Celebrating 30 Years of Research on Aging and the Life Course

Since we met just last August in New York, economic change, international disputes, and political events have affected our personal lives, our communities, our country and the world. Sociologists have a critical role to play in how we come to understand these events and how they affect individual lives, but also in shaping the policy debates that emerge from them. We know that these broader events affect experiences of aging in so many ways, from retirement decisions impacted by economic change & the erosion of pension benefits to spiraling health care costs that threaten health across the life course. As scholars of aging and the life course, we also know that recent events have the potential to influence the political attitudes, economic decisions and health of each birth cohort for years to come. This year’s ASA meeting in San Francisco (August 8-11) provides a forum for collective discussion and hearing new findings that inform these broader issues. And as always, the meeting will be a wonderful opportunity to reconnect with old friends, meet new ones and renew our intellectual energy.

This year also marks the 30th anniversary of the Section on Aging and the Life Course. We have a day and a half full of sessions to celebrate the intellectual diversity of our section. Our section day begins bright and early on August 9 at 8:30 with a session on “Methodological Innovations in Life Course Research,” followed by research groups and roundtables at 10:30-12:10, and then a 12:30-2:10 session “30 Years of Research on Aging and the Life Course.” Please be sure to join us at 2:30 for the Matilda White Riley Distinguished Scholar Lecture given by Angela O’Rand, followed by a reception and our section’s business meeting and presentation of this year’s awards. We also have two sessions co-sponsored with the Section on Children and Youth. The first is on Sunday 12:30-2:10, “Transition to Adulthood: The Importance of Health” and the second is on Monday, August 10, 10:30-12:10, “Early Life Predictors of Health Through the Life Course.” Section members may also be interested in a thematic session organized by the ASA on “Cumulative Advantage in Life Course Perspective” scheduled for Monday 4:30-6:10.

Plan to join us for our annual mentoring dinner, which will be held on Saturday night, August 8, 6-8 p.m. at Johnny Foley’s Irish House, 243 O’Farrell Street, which is a half block from the San Francisco Hilton. As chair of the mentoring committee, David Ekerdt has arranged for us to have a wonderful buffet dinner and drinks. A panel comprised of the many journal editors in our section will run a brief and informal Q&A session on “I’ll publish your paper if...” Details on ticket prices and ordering are given on page 7, so be sure to mark your calendars for this event. This is also a wonderful opportunity to introduce your students to the section by treating them with a dinner ticket to the event and introducing them to some of your colleagues.

We look forward to seeing you at ASA in San Francisco!

New Journal Publishes First Issue

Longview, an independent, London-based, think-tank that fosters longitudinal research and life course study, has published the first issue of a journal devoted exclusively to longitudinal and life course study treated as a field of study in its own right. Longitudinal and Life Course Studies: International Journal aims to reduce interdisciplinary barriers and encourage the application of life course and longitudinal research findings in policy and practice. The journal aspires to internationally interest academics and policy makers working at the interface of social, developmental and health sciences, including sociology, psychology, education, epidemiology, economics, political science, demography, genetics, geography, criminology, policy studies, history and statistics. Its audience will also include those concerned with all types of methodological development of relevance to life course and longitudinal research. For free access to the journal’s content, visit http://www.journal.longviewuk.com/index.php/llcs.

Call for Papers to Honor Longino

The Journal of Aging and Health plans to publish a special issue in 2010 dedicated to Charles Longino in recognition of his many contributions to gerontology. Dr. Longino died on Christmas day, 2008. The theme reflects Longino’s scholarly contributions related to migration in late life. Empirical manuscripts are being solicited in the areas of retirement migration and health (health care) in the US and elsewhere, immigration and health in late life, health care issues of older immigrants and related topics. Manuscripts are due on or before September 1, 2009. Make submissions electronically via Manuscript Central http://mc.manuscriptcentral.com/jah. Any questions regarding potential submissions should be addressed to the Guest Editor, Peter Uhlenberg, uhlen@email.unc.edu.

Immigration in an Aging Society

“Immigration in an Aging Society” is the Winter 2008-2009 issue of Generations, the journal of the American Society on Aging. Edited by Judith Treas (UC-Irvine) and Fernando Torres-Gil (UCLA), it provides a long overdue look at the neglected intersection of America’s most important demographic developments, aging and immigration. The issue examines U.S. reliance on immigrant health care workers, the family lives of older newcomers, and the baby boom’s stake in immigration reform. For the table of contents and to order single issues, visit http://www.asaging.org/generations/gen32-4/home.cfm.

Personal Relationships in Late Life

The Journal of Social and Personal Relationships is planning a special issue on personal relationships in late life. Manuscripts representing scholarship from a variety of disciplines are welcome. Research can reflect a variety of methods (e.g., longitudinal representative samples, qualitative designs, social, group, or cross-national comparisons) or a combination of methods. Theoretical work, reviews, and meta-analyses are also welcome. Authors can begin the submission process at http://mc.manuscriptcentral.com/jspr. Authors should indicate that this manuscript is a candidate for the special issue on relationships in late life. The deadline for submissions is October 1, 2009. Inquiries about potential submissions can be addressed to the issue’s guest editor, Pearl Dykstra, at dykstra@nidi.nl.

Book Raffle Committee Needs Your Help!

The 2009 Book Raffle Committee is soliciting book donations. Publishers are increasingly unwilling to donate books. If you have a recent (or not so recent!) book that you have written or co-authored and have a spare copy, it would be wonderful if you could donate it for the raffle. Please contact Pam Herd (pherd@lafollette.wisc.edu) if you can make a donation.

SALC Members’ New Books

Section on Aging and the Life Course
Mentoring Dinner and Program

Saturday, August 8, 2009
6 to 8 p.m.
Johnny Foley’s Irish House
243 O’Farrell St., San Francisco
(one block from the San Francisco Hilton)

Tickets are $10 for ASA student members, $25 for ASA regular members and guests. Tickets include dinner and drinks.

There will be a short program entitled, “I’ll Publish Your Paper If...”. The Q&A session will feature remarks by section members who are journal editors. Invited editors include: Francesco Billari – Advances in Life Course Research; Jaber Gubrium – Journal of Aging Studies; Kenneth Ferraro – Journal of Gerontology: Social Sciences; Kyriakos Markides – Journal of Aging and Health; Angela O’Rand – Research on Aging; and Eliza Pavalko – Journal of Health and Social Behavior.

SPACE IS LIMITED, SO YOU MUST RESERVE A TICKET BY AUGUST 3. To reserve a ticket, e-mail David Ekerdt, dekerdt@ku.edu, requesting the number and kind of tickets. Tickets will be held for you at the door.

To pay for your ticket(s), send a check or pay at the door at ASA. Make checks out to “SALC American Sociological Association” and mail to David Ekerdt, KU Gerontology Center, 1000 Sunnyside Ave., Room 3090, Lawrence, KS 66045-7561.

Be sure to make a reservation by August 3.

Please make your reservation to join us for the mentoring dinner by August 3.
Spotlight on Aging Research: Report Shows Unprecedented Unemployment Rates among Older Workers

The Urban Institute published a report by Richard W. Johnson and Corina Mommaerts showing that 6.8% of adults age 65 and older were out of work and actively seeking employment in February 2009. This unemployment rate was the highest level recorded since 1948 when the federal government began collecting reliable statistics on joblessness. More than twice as many older adults were unemployed in Feb. 2009 than when the recession began in Nov. 2007. Another 1.3 million adults age 55 to 64 were jobless.

According to Johnson and Mommaerts, unemployment rates have increased across most social groups as the recession deepens. However, senior unemployment rates have particularly surged among those who did not complete high school, African Americans, Hispanics, and those in manufacturing, construction, hospitality and leisure industries. As the slumping stock market erodes retirement accounts, fewer workers can afford to retire. For the full report, see http://www.urban.org/publications/411846.html.
