Section IV: Selected Bibliography

Selected Bibliography

The following references are provided to offer a starting place for users of this Teaching Resource Guide who want to review relevant literature on service-learning. These references are only a small sampling of the voluminous literature that deals with various aspects of community service and education. For the most part, these references have been chosen because they deal with college students, service-learning as a pedagogic method in liberal education, or discuss fundamental issues raised by using service-learning in teaching.

______. (1994c). Mapping the geography of service on a college campus: Strategic questions about the institution, stakeholders, philosophies and community relationships. Providence, RI: Campus Compact.
