MODERN SOCIETY
2nd Edition
by JOHN BIESANZ, Wayne State University, and MAVIS BIESANZ

More than a sociology book, this new second edition examines modern society from a wide and inclusive point of view. Insights developed from psychology, history, sociology, economics, and political science give clear and direct answers to such questions as “What forces shape modern society?” “What are the foundations upon which society rests?” and “What systems of beliefs sustain society?”

The complete revision and up-dating of this new edition is typified by the addition of two entirely new chapters: The Farmer and State and Local Government. Other chapters completely rewritten include: Religion as a Social Institution; Education; Laissez Faire; The Mixed Economy, Socialism; and Prosperity Without Inflation.

Topics given thorough coverage include: the delicate balance of freedom and control between individuals, groups, and nations; the meanings and methods of popular control of government; the struggle for the maintenance of our civil liberties; the implications of the shift from rural to urban living.

740 pp. Pub. 1959 Text price $7.95

NEW HORIZONS IN CRIMINOLOGY
3rd Edition
by HARRY ELMER BARNES, Sociologist and Social Historian, and NEGLEY K. TEETERS, Temple University

Thoroughly scientific in its approach, yet compelling in human interest, this classic in the field of criminology and corrections makes clear and understandable a subject that has for centuries been infinitely complex.

Like its popular predecessors, this edition places needed emphasis on training in the field of corrections, law enforcement, crime prevention, and criminology. New developments in prison programming and in probation and parole philosophy are thoroughly discussed.

In a lively, informative manner, the book presents the latest material and statistics to shed new light on such contemporary topics as the part played by group therapy and counseling in modern penology, and the extent of crime in the United States compared to that in other lands.
