From the Chair

Have you ever gone to a reception—be it at the ASA or somewhere else—and felt out of place, knowing almost no one? It is socially awkward to say the least. If you are an outgoing person, you can use your charm and force of personality to meet people and overcome that initial awkwardness.

But we are not all like that. So in order to create some structure to help us meet each other, based on the ideas of our conference planning team and some of our members, we are going to try something a bit different at this year’s reception. It is an idea that won the day because it involves minimal change from what we already do.

At the reception, we will have preprinted badges. One group of badges will say “Socialize me, I’m new.” The other group of badges will say “Resocialize me, I’m a veteran.” We want to encourage the veterans to talk with at least one new person during the reception. We also hope people will expand their social circle and invite someone new to join their group for dinner after the reception. We shall consider this year’s reception a test case to see if it works in helping us better integrate with one another.

And why should we care about meeting each other? For the same reason we hold such meetings at all—our scholarship benefits immeasurably from being part of a network of scholars: We better learn about, and are able to access funding opportunities, we come up with ideas and projects we otherwise wouldn’t, and we can access each others’ expertise, to name a few advantages.

Our section day is Tuesday, August 11, but two of our sessions will be held the afternoon of Monday, August 10. Our section reception will be held on Monday, August 10 at 6:30 PM. Check the program for the exact location.

I am looking forward to our sessions, and to learning the state of the art of our field. See you soon.

Announcements

The Association of Religion Data Archives (www.thearda.com) invites ASA Religion Section members to submit their course syllabi and student project ideas for a new website feature that will facilitate the sharing of ideas and resources among instructors who teach in the area of religion. All submitted materials will be credited to their authors. If you would like to submit your materials please email it as a Word (.doc) file to arda@pop.psu.edu. In addition to your name, affiliation and email address, please provide a brief description of the syllabi or assignment.

Chet Bowie, Sr. Vice President and Director of Economics, Labor and Population Studies is pleased to announce that sociologist Christian Smith of the University of Notre Dame will add a supplemental module to the 2010 General Social Survey. The module is focused on religious identification, faith, volunteering, and charitable giving. The GSS is a national survey of American adults that has been conducted by NORC since 1972 with core support first from the Russell Sage Foundation, and subsequently from the National Science Foundation. It has received additional funding from other government agencies, universities, and private foundations over the years. Tom Smith is the Director of the General Social Survey and Natalie Suter is the Project Director.

From the Editor

It's already July, and before we know it, we'll be in San Francisco enjoying what promises to be a great conference. The Program Committee, Michael Emerson, Jen’nan Read, and Gerardo Marti, have done an excellent job of putting together what will certainly be interesting and engaging sessions, and I am looking forward to hearing the presentations.

I would like to take this opportunity to remind you that despite the current economic environment, there are still several research funding opportunities out there. In particular, for those who are interested in studying global Pentecostalism, there is still time to write and submit letters of intent for the Pentecostal and Charismatic Research Initiative, based at the Center for Religion and Civic Culture at USC (usc.edu/crcc/pcri) before the August 1, 2009 deadline.

Related to this initiative, I chose the photographs on this month’s masthead to represent in part, the history and reach of Pentecostalism, and its ability to adapt to different social, cultural and economic situations (and perhaps to encourage you to think about a potential research project on Pentecostalism). Looking at the photos from left to right, 1) The Bonnie Brae House, where William Seymour first held his prayer meetings that led ultimately to, 2) the Azusa Street Revivals, which spawned, among many other personalities and their institutions, 3) Aimee Semple McPherson and the Angelus Temple, as well as, 4) the many small Pentecostal congregations all around the world like this one, “Casa de Luz,” in Bahia de los Angeles, a small fishing village (600 population) in Baja California, Mexico.

Feel free to contact me with your comments, suggestions and contributions for the newsletter. The Fall issue will be out in October, and I’ll need your submissions by October 1.
