Ezion Elected ASA President; Cook is Vice President

Amitai Ezioni, Professor, George Washington University, has been elected the 86th President of the ASA. Ezioni will assume office in August 1993, following a year's service as President-elect.

Karen S. Cook, Professor of Sociology, Department Chair, and Director, Center for Studies in Social Psychology, University of Washington, has been elected Vice President.

The four newly elected Council members-at-large are Margaret L. Anderson, Sara McLanahan, Alejandro Portes, and Patricia A. Roos. Arne Kalleberg and Ronnie J. Steinberg were re-elected to the Committee on Publications.

In accord with the election districts adopted in 1989, eight (rather than six) new members were elected to the Committee on Nominations and the Committee on Committees.

The total number of ballots cast was 3,842, representing 36.6 percent of the 10,080 members eligible to vote on April 6. Following Council policy adopted in January 1989, vote totals per candidate are not published.

Election results follow:

Torrecilha to Lead Minority Affairs Program

by Carla B. Hawery, ASA Deputy Executive Officer

Ramon Torrecilha, University of California-Irvine, will join the ASA as a staff sociologist with special responsibilities for the Minority Affairs Program, beginning September 7. Torrecilha will shepherd the existing funded programs, the longstanding Minority Fellowship Program, and the newer Minority Opportunity Summer Training (MOST) Program, and develop other program elements to minimize equity and enhance diversity within the profession.

With a PhD in Sociology and Demography from the University of Wisconsin-Madison, Torrecilha comes with skills to apply to ASA's new Research on the Profession program. He will assist in the preparation of biennial surveys of departments and of a sample of members, and work on in-house data analysis of those surveys. Like other ASA staff sociologists, he will serve as liaison for several ASA committees and will work as an active contributor to Footnotes.

From the Executive Office...

ASA Survey to be Mailed in September

In the fall, you may be one of the lucky members who will be selected to respond to a survey from the ASA's Research on the Profession Program. The survey, to be sent to a 5,000 sample of the membership, asks about professional activities and career history. Please complete and return the instrument as soon as possible. We count on sociologists for a high response rate.

ASA's New Computer System

For the past three months and the next three months, the ASA Executive Office is replacing an outdated Burroughs computer system with a modern minicomputer system. The new computer will use software called NIMH, designed for associations and currently used by the American Political Science Association. We appreciate your patience as we bring this new system to life, one shell, and expect large data sets to the new system.

Sociology Grad Student Jailed; Scholars' Privilege under Attack

As August FOOTNOTEs goes to press and I prepare my column prior to the 1993 annual meeting, I am shocked to report that Rik Scarce, a doctoral student in sociology at Washington State University, remains incarcerated under a charge of contempt of court. He was jailed on May 14, 1993 after a request by the late U.S. attorney for the District Court for the Eastern District of Washington. After two months, Mr. Scarce remains an inmate in the Spokane jail.

The facts surrounding this case were initially reported in "The Open Window" column in the May 1993 issue of FOOTNOTEs.

Spivack Program Sponsors AIDS Briefing

By Paula Tribbick, ASA Special Spivack Assistant

AIDS Workshop

In an effort to increase awareness of the social dimensions of AIDS in the U.S. Congress, Spivack was told more than 20 Capitol Hill members and representatives of relevant organizations at a briefing held by the American Sociological Association on May 3. The briefing was planned and coordinated by the ASA's Sydney S. Spivack Program for Applied Social Research and Social Policy.

Gary L. Alsup, Professor in the School of Public Affairs at Illinois at Chicago, lead the discussion with a briefing paper commissioned by ASA. Alsup was joined by Karen J. Petersen, Associate for Quality Assurance in the Office of HIV/AIDS Education at the American Red Cross National Headquarters, and Edward O. Laimann, Provost and George Herbert Mead Distinguished Service Professor in the Department of Sociology and the College at the University of Chicago.

Panelists emphasized that policymakers need to broaden their definition of the AIDS problem (linking financial costs with social costs) and its implications on communities and society. Alsup began the discussion by effectively outlining the social costs of HIV/AIDS to the labor force, to caregiving, to people with AIDS, and to the friends and families of people with AIDS.

AIDS also describe the importance of sociological research in developing strategies for managing the HIV/AIDS epidemic. He told Congressional staff that successful intervention strategies depend on changing the behavior of groups of people, while effective treatment programs require detailed knowledge of the social worlds of people with AIDS.

"Because the HIV virus is transmitted through social activities, prevention and intervention efforts should be aimed at groups of people, not just individuals," Alsup said.

"Targeted groups include sexually active couples, drug injectors, and health care workers and their patients."

While Alsup focused on the use of sociological data to understand the AIDS crisis, Edward Laimann discussed how sociological research about sexual behavior leads to a better understanding of a host of problems. He talked about how the knowledge gained from identifying factors for HIV/AIDS can be useful in targeting prevention programs for social groups at risk for other sexually transmitted diseases and teenage pregnancy.

When asked by a Congressional staff member whether AIDS needs to be seen as a "biomedical epidemic" before it will receive attention by the general public and Congress as a "social epidemic," Laimann stressed the importance of understanding and conveying this issue as symptomatic of larger social issues of society. "The severe cost of sexually transmitted diseases, infertility, and teenage pregnancy has to be paid attention to, not just the problem of HIV/AIDS. It is a similar situation to the way the HIV/AIDS epidemic will have a major impact on the social issues that are at stake for AIDS because they do not identify with people commonly labeled as having a high risk for HIV/AIDS," Laimann said.

The workshop provided the discussion by talking about the social and cultural contributors to sociological research can make to HIV education. Research indicates that even people who engage in high-risk behavior may not see themselves as at risk for AIDS because they do not identify with people commonly labeled as having a high risk for HIV/AIDS.

"The workshop focused on describing the dimensions of the violence problem and social factors important to considering its causation and consequences. Key to the meeting was to identify salient research needs and opportunities. Drugs and violence, social class and stratification, organized responses to violence, and the impact of the threat of violence on individuals and communities were among the topics receiving attention and exchange. Meeting participants underscored the importance of expanding resources for research at the social-level of analysis in order to understand how families, gender, race, local market opportunities, and communities are related to violence. We need to understand more about youth gangs at school and its connection to communities of families and community life and economic opportunity before we can prescribe solutions in control and prevent violence," said James Short, sociology professor and sexual violence researcher at Washington State University.

Mitch Edelson Directs ASA Administration and Finance

Mitch Edelson has joined the ASA staff as Director of Administration and Finance. This new position supports ASA's commitment to efficient management and best business practices. In his long list of responsibilities, Mitch oversees memberships and subscriptions, the business office, the mailroom, the management of the building, the secretariat and other full-function offices, and personnel issues.
ASA anticipates that this year’s Funding Opportunities Day (Saturday, August 14) will be more popular. The funds available and the way the funds will be allocated are currently being finalized by the ASA executive committee. The event is being held to help researchers secure funding for their projects.

In addition to a funding workshop, twenty representatives from both public and private funding organizations will be on hand during the afternoon poster session. This session provides an opportunity for conference attendees to learn about specific agency and program funding opportunities and review processes. Participating programs and organizations include:

- Agency for Health Care Policy and Research (AHCPR)
- ARC/CR serves as the Public Health Service’s research arm and is responsible for ensuring health care delivery and costs, and technology assessment.
- National Institute of Child Health & Human Development (NICHD)
- NICHD is a major source of NIH funds for the study of health and development related research. Its research focuses on factors influencing human development throughout the lifespan.
- Division of Research, National Institute on Aging (NIA/NIH)
- NIA/NIH supports a wide variety of projects in gerontology, including demographic research and training in aging, the interactions between age-related population and social issues, and the impact of society on the populations changing age composition.
- National Institute of Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism (NIAAA), Prevention Research Branch (NIAAA, PRB)
- NIAAA supports basic and applied research related to the causes, consequences, treatment, and prevention of alcohol-related problems. Research priorities include clinical and environmental determinants of drinking, safety, trauma, and alcohol-related problems; economic and social issues in the prevention and treatment of alcohol problems; and the prevention of alcohol-related problems in children, adolescents, and other at-risk populations.
- National Institute on Drug Abuse (NIDA)
- NIDA, one of the 16 NIH institutes, supports a wide range of research and training, and is a prominent source of funding in support of research on drug abuse, dependence, and addiction.
- National Institute of Mental Health (NIMH)
- NIMH supports and conducts research into clinical and statistical mental disorders, mental health services and service systems research; psychetchnic epidemiology; assessment and classification of mental disorders; and planning for mental health services and health care delivery.
- National Center for Health Statistics, Center for Disease Control (NCHS, CDC)
- NCHS is the Federal Government’s principal vital and health statistics agency. It monitors the health status of Americans and health services provided to them. NCHS also conducts national surveys and collects data through its National Health Interview Survey.
- Office of Research, Education and Labor (ORE), Division of Labor Statistics (DLS/ORE)
- ORE/ORE serves as the Public Health Service’s research arm and is responsible for ensuring health care delivery and costs, and technology assessment. NCHS is a major source of NIH funds for the study of health and development related research. Its research focuses on factors influencing human development throughout the lifespan.

Funding Opportunities Day is August 14

Division of Fellowships and Seminars
National Endowment for the Humanities
The fellowship and seminar support programs are designed to promote research and study and research undertaken by scholars at colleges and university and by independent scholars. The Endowment funds projects in the social sciences that are historical or philosophical, in approach and those focusing on the interpretation or criticism of U.S. history. The program promotes understanding of the human condition and of the economic growth and employment projections.

Council of Professional Associations on Federal Statistics (COPAFS)
COPAFS major role is to act as an advocate for the development and dissemination of high-quality federal statistics. Through COPAFS, members have an opportunity to review and have an impact on issues including the timeliness, quality, confidentiality, and relevance.

Association of Social Science Associations (ASSA)
The Association of Social Science Associations is an advocacy organization. Supported by more than 90 professional societies and academic and research institutions, ASSA acts as a bridge between researchers and policy makers representing the needs and interests of social and behavioral scientists, educating federal officials about social and behavioral science, informing the science community about relevant federal policies and cooperating with other science and education groups in pursuit of common goals.

Further information concerning details of the funding opportunities is available at our final program for sessions 72. Professional Workshop: Initiatives for New Investigators and the Funding Opportunity Directory; also see 204 Perspectives and Opportunities for Social Science Research, published, scheduled for Sunday, August 15.

Boycott of Miami with Gains for African-American Community

By Carl B. Honery, Deputy Executive Officer

A year ago a boycott of Miami area convention and tourist facilities ended in May, three months before the American Sociological Association’s Annual Meeting was scheduled to begin. The call to boycott came from the African-American community because of concerns about the arrest of two black men who were charged with being part of a group of people who had threatened to burn down the hotel. The boycott called for the community to spend its money elsewhere.

When Miami went into effect, people complained about the increased number of hotels and other businesses that seemed to be closed. Some people reported seeing the hotel closed as well as protesters outside their hotel. The NCLC’sWoman’s Day held a protest outside the hotel and was joined by a coalition of Miami unions.

The boycott intensified as local African-American leaders pointed out the discrepancies in African-American employment in the tourist industry. As a part of the boycott, the Miami business community agreed to lower the wages paid to minority businesses and to help support a Miami-organized hotel boycott. Boycott leader and local hotel manager, commented that the boycott was a way for the community to work together to help local businesses.

ASA President Seymour Martin Lipset and the Office of the Executive Officer (OE) have been working with Smith and other boycott leaders during the planning of the 1993 ASA meeting. They have worked closely to identify ways in which the ASA convention could be made more accessible to black community leaders. As part of the May issue of Footnotes, ASA will hold a special plenary session on Saturday, August 14 at noon to discuss the boycott. Speaker, Mr. Smith will be part of the panel.

NSF’s Sociology Program Encourages Submission of Grant Proposals

by William Sims Bainbridge and Martin K. Whyte, NSF Sociology Program Directors

We would like to encourage more sociologists to submit research grant proposals to the Sociology Program at the National Science Foundation. Some readers may have an image that NSF only supports a narrow range of research, all of a highly quantitative sort. The reality is quite different. Our recent awards cover a wide range of sub-fields and employ a variety of methodologies. For example, we are supporting a documentary and in-depth interviewing study of variations in science and technology policy among Western European nations; a study on the growth and spread of the Townsend movement in the U.S. in the 1990s; a longitudinal study of changing fashions in naming children; a documentary study of the forces that lead to the legislation to bail out the savings and loan industry, a project examining the temporal and geographic spread of which hunts in 16th and 17th century Europe, an intensive interviewing project designed to compare male working class cultures in France and America, a computer simulation and laboratory study of the impact of power differentials on exchanges, and a training workshop in qualitative and field methods. Recent awards add up to over $2 million in a number of other ways.

We are funding quite a few international projects, and particularly several studies of the changes underway in Eastern Europe and the former Soviet Union. A number of sociologists with projects which have a global or historical focus have been supported through the Humanities Dimensions of Global Change initiative, using funds allocated to our Program.

Of course, we continue to support more familiar types of sociological research as well, exemplified by our Program’s ongoing contributions to both the General Social Survey and the Panel Study of Income Dynamics. We plan to have a full list of the new grants made by the Sociology Program during the 1993 Fiscal Year ready to publish in the next issue of Footnotes.

We are eager to learn of new kinds of research sociologists are embarking on. We are particularly interested in encouraging projects that involve primary data collection, rather than simple secondary analysis of data collected by others. We hope that individuals will seek us out at the ASA meeting in Miami and ask questions about the Program and the nature of our review process. Also, we’re interested in proposals on projects that address our research priorities.

The next deadlines for regular research proposals are August 15, 1993, and January 15, 1994; sometimes flexibility of a few days before these dates is possible with advance notice. Applications for Doctoral Dissertation Improvement Grants are due October 15, 1993. NSF has a long number of special award programs as well.

Angel to Edit Journal of Health and Social Behavior

By Norman D. Gleim, University of Texas-Austin

Ronald J. Angel (Spanish pronunciation), professor of sociology at the University of Texas at Austin, is the new editor of the Journal of Health and Social Behavior, beginning with Volume 30, Number 3, forthcoming this fall. Angel received his B.A. in English from the University of Illinois at Urbana and spent a year of graduate study at the University of New Mexico before entering the Ph.D. program in Sociology at the University of Wisconsin, from which he received his doctorate in 1981. Angel spent two years as a post-doctoral fellow in the Rutgers-Pinckney Program in Mental Health Research directed by David Mechanic before becoming a faculty member in the Sociology Department at Rutgers. In 1990 he moved to the University of Texas at Austin, where he is affiliated with both the Sociology Department and the Population Research Center.

Angel has a relatively short career as a sociologist. He has been characterized by extraordinary productivity, including articles in all of the "big three" general sociological journals, numerous articles in the Journal of Health and Social Behavior, numerous articles in other leading social science journals, and, most recently, a book: Health and the New Generations of Fathers-Families, co-authored with Jacqueline L. Angel, University of Wisconsin, (Prentice Hall on the life course).

Ron has worked extensively on the con- comitants of the measurement of health status, which has already guided and informed the work of many other researchers, even though much of it was not published until the late 1980s. Especially important is his 1988 ASR paper with William Griffee (The Use of Subjective Information in Statistical Models) using structural equation modeling techniques to control for both background and subjective reports of health status. This paper, along with related work, indicates that reports of subjective feelings are not comparable across ethnic categories. This article, among others, demonstrates Ron's ability to combine theoretical sophistication with technical virtuosity in addressing issues of great practical importance.

Angel's substantive contributions are far-ranging, but all relate in some way to cultural and social structural influences on health, health-related behaviors, and self-perceptions of health status. For instance, he has studied the impact of marital status and employment on health status for African American, Hispanic American, and all Americans. He has also examined the historical and cultural factors that affect the impact of health status on mortality. The effects of social status on health have been studied in detail. In addition, he has examined the impact of cultural factors on the development of health-related behaviors. The impact of social factors on the development of health-related behaviors has been examined in detail. The impact of social factors on the development of health-related behaviors has been examined in detail.

Angel is active in the profession at the national level, being a charter member of the Services Research Initial Review (SRR) at the National Institutes of Mental Health and a member of a Social Scientist Research Council committee on "Culture, Health, and Human Development," which examines issues of culture, social structure, and health around the world. He has been on the editorial boards of the Journal of Health and Social Behavior, Social Science and Medicine, and the Journal of Aging and Health. He has been the editor of the Journal of Health and Social Behavior, he will be peer reviewed and thoroughly guided work from all major methodological traditions. He will not look favorably upon unmechanical statistical analyses or ambiguous displays of technical expertise.

Angel is a team player who is focused on moving forward. He is not afraid to take risks and to contribute to the productivity of others when doing so. He also is an excellent at guiding the efforts of others in a collective endeavor. He is knowledgeable and effective in promoting a research agenda—along with his methodological pluralism, high standards, and balanced judgment—has served the JHSB.

Sociologists Testify in Congress

Wilson Lobbies for NSF Funding for SBE

COSSA President William J. Wilson, President of the Coalition of Professors of Social Sciences, testified before the House Appropriations Subcommittee on May 13th. In testimony, he expressed the concern that existing National Science Foundation (NSF) funding is insufficient to support the social sciences.

Wilson, a professor of sociology at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign, testified before the Subcommittee on May 13th. In testimony, he expressed the concern that existing National Science Foundation (NSF) funding is insufficient to support the social sciences.

Wilson testified that the social sciences are essential for understanding complex issues such as poverty, inequality, and the impact of globalization. He highlighted the importance of social science research in informing public policy decisions, emphasizing the need for increased funding to support social science research. Wilson urged the Subcommittee to recommend an increase in NSF funding, stating that the current level of funding is not sufficient to meet the demands of the social sciences. He emphasized the role of social science research in addressing contemporary challenges, including climate change, economic inequality, and social justice.

Levine presents an overview of research at OJP

A Southern Californian psychologist, Angel, has been named editor of the Journal of Health and Social Behavior, a leading journal in the field. Angel has a long history of research in health and social behavior, including his work on the relationship between social status and physical health. He has been a leading voice in the field, publishing numerous articles and books on the topic. His work has been influential in shaping the understanding of the role of social factors in health outcomes.

In his role as editor, Angel plans to continue to promote the field of health and social behavior, as well as to encourage new and emerging researchers to contribute to the field. He is particularly interested in promoting interdisciplinary research, as he believes that social, psychological, and biological factors all play a role in shaping health outcomes.

Angel will be succeeded by another prominent sociologist, who is expected to continue the high standards of the journal. The field of health and social behavior is expected to continue to grow in importance in the coming years, as the challenges facing our society become more complex and interdependent.

#1 for DOS and Windows
Rated "the best general purpose statistics program" for the PC by Software Digest, SYSTAT for DOS is now joined by SYSTAT for Windows.

This addition to the SYSTAT family takes full advantage of Windows, with pull-down menus, dialog boxes, scrollable windows, and the ease of use you expect in a Windows package. SYSTAT for Windows runs in standard and 386 enhanced modes and can take advantage of Windows enhanced memory management. No matter how large or complex your analysis is, you can use SYSTAT.

SYSTAT delivers a balance of power and simplicity. It lets you analyze and manipulate data with a comprehensive range of advanced statistical procedures, and present your results with stunning graphics.

Just point and click
SYSTAT is a full-featured Windows application. Just point and click. SYSTAT'S QuickSyn buttons give you simple, single-click shortcuts to common statistical analyses.

More statistics, from the basic to the most sophisticated A full range of univariate and multivariate statistics from t tests to multidimensional scaling. With a few clicks you can turn most statistics into graphs and perform:
- multiple regression with log linear modeling
- nonparametric statistics
- principal components and factor analysis
- cluster analysis
- time series
- nonlinear estimation
- correlation matrices
- means, effect, and dummy models
- post hoc tests

SYSTAT offers the most advanced multivariate general linear model available for Windows.

The most graphics
All other statistical or graphics package can produce all the scientific and technical graphs that SYSTAT can--mirrors in ease of use. Graphics capabilities include:
- histograms
- simple, stacked, and range bar graphs
- single and grouped box plots
- stem and leaf diagrams
- pie charts
- scatterplot matrices
- 3D data and function plots
- contour plots
- control charts
- maps with geographic projections
- Chernoff faces
- color complete color spectrum
- log and log-scale graphs
- confidence intervals and ellipses
- bar, quadratic, step, spline, boxplot, LOWESS, exponential, and log smoothing

A compatible family of products
Whenever you choose--SYSTAT for Windows, SYSTAT for DOS or both--you'll enjoy the most powerful statistical and scientific graphics software available for the PC.

A PRIMER FOR SOFT MODELING

R. Frank Falk & Nancy B. Miller

A Primer for Soft Modeling is a practical guide to latent variable path analysis. It is a system that can be used by most social and behavioral scientists, enabling path models to be analyzed with soft modeling techniques rejected by many popular-used computer programs.

Basic 'how-to's' of modeling are explained — how to configure research questions, prepare data, construct an EQS computer run, interpret results and present conclusions.

Section News

The Sociology of Emotions section will be organizing a national symposium at the 1994 ASA to contribute to a major in-round publication on the theme, "Defining Social Institutions with Emotions: An Exposition," which will take place at the 1994 ASA meetings in Los Angeles.

The topic for an American Sociological Association presidential address (see text in ASA, February 1992) as it was proposed in 1992, was recently made by the American Sociological Association presidential address. It was a presidential address given at the meeting of the American Sociological Association, Washington, D.C., April 1993. The session focused on the socialization of social institutions.

Tom Bontseite

Tom Bontseite was one of the most respected sociologists in the United States. His work focused on the socialization of social institutions and the study of socialization. He was a founding member of the American Sociological Association, and his work on the socialization of social institutions was influential in the development of the field.

THE NEW EMBARKING WILL BE READY
SEPTEMBER 1, 1993

One of ASA's flagship career publications, Embarking upon a Career with an Undergraduate Sociology Major, has recently been revised and updated with the help of the Committee on Employment, the Committee on Sociological Practice, and the Committee on Sociologists in Government.

This useful booklet outlines career search strategies for BA/BS recipients, provides an extensive list of possible job titles, and gives concrete tips on how to identify and articulate one's skills. The publication also includes ideas for crafting an effective resume and cover letter, conducting informational and job interviews, and networking.

BISCAYNE BAY EVENING CRUISE

The ASA Teaching Endowment Fund is again sponsoring a boat trip. Mark your calendars for Saturday, August 14, 8:30-12:00 midnight, after the Presidential Plenary and Honorary Reception. The boat will leave from the docks which are within walking distance from the Fontainebleau Hilton. Everyone must be on board by 8:45 p.m.

The cruise will feature a cash bar, a light buffet, music, dancing, people watching, and relaxation from the pace of a convention. You cannot dash off to your next obligation when you are out on a boat.

Please purchase your tickets in advance using the meeting registration form in the center of the Preliminary Program. Send $43 per ticket to the ASA with your preregistration or any time thereafter. However, tickets will be available at the meeting at the ticket desk.

Contribute to the Teaching Endowment Fund and have a wonderful—and cool—evening on Biscayne Bay, enjoying friends and the moon over Miami.

ASA Advantage

COFRAT and COPE

The ASA has two committees whose specific purpose is to safeguard your professional interests. The Committee on Freedom of Research and Teaching (COFRAT) was created by ASA Council to investigate alleged infringement of freedom to carry out teaching or research activities. This usually means interference or constraint imposed by an institution—one's employer, department, or university. Complaints of this nature should be directed to COFRAT via the Executive Office. COFRAT is empowered to make inquiry and conduct site visits if, appropriate, on behalf of the ASA.

The Committee on Professional Ethics (COPE) investigates formal complaints alleging that ASA members have violated the Association's Code of Ethics. To file a complaint, consult the Code and follow procedures as outlined. The deliberations of both committees are strictly confidential, as are initiating inquiries made to the Executive Office.

Membership in ASA benefits you!
