What exactly does the Chair of an ASA Section actually do? The first thing, and one of the most important, is to show up at the all the sessions and functions of the Section. As the incoming chair, I had no formal responsibilities at last year’s ASA meetings, but was available to be introduced by Chair Phil Kasinitz as the target for all future inquiries. I particularly enjoyed our reception at the Chicago meetings. This event, jointly sponsored by the journal Ethnic and Racial Studies, was held to honor ASA President (and Section member) Alejandro Portes. In addition to the pleasure of chatting with old friends, these occasions provide a very nice opportunity to meet many new members of the Section. I was really pleased when several people introduced themselves and expressed a willingness to become more active in Section activities. All were promptly taken up on their offers.

In the weeks following the ASA meetings, the chair faces a series of deadlines for the planning of next year’s meetings and other organizational matters. The most important task is to organize our Section’s sessions for the 2000 ASA meetings. The aim in organizing sessions is to try to have a catchy title that attracts interest, but one that is also general enough to accommodate the research interests of most of our members. We are very fortunate that Luin Goldring agreed to serve as the organizer for one session on “Comparative Studies of International Migration,” and that Luis Falcon agreed to organize another session on “Immigration and Ethnicity in the United States.” Audrey Singer will be organizing our Section Roundtables that have proven to be so popular at prior meetings. In the “Call for Papers for the ASA 2000 Meetings,” (recently mailed to all ASA members) you will be able to find the necessary information to submit a paper for one of these sessions and others on next year’s ASA program.

The chair also deals with frequent requests, reminders, and follow-up reminders from the ASA for names—the names of members serving on the Section’s committees: the nominations committee, the Thomas and Znaniecki Award committee, the Outstanding Student Paper Award committee, the Distinguished Career Award committee, and so on. Keeping track of messages from missed phone calls, email correspondence that went astray because of job changes or sabbaticals, and various ASA directives and guidelines was sometimes a losing battle. Fortunately, I was able to call upon help from Past-Chair Phil Kasinitz, Secretary-Treasurer Brendan Mullan, and Newsletter Editor Steve Gold. They were able to provide the correct information for the ASA machinery, more or less on schedule.

My other activity as chair is to muse on the juxtaposition of the accomplishments of the Section’s membership and our perennial struggle to keep our membership above the 300 minimum to keep our Section alive. In addition to Alejandro Portes, who has just completed his term as ASA president, our Section is represented in ASA leadership circles by president-elect Douglas Massey, and vice-president elect Richard Alba. As I scan the list of our Section members, I predict that there will be several more ASA presidents from our fairly small numbers. Clearly, our area of interest is attracting many of the most talented scholars in the discipline. Perhaps, this is why our sessions are so lively and well attended at the annual meetings.

How does this “success” square with our relatively small Section membership? As my predecessors have done in prior years, I am expecting to gear up a membership drive next summer, including (I am told) the likelihood of paying the membership dues of prospective graduate student recruits. My guess is that our small numbers reflect the reality that our area is primarily a research specialty rather than a teaching area in the discipline. We are drawn from many other areas, including race and ethnicity, demography, social psychology, urban ecology, and political sociology. This diversity of interests and backgrounds certainly contributes to our wide ranging and interesting sessions. But it also means that we are less likely to have a core constituency defined by those who teach courses in international migration and immigration on a regular basis. In a concerted effort to bring up Section membership, and to bring a bit of coherence to my jumbled life, I have decided to start teaching new courses this year on “Immigration and Ethnicity” and “International Migration.” I will let you know how it works out.

MINUTES TAKEN AT THE ANNUAL MEETING OF THE
ASA SECTION ON INTERNATIONAL MIGRATION –
TUESDAY AUGUST 10, 1999 IN CHICAGO AT 1:30 PM

Introductions
The annual meeting of the International Migration Section was brought to order at 1:35pm by Phil Kasinitz, Chair. Approximately 50 people were in attendance. The Chair welcomed the membership and thanked all those who had participated in the section’s sessions, which were well attended and interesting. The Chair especially welcomed the new incoming Chair (Charles Hirschman) and the new members of the section’s Council (Mehdi Bozorgmehr, Peggy Levitt) and Chair-Elect (Victor Nee).

Secretary-Treasurer Report
In his report the secretary-treasurer (Brendan Mullan) focused on four major themes: 1) the section’s current financial status, 2) preliminary budget for 2000, 3) Section membership, and 4) other issues.

Current Financial Status
The section remains within budget. We have just paid the production and distribution costs associated with the Spring Newsletter and miscellaneous costs associated with WWW home page maintenance and purchase of awards. Like many other sections, we were unable to underwrite the cost of a reception at the annual meetings in Chicago, but through the good efforts of Phil Kasinitz, we nevertheless did host a reception with generous support from Ethnic and Racial Studies. Options being considered to enable the holding of receptions at subsequent ASA meetings include combining with other sections and/or hosting the reception away from the official hotel conference site.

2000 Draft Budget
The 2000 draft budget will be finalized and submitted with our section’s annual report to ASA by 10/15/99. The major items of expenditure will be costs associated with the production and distribution of our bi-annual newsletter, ASA reception costs, and awards and miscellaneous costs.

Membership Issues
As of 9/30/98 our section membership totaled 283, a decrease from the 305 members reported on 9/30/97. A section membership of 300 is required by ASA. This is a serious issue and the secretary-treasurer exhorted all members present to lobby colleagues, students, and other relevant constituencies in a concerted attempt to get our membership back above the critical 300 level. (As of 9/30/1999 the section’s membership is above 300).

Other Issues
The secretary-treasurer specifically thanked Dr. Steve Gold for his truly outstanding work in producing what has been acknowledged as one of the best section newsletters of all sections. (Our newsletter World on the Move is now available on the WWW is easy to access HTML format). The secretary-treasurer sincerely thanked Tom Kuecker for his excellent work in creating, monitoring, and maintaining our WWW home page. At its annual meeting, the Section Council raised a number of suggestions to enhance the value and viability of the web site. These include threaded discussion groups, making related course syllabi available, and creating an extensive set of links to related sites. Working closely with the Newsletter Editor and Webmaster, the secretary-treasurer agreed to implement these changes.

Awards
The highlight of this year’s meeting was the presentation of our Thomas and Znaniecki Award and our Student Paper Award. Guillermino Jasso presented the Thomas and Znaniecki award to Min Zhou and Carl L. Bankston III for their book Growing up American: How Vietnamese Children Adapt to Life in the United States (New York : Russell Sage Foundation, 1998). Milton Vickerman presented the Student Paper Award to Irene Bloemraad (Harvard University) for her paper “A Macro-Institutional Approach to Immigrant Political Incorporation: Comparing the Naturalization Rates and Processes of Portuguese Immigrants in the U.S. and Canada.” A special honorable mention award went to Elizabeth Grieco (Florida State University) for her paper: “The Effects of Migration on the Establishment of Networks: Caste Disintegration and Reformation among the Indians of Fiji.” Respectfully Submitted by Brendan Mullan.

GROWING UP AMERICAN WINS THOMAS & ZNAaniecki Award
The Thomas and Znaniecki Distinguished Scholarship Award is given annually to the outstanding book or research monograph in the sociology of immigration published during the preceding two years. The Award given in August 1999 was for work published in calendar years 1997 and 1998. The winner was Growing up American: How Vietnamese Children Adapt to Life in the United States written by Min Zhou (UCLA) and Carl L. Bankston III (University of Southwestern Louisiana).
IRENE BLOEMRAAD WINS STUDENT PAPER AWARD

Milton Vickerman

The winner of the 1999 award for best paper written by a graduate student in the area of immigration goes to Irene Bloemraad for her paper, “A Macro-Institutional Approach to Immigrant Political Incorporation: Comparing the Naturalization Rates and Processes of Portuguese Immigrants in the U.S. and Canada.” Using a combination of quantitative and qualitative data, Ms. Bloemraad argues that though their study is neglected, institutional processes are the most powerful predictors of the rates at which immigrants will naturalize. The Canadian government actively aids immigrants in their quest to naturalize, while the American government does not. This leads to unintended consequences since Portuguese immigrants in America, lacking state support, compensate by engaging in intense self organization; while, in Canada, state support for naturalization leads to relatively little activity among immigrants and, consequently, fewer organizing and political skills. Ms. Bloemraad concludes that the macro-institutional context of immigration impacts immigrants more significantly than do factors peculiar to particular groups of immigrants.

Ms. Bloemraad is a graduate student in the Department of Sociology at Harvard.

Honorable mention goes to Elizabeth Grieco for her paper, “The Effects of Migration on the Establishment of Networks: Caste Disintegration and Reformation among the Indians of Fiji.” Using migration histories and ethnographic data, Ms. Grieco argues that the strength and density of network ties among immigrants, as well as the degree of cultural reformation among immigrants in receiving societies, depend on the auspices that originally established the community. By comparing Indian immigrants in different receiving societies, she shows that those who experienced free, non-labor migration have been able to recreate caste related behavior and caste consciousness in their new societies. In contrast, Indians who immigrated as indentured laborers have become “caste free,” because the auspices under which their immigration occurred militated against the continuation of caste related behavior.

Ms. Grieco is a doctoral student in the Department of Sociology at Florida State University, and her paper has been published in International Migration Review (Vol.32, No 3).

THOMAS AND ZNANIECKI AWARD TO BE GIVEN IN 2000 FOR OUTSTANDING BOOK

RESEARCH FELLOWSHIPS FOR 2000-2001

Religion and Immigration
The SSRC offers predoctoral and postdoctoral fellowships for research on the relationship of religion to the incorporation of immigrants into American life. The goal is to foster innovative research that will illuminate how immigrant and native-born religious beliefs, practices, identities, groups, and institutions affect patterns of immigrant settlement in the United States. Funding is available to scholars of diverse disciplinary specializations and applicants are encouraged, but not required, to adopt historical or transnational perspectives and to focus on religion as it affects immigrants’ participation in American civic life.

International Migration to the United States
The SSRC offers predoctoral and postdoctoral fellowships for research that will advance theoretical understandings of the origin, processes, and outcomes of immigrant and refugee settlement in the United States. Applicants are encouraged to develop the theoretical implications of their research by adopting comparative regional, group, and/or historical perspectives on a wide range of topics including, but not limited to the economic, political and socio-cultural transformation of the lives of both immigrants and native-born Americans.

ASA STUDENT FORUM

To: All Section Members. Hello! My name is Victor Thompson and I am the co-editor of the Student Forum newsletter, Studentlink, and would like to introduce the Student Forum to each of the Sections. The Student Forum was created by the ASA as a means of facilitating student involvement within the Association and as a way for students to come together and share their experiences, desires and troubles with the discipline. One of the goals we would like to accomplish is a more active involvement in ASA Sections in addition to the Association as a whole, and would like to begin this involvement by introducing ourselves to all of the ASA Sections. In addition, we would like to make ourselves available for any input regarding student participation in sections or the ASA and how we can become more involved in them. With a large proportion of ASA members being students we see ourselves as an integral part in the future of both the ASA and the discipline of sociology. A strong participation in the sections is just one of the ways we hope to facilitate the transition from student to sociologist. On behalf of the Student Forum and its Officers I would like to extend our help to each of the Sections and offer ourselves as a resource for reaching the student population of the ASA. So feel free to contact me at <vthompso@uiuc.edu> or Lisa Dobransky, co-editor, at <lmd4@rabbit.INS.CWRU.Edu> regarding the Student Forum or our newsletter, Studentlink, which can be accessed through the ASA home page at http://www.asanet.org. We look forward to your correspondence. ASA Student Forum Officers include: Patrick McGinty, (Chair); Lisa Geason, (Chair-Elect); Diane Bessel, Benjamin Bolger, Kate Clegg, Lisa Dobransky, Alex Gunz, Kevin Irwin, Emily Johnson, Alexandra Marin, Victor Thompson, (Student Advisory Board).

Miri Song HELPING OUT: CHILDREN’S LABOR IN ETHNIC BUSINESS. Temple University Press, 1999. The growing body of literature on ethnic businesses has emphasized the importance of small family-based businesses as a key form of immigrant adaptation. Although there have been numerous references to the importance of “family labor” as a key ethnic resource, few studies have examined the work roles and family dynamics entailed in various kinds of ethnic businesses. HELPING OUT addresses the centrality of children’s labor participation in such family enterprises. Discussing the case of Chinese families running take-out food shops in Britain, Miri Song examines the ways in which children contribute their labor and the context in which children come to understand and believe in “helping out” as part of a “family work contract.” Song explores the implications of these children’s labor participation for family relationships, cultural identity, and the future of the Chinese community in Britain. While doing so, she argues that the practical importance and the broader meanings of children’s work must be understood in the context of immigrant families’ experiences of migration and ethnic minority status in Western, white-majority societies.
