boston University
Amin Ghaziani, University of British Columbia
Amy L. Stone, Trinity University

Katherine McFarland Bruce, Elon University

Discussant: Eve Ilana Shapiro, University of California-Santa Barbara

This panel reflects on the organization of sexualities within different kinds of spaces and places, including ephemeral and transformed spaces. From the Pride parade to the gay neighborhood, this panel considers the role of different spaces in supporting and cultivating sexual cultures. This panel engages with questions of sexuality and space with attention to the ephemerality of some queer spaces.

312. Thematic Session. Where is the Sex in Sexuality Studies?

Session Organizer: Juan J. Battle, City University of New York-Graduate Center

Presider: Juan J. Battle, City University of New York-Graduate Center

Panelists: Gloria Gonzalez-Lopez, University of Texas-

Austin

Angelique Harris, Marquette University

Antonio (Jay) Pastrana, City University of New York-

John Jay College

Tanya Saunders, The Ohio State University

This session will explore the question of whether and how we inquire and write about sexual practices in sociological research. Beyond identity and attractionality, how does behavior – sex – enter into this particular dialogue of sexuality studies? Special attention will be paid to how researchers have studied and can study the intersection(s) of sexuality and race. More specifically, when dealing with these issues, how has the field interrogated experiences of racial and sexual minorities? What are ways that these unique populations are being empowered, pathologized, or both? What populations are not being considered? What are the unexplored questions? In this session, leading scholars in the field will examine how these questions (and answers) can be better incorporated into our research, teaching, and (professional) service.

313. Special Session. Audits and Field Experiments

Session Organizer: S. Michael Gaddis, University of Michigan

Presider: S. Michael Gaddis, University of Michigan

Résumé Audits in Unconventional Contexts: Auditing Chinese State-Owned Enterprises and Elite U.S. Law Firms. András Tilcsik, University of Toronto

The Stigma of Place: Choosing a Socially Relevant Definition of Neighborhood in an Experimental Audit Study. Max Besbris, New York University; Jacob William Faber, New York University; Peter M. Rich, New York University

By Any Other Name: Two Experiments to Examine Perceptions of Race and Social Class from Names. S. Michael Gaddis, University of Michigan

Discussant: Raj Andrew Ghoshal, Goucher College

Audit studies and other field experiments allow researchers to make strong causal claims and explore questions that are often difficult to answer with observational data. These experiments have grown in popularity, particularly to examine different types of discrimination, with the rise of online applications for housing and employment. In recent years, sociologists, economists, and political scientists have implemented creative and influential computerized field experiments. However, the learning curve for designing and implementing these experiments online can be quite steep, despite appearing to be a simple and cheap alternative to traditional experiments. In this panel, experienced scholars will share insights from both their success and failures in designing and implementing audits and other field experiments. In addition, the scholars will discuss new techniques and cutting-edge methods in this area.

314. Special Session. Patriarchy Revisited

Session Organizer: Paula England, New York University

Presider: Nancy Folbre, University of Massachusetts

Panelists: Sylvia Walby, Lancaster University
Heidi I. Hartmann, Institute for Women's Policy Research

Nancy Folbre, University of Massachusetts

The concept of patriarchy played a central role in the resurgence of feminist theory in the 1970s and 1980s. Since then, however, use of the concept has waned, discouraged by post-modernist critiques and displaced by new waves of more empirically oriented gender analysis. Panelists will discuss these questions: What does it mean to describe some aspects of economic and social structure as patriarchal? Is the overarching concept of patriarchy still useful for understanding gender inequality? If so, what aspects of patriarchy have the most important effects today and what does this suggest feminist activists and policy makers should focus on? How can scholars analyze differences across space and over time in patriarchal systems embedded in a global capitalist economy?

315. Special Session. Race and Policing Post-Ferguson

Session Organizer: Devah Pager, Harvard University

Panelists: Lawrence W. Sherman, University of Pennsylvania

Nikki Jones, University of California-Berkeley

Jennifer Eberhardt, Stanford University

This session grapples with the issues of race and policing in the post-Ferguson era. How can we understand the individual and organizational processes that lead to fatal encounters between the police and civilians, and how can we explain the disproportionate policing of young black men? How do young men and women of color experience policing in their communities and how do these interactions shape their outlook and sense of opportunity? Drawing on perspectives from criminology, ethnography, and social psychology, our panelists will open a conversation about these pressing social concerns.

316. Special Session. The 50th Anniversary of the Voting Rights Act and the Future of American Democracy

Session Organizer: Jeff Manza, New York University

Presider: Jeff Manza, New York University

Panelists: Frances Fox Piven, City University of New York

Ellen Katz, University of Michigan

Kareem Crayton, Duke University

Pamela Karlan, Stanford University

The right to vote is fundamental in a democratic society, one which gives meaning and power to all other rights. The Voting Rights Act (VRA) of 1965 was a crowning achievement of the civil rights movement, finally establishing the right to vote for all American citizens. Yet the VRA has had a tortured history in the hands of federal courts, partisan legislators and district gerrymandering. More recently, campaigns to restrict access to the ballot for minority and poor citizens have been widespread across America, suggesting that 50 years after its passage the VRA and the right to vote still continues to be a contested question. This panel will discuss the future of the VRA and voting rights in America.

317. Author Meets Critics Session. Making Hispanics: How Activists, Bureaucrats and Media Constructed a New America (University of Chicago Press, 2014) by G. Cristina Mora

Session Organizer: Tomas R. Jimenez, Stanford University

Author: G. Cristina Mora, University of California-Berkeley

318. Policy and Research Workshop. Conducting Community-Based Participatory Research (CBPR) to Address Health Inequities

Session Organizer: Ethel G. Nicdao, University of the Pacific

Leader: Ethel G. Nicdao, University of the Pacific

CBPR is an approach to research that involves community-academic partnerships. One of the main tenets of CBPR is that community partners are active contributors to the research process. The purpose of the workshop is to provide a brief overview of CBPR, and discuss the application of CBPR in social science research. Panelists (Sonia Bettez & Julie Lucero, University of New Mexico; Michael Muhammad, University of Michigan; and Maya Magarati, University of Washington) will share their insights on the rewards, challenges, and limitations of CBPR; considerations of qualitative and quantitative methods; and the role of sociologists in framing the social contexts that emerge in addressing health disparities, improving health status, and health equity. Finally, to encourage audience participation, the workshop will include a small group exercise on using CBPR to define the policy objective related to a specific social problem.

319. Teaching Workshop. Incorporating Disability in Intersectional Pedagogy

Session Organizers: Heather Powers Albanesi, University of Colorado-Colorado Springs
Abby L. Ferber, University of Colorado-Colorado Springs

Leader: Heather Powers Albanesi, University of Colorado-Colorado Springs

Co-Leader: Abby L. Ferber, University of Colorado-Colorado Springs

The teaching workshop is designed for faculty and future faculty who teach about inequalities through an intersectional lens. Disabilities are often the most tangential and marginalized system of oppression and privilege in intersectional courses. As experienced faculty who have long taught about these subjects and value an intersectional perspective, we have engaged in a multi-year process of incorporating disabilities into our own, and out colleagues,' pedagogy. We will discuss the process of curriculum transformation we organized on our campus, insights gained from working with a leading expert in the field of disabilities studies, the development of a graduate certificate in disability studies, and the ways in which we have brought disability studies into our own courses, especially our sexuality classes. Afraid you don't have the expertise, experience or medical knowledge to incorporate disability into your own intersectional pedagogy? This interactive workshop will offer tips and strategies for getting started.

353. Thematic Session. Aging and Sexuality

Session Organizer: Linda J. Waite, University of Chicago

Older Women and Sexuality in the AIDS Era. Bronwen Lichtenstein, University of Alabama

Sexual Health and Satisfaction among Older People in the United States and England: A Cross-National Comparison. David Lee, Manchester University

Sex for Silvers: Internet Dating, Playfairs and Erotic Capital. Catherine Hakim, Civitas

Although most research on sexuality focuses on adolescents, young adults and those in the childbearing years, a substantial majority of those in middle age and older ages are sexually active. Both the probability of and the behaviors included in sex change with age, as older adults—especially women—often outlive their partners and rarely report sex outside marriage or cohabitation. But even among married and cohabiting adults, the chances of being sexually active decline with age and the health of the partners. The development of chronic diseases, such as hypertension or cardiovascular disease, affects sexuality in ways that we are just beginning to understand. And aging sexuality can be especially fraught for gay men and lesbians. This session will address sexuality in middle and older ages, with a focus on recent perspectives and findings and some international comparisons.

Social Class and Entry into Cohabitation. Sharon L. Sasser, Cornell University

Cohabitation in the Second Half of Life. Susan L. Brown, Bowling Green State University

Cohabitation in Europe. Teresa Castro-Martin, Spanish National Research Council

Cohabitation has been increasing at a rapid pace across the life span. Key recent trends in the U.S. include the following: the majority of young adults have cohabited; two two-thirds of marriages today are preceded by cohabitation; growth in serial cohabitation; the increase in nonmarital childbearing is driven by births to cohabiting parents; and a doubling of cohabitation among adults over age 50. The panelists will help unravel these recent changes in cohabitation patterns and reflect on the future of cohabitation in the U.S. and Europe. Panelists will discuss the meaning of cohabitation and ties to marriage as well as the precursors to cohabitation. Cohabitation among young as well as older adults will be showcased. Cohabitation patterns in Europe will be presented providing important insights into varying family systems. Crosscutting the presentations will be a consideration of social class and race/ethnic variation in cohabitation.

Politicizing Pleasure and Disability: Challenging the Impacts of Ableism on Sexual and Reproductive Health. Bethany Stevens, Independent Disability Consultant and Scholar

(In)Visible Agency: Masculinity, Physical Disability and Sexuality over the Lifecourse. Tom Gerschick, Illinois State University; J. Dalton Stevens, Illinois State University

Discussant: Allison C. Carey, Shippensburg University

While those who fit the heteronormative able-bodied norm may enjoy the illusion of privacy and experience freedom from state and social censure in their sexual expression, many people with disabilities viscerally feel the nexus of the public and private spheres as their identities, intimate relationships, and personal choices are stripped away and their personhood denied. This panel connects the challenges of intimate and sexual citizenships directly with the social construct and lived experience of disability. In doing so, we explore, on the macro level, the ways in which "disabled sex" is erased, eroticized, made deviant, and shunned. Further, we explore, on the micro level, the ways that people with disabilities negotiate ablest assumptions and socio-political structures as they develop a sexual identity through their life course.

356. Thematic Session. Transgendering Sexual Rights: Lessons from Latin America

Session Organizer: Salvador Vidal-Ortiz, American University

Presider: Salvador Vidal-Ortiz, American University

Panelists: Alberto Roque Guerra, Cuban Multidisciplinary Association for Sexuality Studies

Gloria Careaga, National Autonomous University of Mexico

Carlos Figari, Buenos Aires University

Discussant: Salvador Vidal-Ortiz, American University

In 2012, Argentina became the first country to legally offer gender identity recognition, based on a person's self-identification, to transgender people. This did not happen in the global, presumably developed North, but in the chaotic, financially struggling South. Social activists in countries such as Colombia, Cuba, Mexico and Brazil have fought for rights and recognition for transgendered people. Yet this region faces structural forces that lead many transgender women, in particular, to engage in survival prostitution, and give troubling invisibility to transgender men. Transgender people face structural vulnerabilities enacted through everyday violence; at the same time, some countries have developed degree completion schools, textile and non-street economies, alternative housing, and centers that train on basic employment skills. Traditional sociological approaches to transgender scholarship can be rethought based on these experiences; the advancements and challenges we see in Latin America are important lessons for an interested US American audience.

357. Special Session. Crossing the Scholar-Activist Line

Session Organizer: Jose Zapata Calderon, Pitzer College

Presider: Mark R. Warren, University of Massachusetts-Boston

Panelists: Patricia Hill Collins, University of Maryland-College Park

Jose Zapata Calderon, Pitzer College

Gregory D. Squires, George Washington University

Veronica Terriquez, University of Southern California

A panel of activist sociologists will present on how activist sociologists can maintain a passion for social justice while ensuring the demands of academia. The presenters will draw on lessons from their roles as scholar-activists with a focus on the arenas in which they work (labor, immigrant rights, community development, global social movement, feminist, communities of color, LGBT communities). Panelists will address new models of research, learning, and practice that are engaging faculty, students, and partners in problem solving to find solutions to community problems; lessons in fulfilling professional academic objectives (e.g. publishing in scholarly journals, getting tenure) while engaging in community-based research; research and practices of developing the classroom as part of the civic realm and that encourage the interconnections between the local and global.

358. Special Session. Gender, Family, and Sexuality in Comparative Perspective

Sexual Orientation and Social Disadvantage over the Life Course in Australia and the United Kingdom. Janeen H. Baxter, Univ of Queensland; Francisco Perales, University of Queensland; Tsui-o Tai, National Taipei University

This session features research papers on comparative research on gender, family and sexuality. Two main themes unite them. First, all papers focus on the importance of the institutional environment in shaping individual outcomes in interpersonal relationships, work and family life. Second, the papers are concerned with links between employment and family life as ongoing sources of gender inequality. Van Der Lippe uses recent European data to examine variations in patterns of work flexibility and their impact on family arrangements. Ruppner investigates whether women's labor market position and gender empowerment at the country-level have differential effects on gender role expectations, gender gaps in housework and work-family strain over time. Wei-Jun provides evidence of changes over time in the level and determinants of gender inequality with reference to China. Finally, Baxter et. al. examine whether sexual identity is associated with labor market performance, wellbeing and family relationships in the UK and Australia.

Session Organizer: Andrew Baer, Northwestern University

Presider: Andrew Baer, Northwestern University

Presenters: Simon Balto, University of Wisconsin-Madison

Peter Pihos, Duke University

John Hagedorn, University of Illinois-Chicago

Like most big cities, crime is lower now in Chicago than it has been in decades. But violent crime is still endemic to impoverished neighborhoods, as are issues of trust and concerns about lack of police accountability. Chicago also struggles with the legacy of the damage done by notorious police commander Jon Burge and his subordinates, who used torture to elicit confessions from over 100 African American men in the 70s and 80s. This session brings together historians and social scientists who have done path breaking work on police-community relations in Chicago who will discuss their work and implications for policing and race relations more broadly.

362. Professional Development Workshop.

Reviewing for Medical Sociology and Mental Health Journals

Session Organizers: Susan E. Bell, Bowdoin College
Virginia Aldige Hiday, North Carolina State University
Co-Leaders: Gilbert C. Gee, University of California-Los Angeles
Gareth Williams, Cardiff University
Elaine Wethington, Cornell University

This workshop is designed for young sociologists to assist them in the important and essential task of professional sociologists, writing manuscript reviews for journals. Editors of three medical sociology and mental health journals will provide suggestions for writing well crafted, informative, critical and helpful reviews (Society and Mental Health, Journal of Health and Social Behavior, Sociology of Health & Illness). The editors will discuss objectivity, criteria for revision recommendations, helpful considerations for authors, time allocations, timely submissions, conflict of interests, and ethics. Sociologists at more advanced stages and in other areas are welcome.

363. Social Media Workshop. Promoting Social Science with Social Media

Session Organizer: Dustin Kidd, Temple University
Leader: Dustin Kidd, Temple University

How can you build and engage an audience for your social science scholarship using social media? This workshop will step through the top social media platforms for sharing your research and promoting your department. We will explore the value of Twitter, Facebook, Google +, WordPress, Tumblr, LinkedIn, Academia.edu, Pinterest, YouTube, and Instagram. We will study the best practices for using social media to reach a wide audience that includes journalists, activists, and policy makers. We also discuss ways that you can incorporate social media into research and teaching practices. Participants can also learn from each other's experiences during the discussion period.

364. Policy and Research Workshop. How to Write a Successful Fund for the Advancement of the Discipline (FAD)

Session Organizer: Nicole V. Amaya, American Sociological Association
Presider: John W. Curtis, American Sociological Association
Panelists: Amy L. Stone, Trinity University

James Michael Thomas, University of Mississippi
Wendy D. Roth, University of British Columbia
The Fund for the Advancement of the Discipline (FAD) program is supported by the American Sociological Association through a matching grant from the National Science Foundation. The goal of the FAD program is to advance the discipline of sociology by funding small (up to $8,000), groundbreaking research initiatives and innovative research conferences. The ASA FAD PI and program manager will give an overview of the program, including its history and what to expect from the funding application and review processes. Three recent award recipients make up the panel and will discuss how they wrote their proposals, what was emphasized, how they built the argument that their research or conference would advance the discipline, and how they incorporated evaluations received from the FAD committee. The purpose of this workshop is to encourage applications, especially from scholars in the early stages of their careers and those in departments without extensive research support. Workshop attendees are encouraged to bring questions regarding their own proposals and about the program more broadly.

365. Teaching Workshop. Teaching Race, Gender, and Colonialism within Environmental Sociology

Session Organizer: Kari Marie Norgaard, University of Oregon

Leader: Kari Marie Norgaard, University of Oregon
Co-Leaders: Emily Huddart Kennedy, Washington State University

Julie Bacon, University of Oregon

While environmental justice has key origins within sociology, and a nod to gender and race is almost universal in environmental sociology courses, we contend that the topics of gender, race and colonialism remain under-theorized within both the scholarly sub-discipline and the classroom. A review of environmental sociology syllabi at the graduate and undergraduate level reveals that 1) discussion of gender, race and colonialism/decolonization are generally brief, 2) when included, concepts of gender, race and colonialism/decolonization are rarely addressed in ways that incorporate the leading theory from these fields, 3) large majorities of the authors assigned for course readings at both graduate and undergraduate levels are white and male, 4) especially when it comes to gender, we notice periodic postings to the Environment and Technology listserv requesting teaching resources. Indeed, while gender and race are at least present, sociological engagement with indigenous experiences or the concepts of colonialism and decolonization are only just beginning. This workshop will provide examples of 3 classroom modules that incorporate key sociological theory with hands on activities. Teaching resources and reading lists on each topic will be included. While this workshop is focused around courses in environmental sociology, material and resources will be presented in a manner to facilitate those teaching courses in gender, race or indigenous perspectives who wish to learn more about how their courses can include the environment.

397. Plenary Session. The Rise of Nonmarital Births
Session Organizer: Paula England, New York University
Presider: Paula England, New York University
Panelists: Lawrence L. Wu, New York University

Andrew J. Cherlin, Johns Hopkins University
Marcia J. Carlson, University of Wisconsin-Madison

An increasing proportion of American women and men have their first child, and sometimes subsequent children, outside of marriage. The upward trend began more than a half century ago, and is more pronounced among those with who are less privileged. For example, there is almost no such trend among white college graduates. Nonmarital births are typically to couples in relationships or cohabiting unions that break up within a few years, leading to substantial complexity and instability in family patterns. Panelists will consider the trends, social forces encouraging nonmarital births, and their consequences for adults and children.

398. Presidential Panel. Do Heterosexual Couples Avoid Female Superiority and Eroticize Traditionality?

Session Organizer: Paula England, New York University
Presider: Maria Charles, University of California-Santa Barbara

Panelists: Marianne Bertrand, University of Chicago

Sabino Kornrich, Emory University

Christine Renee Schwartz, University of Wisconsin-Madison

The gender revolution has arguably degendered education and careers more than family roles and sexuality. Three panelists present differing views on whether, among heterosexuals, more egalitarian or more traditional gender arrangements encourage couples to get married, stay together, and have more frequent sex. What is the evidence that partners do gender by avoiding marriages in which women earn more, and divorcing when women's relative status is too high? How do egalitarian or traditional roles affect how often married couples have sex? Is all this changing as women's superior educational attainment leads more and more couples to feature a wife who is better educated than her husband?

399. Thematic Session. Comparative-Historical Approaches to Sexuality

Session Organizer: Greggor Mattson, Oberlin College

Presider: Greggor Mattson, Oberlin College

Panelists: David John Frank, University of California-Irvine

Jyoti Puri, Simmons College

Amy T. Schalet, University of Massachusetts-Amherst

Greggor Mattson, Oberlin College

If the disciplines of history and anthropology are associated with the variation in sexual meanings over time and in different cultures, sociology offers a specific competence in attending to comparisons in the contexts of states, markets and other institutions. David John Frank studies the changing cultural infrastructure of world society through criminal laws regulating incest, rape, adultery, and sodomy for 100+ countries. Jyoti Puri is an expert on sexualities, nationalisms and transnational feminisms in India and beyond, in her books Woman, Body, Desire in Post-colonial India, Encountering Nationalism, and the forthcoming Sexuality/State: Decriminalizing Homosexuality in India. Amy Schalet is the author of Not Under My Roof: Parents, Teens and the Culture of Sex, a comparison of Dutch and American conceptions of selfhood. Greggor Mattson is the author of forthcoming pieces on the diverging meanings of prostitution in the European Union through the lens of welfare states and transnational feminisms.

400. Thematic Session. Former ASA Presidents Reflect on the Study of Sexuality

Session Organizer: Jerry A. Jacobs, University of Pennsylvania

Presenter: Jerry A. Jacobs, University of Pennsylvania

Panelists: Cecilia L. Ridgeway, Stanford University

Evelyn Nakano Glenn, University of California-Berkeley

Randall Collins, University of Pennsylvania

This session will examine how sexuality scholarship and other fields of sociology can learn from each other. Specifically, what insights from sexuality research might inform our understanding of culture, interaction, evolution, gender, diversity, political movements, social stratification, family, the internet and other important areas of society? And what broad social theories and social trends from outside sexuality research might fruitfully inform sexuality studies? Four former ASA Presidents will take on these broad issues.

401. Thematic Session. Sexuality and Religion

Session Organizer: Elizabeth A. Armstrong, University of Michigan

Presenter: Orit Avishai, Fordham University

Panelists: Melissa J. Wilde, University of Pennsylvania

Bernadette Barton, Morehead State University

Roger Friedland, Departments of Sociology and Religious Studies

Janet Afary, University of California-Los Angeles

This panel will explore some of the diverse ways that religious traditions understand, shape and attempt to monitor sexuality. Melissa Wilde examines the ways in which early divisions in the American religious field that seemed connected to sex and gender (e.g. birth control) were really about race and class. Bernadette Barton will discuss the ways in which Conservative Christian attitudes slow the progress of gay rights. In particular, she will discuss the gap between those states with institutional protections for gay people, including marriage, and those that do not even have a state-wide fairness ordinance. Roger Friedland and Janet Afary will discuss Islam, gender and intimacy.

Given historical patterns of settlement, the social science literature on Latino/a migration and incorporation has tended to focus on large urban centers. In the context of the Midwest, specifically, much scholarship on Latino/a experiences has focused on the city of Chicago. Yet, we know that Latinos have long been present in many other communities across the region. Furthermore, the Midwest is a broadly constituted and contested space, a site of ongoing and new migrations from established areas of Latino settlement in other parts of the country, and from Latin America and the Caribbean. Chicago, and a host of other Midwestern cities of various sizes, continue to be configured and reconfigured by the Latino/a presence. Additionally, for the past three decades, growing numbers of Latinos have settled in a variety of suburban and rural communities across the region. This paper session features work on the dynamic landscapes constituted by Latinas/Latinos in the Midwest. We offer work of sociological significance presented within a historical and comparative framework, as a way to deepen our understanding of Latino/a experiences in the Midwest. The Midwest and Chicago are the perfect setting for this conversation, which will highlight: • new and persisting challenges, like gentrification, and the challenges (though also opportunities) associated with a growingly heterogeneous Latin@ population) • remarkable Latin@ growth in a range of small and mid-size cities across the region (e.g., Omaha, Minneapolis, Des Moines) • the browning of the suburbs, and specifically the emergence of Latin@ suburbs • growth of Latin@ populations as a driver for rural population growth throughout the Midwest, and the emergence of and conditions of Latino communities in a range of rural new gateways

404. Departmental Management and Leadership Workshop. Lessons for Departments and Faculty from the Bachelors and Beyond Surveys: Suggestions for Enhancing Labor Market and Non-Labor Market Outcomes

Session Organizer: Mary Scheuer Senter, Central Michigan University

Leader: Mary Scheuer Senter, Central Michigan University

Co-Leaders: Roberta M. Spalter-Roth, American Sociological Association

Nicole V. Amaya, American Sociological Association

Data gathering for the second NSF-funded, longitudinal Bachelor's and Beyond surveys – tracing the experiences of a national cohort of 2012 sociology majors during and after their baccalaureate experience – has been completed. In this workshop we review key findings regarding the jobs sociology majors have obtained 18 months after their graduation and the strategies that are most likely to lead to career-type employment. In addition, we move beyond a discussion of the labor market outcomes of a college education to explore other ways in which college experiences affect graduates' lives – including graduates' satisfaction with their major, their living arrangements, and their civic participation. Workshop participants will be asked to share their experiences working with undergraduates to prepare them both for career success and for the development of meaningful personal and civic lives. We hope both to broaden the discussion of the impact of college on graduates and to prompt a useful exchange on the ways in which faculty and departments have been innovative in preparing students for a full range of meaningful adult experiences.

405. Professional Development Workshop. European Research Council - Funding for U.S. Sociologists (and Elsewhere!) Willing to Explore Ideas or Territories Never Explored Before

Session Organizer: Lionel Thelen, European Research Council

Leader: Lionel Thelen, European Research Council

In Turbulent Times not only banks, institutions, companies or even countries are under pressure but also individuals and, among them, researchers. Studying crisis times can be of the utmost interest for social sciences in general and for sociology in particular. Unfortunately another feature of our hectic times are, in US and in various countries worldwide, financial difficulties to make ends meet as well as limited budgets for universities, research centres and, subsequently, frequent cuts in social sciences research funding. Taking the exact opposite position, the ERC funding capability increases each year and the part of the budget devoted to social sciences has been bettered from 2015 onwards. With funding up to 3.75 million $ for a 5 year project, the ERC has become – in less than 8 years – one of the major funding bodies worldwide and certainly the most generous for Social Sciences and Humanities. "What do the ERC schemes have to offer to sociologists?" "How to get started with an application?" "How to increase your chances to get funding?" "What are the main hitches to avoid?" These are all relevant questions that will be raised during this workshop. Do not hesitate to bring yours! This session is opened to all sociologists aiming to design and lead to their good end ground-breaking research projects. The presentations will be done by ERC Scientific Staff as well as by Grantees and Panel Evaluators. Each presentation will be followed by a Q&A session and presenters will of course be available during the whole duration of the Conference to answer your queries. Flyers, reports and publications will be available to help you inasmuch as possible, not forgetting, last but not least, our website: <http://erc.europa.eu/>

406. Policy and Research Workshop. Grant Writing for Sociology Students: Disciplinary and Interdisciplinary Opportunities and Strategies

Session Organizer: Dana M. Britton, State University of New Jersey-Rutgers

Leader: Dana M. Britton, State University of New Jersey-Rutgers

Co-Leader: Laura Kramer, Montclair State University

This workshop will focus on effective practices for preparing proposals for funding. We will review recognized strategies for identifying potential funding sources appropriate for various career stages. We will provide an overview of how funding organizations work, discuss how to read calls for proposals or solicitations, how to work on proposals, and how to work on revisions. We will help participants to understand the role of reviewers and decision makers and to bring all of these elements together in crafting the strongest possible proposals.

407. Teaching Workshop. Teaching Sexuality:

Co-Leader: Elroi J. Windsor, Salem College

Panelists: Mindy Stompler, Georgia State University

Jason Ronald Orne, University of Wisconsin-Madison

Teaching topics related to sexuality can be challenging for even the most experienced instructors. Students may resist sociological approaches to commonly associated topics and issues, and instructors often deal with complex and sensitive subjects. Past workshops offered at ASA were designed to introduce instructors to teaching sexuality independently or within a general course. This workshop addresses the need for discussion and guidance on advanced issues related to teaching sexuality, including handling sensitive/controversial topics; dealing with student reluctance; managing disclosures in the classroom; creating a sex-positive environment; garnering administrative support; and handling media exposure. Panelists will include a diverse set of experienced instructors with a variety of perspectives and approaches to the subject. The workshop is designed for experienced sexualities instructors who wish to improve their skills, discuss challenges, and share innovations and techniques.

Sheff Consulting Group

Discussant: Corie Hammers, Macalester College

In this session we will explore consensual non-monogamies, a range of relationship styles that allow their participants to construct relationships with varied degrees of extra-dyadic romantic and/or sexual interaction. Dr. Terri Conley will critically examine monogamy as "the" ideal relationship configuration, considering how effective monogamy is in structuring family benefits, sexual benefits, relationship satisfaction, and prevention of sexually transmitted infections. Dr. Mimi Schippers will discuss the feminist and queer implications of nonmonogamy and explain the social and political implications of compulsory monogamy and polyamory. Dr. Elisabeth Sheff will provide an overview of the findings of her 15-year study of polyamorous families with children. Pioneers in their field, these researchers have established a solid theoretical and empirical base of information about consensual non-monogamies. Conley's work on the transmission of sexually transmitted infections reveals that not all forms of non-monogamy are equal, and consensual nonmonogamists have lower rates of transmission and higher rates of barrier use than do cheaters. Schippers's book Polyqueer: Compulsory Monogamy and the Queer Potential of Plural Sexualities (2015) establishes a theoretical framework for identifying how compulsory monogamy reinforces hetero-masculine dominance and the potential for non-monogamies to undermine race, class, and gender inequality. Sheff's books look at polyamorous families, with The Polyamorists Next Door: Inside Multiple-Partner Relationships and Families (2014) providing a summary of her 15 year study of polyamorous families with children and Stories from the Polycule: Real life in Polyamorous Families (2015) compiling polyamorists' writings in an edited anthology.

440. Thematic Session. Gender and Sexuality in East Asia

Session Organizer: Travis Kong, University of Hong Kong

Presider: Travis Kong, University of Hong Kong

Panelists: Stevi Jackson, University of York-United Kingdom

Travis Kong, University of Hong Kong

Pei-Chia Lan, National Taiwan University

Lee Nayoung, Chung-Ang University

A profound transformation in personal lives has taken place in East Asia in the past few decades. This panel takes a critical stance to understand the changes of sexuality, gender, marriage, and/or family in Hong Kong, China, Taiwan, and Korea. Stevi Jackson will challenge the hegemony of Western theoretical perspectives on gender, sexuality, and intimate relationships and urge for the need of East Asian alternatives. Travis Kong will discuss the changing sexual scripts of Chinese masculinity through men who buy commercial sex in Hong Kong and China. Lan Peichia will discuss how the changing scripts of cultivating middle-class children in Taiwan have intensified the gender division of parenting labour across the divergent practices of childrearing. Lee Nayoung will focus on the newly emerged debates around anti-prostitution laws in South Korea by mapping out the dynamics of women's movements and the changes in government policy.

441. Thematic Session. Sexual Fields

Session Organizer: Adam Isaiah Green, University of Toronto

Presider: Lisa Renee Miller, Indiana University-Bloomington

Panelists: Adam Isaiah Green, University of Toronto

Omar A. Lizardo, University of Notre Dame

Margaret Frye, Princeton University

John Levi Martin, University of Chicago

Recently, scholars of sexuality have turned to Bourdieu and field theory to make sense of collective sexual life and its unique social organization. In this stream of research, the specialized arenas of modern sexual life—from the neighborhood coffee shop to the global Internet dating site—are conceived as sexual fields, each possessing their own particular socio-demographic composition and status order. This thematic session will explore the turn to sexual field theory, including its theoretical underpinnings and its capacity to illuminate the social foundations of sexual desire and desirability. Here, panelists will consider what field theory has to offer the study of sexuality, including how the structures of race, class, gender and nationality materialize in systems of sexual stratification but, also, how the study of sexuality may shed light on Bourdieusian field theory.

Discussant: Robert Dingwall, Nottingham Trent University

Harold Garfinkel's (1967) influential study, "Passing and the Managed Achievement of Sex Status in an 'Intersexed Person,'" provides one of the earliest sociological interpretations of sex and gender as products of collaborative social interaction. This study has influenced scholars working in a variety of traditions including symbolic interaction, cultural and cognitive sociology, the sociological analysis of autobiography, conversation analysis, the sociology of the body, and the interdisciplinary field of sex/gender/sexuality studies. This session will illustrate the influence of Garfinkel's study of Agnes. Participants will discuss the impact of Garfinkel's ideas on notions of sex/gender performance, issues pertaining to sexuality and sexual orientation, the social construction of sex/gender, and the achievement of sex and gender in symbolic, social interaction. Participants will highlight areas of their own research that advance Garfinkel's ideas. They will also highlight new areas of research inspired by the study of sex, sexuality, and gender as everyday accomplishments.

Session Organizer: David Grazian, University of Pennsylvania

Prsident: David Grazian, University of Pennsylvania

Presenters: Nicole Gonzalez Van Cleve, Temple University

Japonica Brown-Saracino, Boston University

Black Hawk Hancock, DePaul University

Chicago has long served as a central site for the sociological study of urban culture and public life. In this Spotlight Session, we will discuss how race relations unfold in Chicago's public spaces; neighborhood gentrification and the ecological landscape of the LGBT community; and the city's vibrant scenes of urban entertainment, nightlife, and cultural consumption. In doing so, we will emphasize Chicago's distinctiveness as well as its persistent ability to highlight larger social forces operating in American metropolitan life more generally.

445. Professional Development Workshop. Before and After Retirement

Session Organizer: Scott G. McNall, California State University-Chico

Leader: Thomas L. Van Valey, Western Michigan University

Co-Leaders: Scott G. McNall, California State University-Chico

Susan B. Prager, City University of New York-Brooklyn College Emeritus

Retirement can be a rewarding experience; however, people need to plan on what they are retiring TO as well as what they are retiring FROM. Both pre- and post-retirement issues such as partner expectations, community and intellectual engagement, and lessons learned will be engaged. The results of two membership surveys conducted prior to the annual meeting will be incorporated into and discussed during the workshop.

446. Policy and Research Workshop. Introduction to the German Socio-Economic Panel Study (SOEP) – Practice, Problems and Analytical Potentials of Longitudinal Household Surveys

Session Organizers: Marco Giesselmann, German Institute for Economic Research

Juergen Schupp, German Institute for Economic Research

Leader: Marco Giesselmann, German Institute for Economic Research

This Workshop responds to the raising relevance of longitudinal data in empirical sociological practice. This relevance largely stems from ongoing debates on causality and the increasing interest in empirical life-course approaches. The workshop is directed at researchers, who currently carry out studies with longitudinal data, are planning to do so, or are involved in methodological discourses. Thereby, the workshop focusses on one of the most important and longest running household panel surveys; the German Socio-Economic Panel Study (SOEP). The workshop starts with an introduction into the SOEP. The main focus here is on the content, structure, organization and documentation of the data. In the second, major part of the workshop, we want to discuss with some invited experts and the auditorium about the current empirical practice of household panel data and recent methodological developments. Concretely, we will discuss - how data from socio-economic household panels is actually (re-)used in sociological practice. - what we can and cannot do in the context of international comparisons on the basis of existing and similar, country-specific household panels (like the SOEP, PSID, HILDA and Understanding Society). - how the usage and methods of panel data can be motivated and taught to students.

447. Teaching Workshop. A Little Sex: Teaching about Sexualities Across the Curriculum

Session Organizer: Rebecca F. Plante, Ithaca College

Leader: Rebecca F. Plante, Ithaca College

Co-Leader: Cedrick-Michael Simmons, Boston College

This workshop addresses how to teach about sexualities beyond the 'Sociology of Sexuality' class. Such courses fill with students keen to learn a lot about sexualities. But nonspecialists may wonder how to incorporate sexualities modules or units into other courses (e.g., introductory sociology; family; social psychology; research methods; media; culture; youth cultures; social movements). Current, relevant issues abound, such as hooking up ("casual" sex), online pornography, and sexting. Media courses could include global ads using sex to sell, or a module on sexting, technology, and consent. Introductory courses could include a module on hooking up, heterosexuality, and gender. This workshop will enable participants to include current sociologically relevant sexualities topics in ways that expand students' sociological imaginations. Participants will: (1) receive resources and links for teaching about sexualities; (2) learn specific techniques for discussing sexualities in nonsexualities courses; (3) discuss content, techniques, and approaches; (4) gather and share creative ideas about which kinds of topics are most applicable for which kinds of courses. For example, sexuality content/modules in a research methods course would differ from those in a media course. The intended audience is professors at all levels who wish to learn more about how to include sexualities in other sociology courses.

Session Organizer: Paula England, New York University

Presider: Paula England, New York University

Panelists: Elizabeth Bruch, University of Michigan

Jennifer Hickes Lundquist, University of Massachusetts-Amherst

Michael J. Rosenfeld, Stanford University

Using internet dating sites to find partners is now completely mainstream. Panelists will consider the sociology of how this system works. Two panelists will use their access to data from internet dating sites revealing what groups are on the site and who contacts and responds to whom. One panelist will show how race affects who is contacted or responded to among those seeking same-sex or other-sex partners. Another panelist will use new methods to uncover what people are looking for in partners, and how market constraints shape people's search and contact strategies. Another panelist will report on a survey ascertaining which groups are more likely to have used the internet to find partners, and will put internet dating into a broader historical perspective focusing on macrosocial trends affecting mate choice and family formation.
