PUBLICATIONS

A systematic organization of knowledge about people at work in commerce and industry, and a new "Landis and Landis" with the most recent research materials

THE WORLD OF WORK:
Industrial Society and Human Relations
by ROBERT DUBIN, Univ. of Oregon

This new and unusual book probes deep into the framework of modern management and the characteristics of human behavior. The author's penetrating analyses explain the "whys" of managerial behavior and realistic managerial decisions. The problems of working people and their actual working behavior are interpreted to reveal the human consequences of, and the reasons for, such managerial techniques as motion study, job analysis, production planning, financial and non-financial incentives. A wide range of research is integrated with occupational mobility, the meaning of work, and personal working careers to give you a revealing study of why people act as they do in a work situation.

Power, authority, and status are the fundamental human relations around which work organizations are developed. These relations are analyzed from the standpoint of managing people and their responses. Detailed treatment of institutional foundations, the labor force in its social context, the competing roles of management and labor leaders, and of industrial relations and social welfare emphasize the continuous links between industry and society.

BUILDING A SUCCESSFUL MARRIAGE, 3rd Ed.
by JUDSON T. LANDIS, Univ. of California and MARY G. LANDIS

Dominating the field for the last ten years, "Landis and Landis" has been the popular reference with college students ever since the first edition appeared. Its positive approach, accuracy and research, skill in writing, good taste and judgment have made it the leader in its field. The 1958 Third Edition incorporates the latest research, increases the use of case histories and adds 5 new chapters to help ensure this leadership.

This book assumes that it is within the power of most people to build good marriages if they are adequately prepared. It speaks directly to the student in terms of his own experience and understanding, providing a firm base in scientific research to inspire confidence. NEW and pertinent illustrations and completely new format in the 1958 edition should also appeal to the student.

This edition adds a special section on military service and marriage, recognizing the increasing prevalence of mixed-nationality marriages; gives fuller coverage to re-marriage after divorce. It considers the roles in light of post-war development—as they will be lived by today's college generation.

Keesing: Cultural Anthropology

A new problem approach emphasizes the broad significance of anthropology in this new basic text by Felix M. Keesing of Stanford Univ.

The result of long teaching experience and class testing, this important new text makes clear to the student the contributions of anthropology to the understanding of human behavior as a whole. Maintaining good balance between factual data and theory, it shows how anthropology deals with such questions as biological heritage, cultural geography, and social organization, control, and change. 477 pp. $6.00

Clemmer: The Prison Community

This reissue makes again available the book considered "a sociological document of first importance," "a classic in its field," "a genuine contribution to penology and criminological and sociological theory." The only life-sized portrait of the prison community, it provides important material for courses in social deviant, social problems, criminology and all related subjects. 364 pp. $3.00 (probable)

Frederic S. Cushing
Assistant Director, College Department looks forward to showing you these and other new texts at the RINEHART exhibit during your meetings. He will also want to discuss with you your textbook needs and give you the opportunity to look over many recent and standard Rinehart texts including the especially well liked:

Clinard: Sociology of Deviant Behavior

Called "one of the best books on the subject." Contains a wealth of splendidly organized information for courses on social problems. 599 pp. $6.50

Kahl: The American Class Structure

This clear, comprehensive presentation of the sociological studies on social class is especially notable for the author's own contributions to the understanding of basic concepts. 310 pp. $4.50
