PROGRAM

Seventy-Third Annual Meeting

San Francisco Hilton • San Francisco • September 4-8, 1978

Theme: SOCIETAL GROWTH: PROCESSES AND IMPLICATIONS

The history of human kind is a record of the growth, convergence, conflict, and accommodation of social systems. The modern era is no exception. With greater frequency than in any previous period, growing systems impinge upon other growing systems, generating profound reverberations internally and externally in the community of nations.

The general rejection of 19th century evolutionism and theories of progress drew attention away from phenomena of cumulative change or societal growth. Yet, it is a fact that social systems do grow; that is, they increase in complexity, in energy consumed, in the number of people involved and in the territory covered. It is also true, of course, that growth has often been followed by stagnation and decline, though only to be resumed again in another time and place.

To promote a comprehensive view of cumulative social change, these sessions will attempt to examine a variety of structural shifts in complex systems and their components as features of the growth phenomenon, and to identify the ways in which structural alterations in turn influence the growth process. The society is adopted as the unit of analysis because of its inclusive nature and because it focuses attention on the space-time context in which cumulative change occurs.

PROGRAM NOTES

Plenary Sessions

Professor Amos H. Hawley's Presidential Address will be given on Monday evening at 8:30. Vice-President Alice S. Rossi will preside at this session and will introduce the Chairs of the Selection Committees for the presentation of the 1978 ASA Awards. Everett K. Wilson will introduce President Hawley, whose address will focus on the overall theme of the meeting, "Societal Growth: Processes and Implications".

Two additional Plenary Sessions are scheduled as follows:

Tuesday, September 5, 8:30 p.m. "Societal Growth: World Networks and International Politics" by Immanuel Wallerstein. Guy E. Swanson will preside with panel discussion by Kenneth Boulding, Henry Landsberger, and Jeffrey Paige.

Thursday, September 7, 8:30 p.m. "Societal Growth: The Limits to System Growth" by Kenneth Boulding. Albert J. Reiss will preside with panel discussion by Immanuel Wallerstein and Marshall W. Meyer.

Thematic Sessions

Fourteen special sessions have been organized on the theme "Societal Growth: Processes and Implications". These sessions will attempt to examine a variety of structural shifts in complex systems and their components as features of the growth phenomenon, and to identify the ways in which structural alterations in turn influence the growth process.

Didactic Seminars

Attendance at the Didactic Seminars is by paid reservation only and attendance at each is limited to 35. Those already enrolled should have received their tickets with their badges, but should check at the Seminar Desk in the East Lounge for any materials the presenters might have provided for distribution. Those who did not reserve in advance but wish to attend should check at the Seminar Desk for possible openings.

No one will be admitted without a paid reservation.

Some tickets are still available for some of the luncheons; the numbers are listed on a bulletin board at the Luncheon Ticket Desk in the East Lounge. Also listed are the luncheon numbers for which the presenters have left materials for distribution to the participants.

Persons who have confirmed reservations should have received their tickets along with their badges. If, however, your check and reservation request were received in the Executive Office too late for processing, a refund will be made at a later date. Please check at the Ticket Desk. Ticket sales will be closed one-half hour before luncheons begin each day.

Cancellations will not be accepted later than 48 hours prior to the scheduled luncheon. You may, however, sell your ticket to someone else if you are unable to attend.

Historically, there have been problems concerning admittance to the luncheon room. In fairness to members who have paid for their reservations, your cooperation with the personnel in charge is essential. No one will be admitted to the room without a valid ticket. Observers are not permitted. Waiters will not serve luncheon to anyone who is seated at the wrong table.

Informal Discussions

These informal discussions are designed to give individuals an opportunity to meet with colleagues with mutual research interests. Each topic has been assigned a numbered table, which seats ten persons. Seats are available on a first-come, first-served basis. No reservations are necessary.

The Informal Discussions are detailed under the following session numbers: Monday—9, 51; Tuesday—61, 100; Wednesday—111, 142; Thursday—180; Friday—186, 212.

If unfinished business at the close of this meeting warrants, the meeting will reconvene on Thursday at 8:30 a.m.

Committee Meetings

ASA Committees will hold regular meetings during the Annual Meeting. In addition, Council has instructed specific Standing Committees to hold open forums for the purpose of reporting to interested members on their current deliberations and future plans, and to receive from those members suggestions and critique of their performance. Check elsewhere in this program for the times and locations of the meetings open to all members.

SOCIAL STANDING IN AMERICA

New Dimensions of Class

Lee Rainwater & Richard Coleman

A major effort by two leading sociologists to reassess the social meaning of class in contemporary American society. In a unique combination of qualitative and quantitative approaches, Rainwater and Coleman supplement their own highly original status scales with sophisticated interview techniques that have enabled them to capture the many complexities of our social class system. The result is a rich, new portrait that no one concerned with the image and reality of our class system can ignore.

KARL MANNHEIM'S SOCIOLOGY OF KNOWLEDGE

A.P. SIMONDS, University of Massachusetts, Boston. This is a systematic reexamination of Mannheim's sociology of knowledge which argues, against most of his critics, that his enterprise must be construed as hermeneutic rather than reductionist in intent. Mannheim's arguments are considered both in the intellectual context of their development during the twenties, and in relation to some of the more important trends in contemporary philosophy of the social sciences. Although Mannheim's Ideology and Utopia has become a classic of twentieth century social thought, this is the first full-length examination of his sociology of knowledge to appear in English.

CHANGE IN BRITISH SOCIETY

A.H. HALSEY. Professor Halsey chronicles the changes that have taken place in British society since the last war. He examines changes in class and status, education, standard of living, and size of family, and the ways in which these have been affected by patterns of economic growth, liberal and Marxist political theories, tradition, and the power of the State. In addition, he identifies the ideals which dominate modern social thought.

URBAN PLANNING IN RICH AND POOR COUNTRIES

HUGH STRETTON. Hugh Stretton argues that the complexities of societies and their economic and political structures must be understood before a rational approach to urban planning can be made. He examines in detail the post-war urban development of capitalist and communist societies, rich and poor, pinpoints their successes and failures, and suggests a path for a more rational approach to planning in the future.

"If this book causes the reader to question her or his attitudes, behavior, or beliefs concerning sex roles, we may indeed move a little bit closer to a society where both men and women will be free to bring home the bacon and cook it."

So writes author Barbara Lusk Forisha (University of Michigan, Dearborn) in the preface to Sex Roles and Personal Awareness, a comprehensively informative text on gender roles.

The text is divided into four parts. Part I studies the differences between men and women and examines the origin of sex roles. Part II examines the visionary possibility of men and women assuming traits of both sexes and shows the impact that this may have on love and marriage. Part III studies sex roles as they presently exist; how most men and women are molded into sex roles and follow the scripts for these roles throughout their lives. It also examines love and marriage as they exist within traditional roles and studies the impact that social class and ethnic group have on love and marriage. Part IV explains how children are socialized into roles and the influence that parents have in this process. The book concludes with a look at the future — can we move beyond our sex roles and become fully human? Pedagogical aids include summaries, classroom exercises, and references at the end of each chapter, plus glossary and name and subject indexes at the back of the book. 414 pages, paper, $7.95, 1978.

This book is concerned with the recent emergence of a new alternative for conducting group communication processes among groups or networks of persons or organizations such as meetings, study groups, and teaching-learning exchanges. It uses computers and computer terminals to provide a written form of discussion or meeting among a group of people, and is most often called 'computerized conferencing'; 'computer mediated interaction'; and sometimes 'teleconferencing', although this latter term is also applied to T.V. conferencing.

Contents: Part I - THE NATURE OF COMPUTERIZED CONFERENCING. An Overview: Computerized Conferencing and Related Technologies. Development and Diversification of Computerized Conferencing. Social and Psychological Processes in Computerized Conferencing. Part II - POTENTIAL APPLICATIONS AND IMPACTS OF COMPUTERIZED CONFERENCING. Potential Impacts of Computerized Conferencing on Managerial and Staff Functions. Computer-Mediated Communications and the Disadvantaged. Public Use. Science and Technology. POLICE AND THE COMMUNITY:
An Analytic Perspective

By Robert S. Clark, Florida International University

Presenting police-community relations within a context broader than the level of police operations, this work reaches for fundamental issues involved in the most urgent problem of today: the relation of a society to its government. "This manuscript is by a considerable margin the best piece that I have seen in the police-community field. It will be the most analytical and theoretical book available, which should make it the prime text for baccalaureate and graduate programs."—William J. Mathias, Dean, Criminal Justice Program, University of South Carolina.

PRIVATE LIVES AND PUBLIC ACCOUNTS

By Thomas J. Cottle, Amherst College and Harvard University

A collection of conversations and observations which address important issues of social science methodology, including the use of personal divulgence balanced with the right to privacy, and the role of the "subjective" in social science. Dr. Cottle makes no attempt to mask his own involvement in the conversations and situations portrayed in the book. His innovative approach, which he calls "observant participation," allows him to be both friend and researcher to the people he interviews. The people represented in the book come from a wide range of social worlds: a handicapped child, a young psychiatrist, participants in a male consciousness-raising group, members of a town facing racial strife. "This is an excellent book . . . it is unique, I think, for works in this style in that one has portraits . . . of individuals in a number of different social settings."—Lee Rainwater, Harvard University

POST-AFFLUENT AMERICA: The Social Economy of the Future
By Gary Gappert, New Jersey Department of Education

In this investigation into social and economic trends of the future, the implications for life, work, and American institutions are examined. The book describes the evolution of occupations and outlines alternative social policies for the future. Post-Affluent America will be useful for courses in the sociology of the future, political economy, social change, and the sociology of work. "Post-Affluent America is a solid, searching, and substantive contribution to the debate on futures growth, work, values, equity, and social services."—Dr. Irving H. Buchen, Director, Division of the Future, Fairleigh Dickinson University

THE PREVENTION OF YOUTHFUL CRIME:

The Great Stumble Forward

James C. Hackler, Ph.D.,
Department of Sociology, University of Alberta,
Canada

This critical analysis of delinquency treatment and prevention programs will be a significant contribution to the field. Using an impressive amount of up-to-date Canadian data, the author discusses many different approaches to the complicated problem of preventing youthful crime.

The text offers an examination of two key aspects of the problem. The main theme of the first half of the book is the unanticipated harm often done by evaluating delinquency prevention programs. Attempts at evaluation lead to severe strains within the agencies involved in the programs, and may even render the programs less effective.

The second important theme deals with the community response to delinquency and the various practical, political and scientific issues affecting this response. No other Canadian book focusses on this subject.

The author argues that none of the delinquency programs reviewed seem particularly promising, but many contain elements that show modest improvements over past strategies. He contends that the foreseeable future will not produce any major break-throughs in delinquency prevention. Progress will come in occasional small stumbles forward. The book concludes with a number of concrete suggestions acknowledging that the most promising changes involve tradeoffs; gains are rarely made without the possibility of counterbalancing loss.

PHOTOGRAPHERS AT WORK: A SOCIOLOGY OF PHOTOGRAPHIC STYLES

Barbara Rosenblum

A new approach to the study of photographs and photographers which provides insight into the aesthetics of photographic art and the sociology of work. Rosenblum has worked with photographers in the fields of news, advertising and fine arts, exploring the relationship between mode of production and distribution and the shape of the final product. The division of labor, the level of technology, the media in which the art object is displayed, and the expectations evinced by colleagues and audience are essential aspects determining the way photographers work and the style they develop. Her study expands the horizons of sociological research into material culture.

*Stuart Hall, Chas Critcher, Tony Jefferson,
John Clarke and Brian Roberts*

HARPER PAPERBACKS

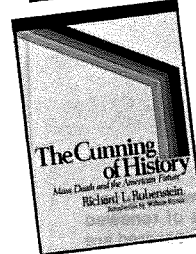

REVOLUTION

Joan Baechler Translated by Joan Vickers

"He has an analytical, systematic yet skeptical mind, though one not afraid (unlike our political philosophers) to range widely through history and historical and comparative sociology. He sees Les Phénomènes révolutionnaires (the French title conveys his meaning better than the English) as all the possible ways to challenging an established social order. Marxist definitions he sees as both narrow and as teleological."

—BERNARD CRICK, New Statesman

TB 1918 $5.95

THE CUNNING OF HISTORY

Mass Death and the American Future

Richard L. Rubenstein

"According to Rubenstein, the Nazi death camps were made possible by a culture 'indigenous to the West' that was the logical (though . . . 'unforeseen and unintended') product of the West's fundamental religious traditions . . . [Rubenstein finds] the whole of the Judeo-Christian tradition, with its emphasis on a desacralization of nature and its reliance on rationality leading inevitably to the depersonalizing bureaucratic practices of the modern state."

—America

CN 597 $2.95

THE NOTEBOOKS ON PRIMITIVE MENTALITY

Lucien Lévy-Bruhl Translated by Peter Rivière

"Lucien Lévy-Bruhl was not only a brilliant philosopher and most learned in anthropological lore but also an original thinker whose influence on scholars in many fields was both considerable and enduring."

—Times Literary Supplement

TB 1917 $5.95

FALSE CONSCIOUSNESS

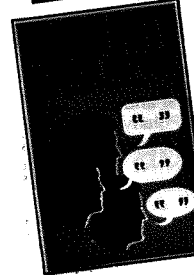

An Essay on Reification

Joseph Gabel Introduction by Kenneth A. Thompson

"Joseph Gabel's book . . . provides the most comprehensive analysis of the concept of false consciousness since Lukacs' History and Class Consciousness . . . In his exposition of this central theme, Gabel recognizes the problematic status of the concept of false consciousness, provides a more comprehensive account of the relationship between this concept and related concepts, and offers a number of valuable insights into the similar structure of consciousness of false consciousness at the level of groups and schizophrenia at the individual level."

—The Sociological Review

TB 1850 $4.95

COMMUNITY

A Critical Response

Joseph R. Gusfield

"A welcome summary of the concept of community. Gusfield places his analytic emphasis on the rational elements of community rather than the locational or geographic. This leads him to utilization of the concept as central to the development of sociological thinking, in particular the approach of Durkheim. Gusfield weaves a series of ideas around community: he draws on Weber and Marx; utilizes stratification theory, in particular Warner; touches on network analysis; the folk-urban continuum. The volume, despite its conceptual concerns, reads well."

Sexual Racism

The Emotional Barrier to an Integrated Society

CHARLES HERBERT STEMBER

"This book addresses an old and sensitive problem with a new and speculative theory developed on largely nonquantitative sources of information. It will doubtless anger almost everyone who reads it. It may also, if they can quiet their emotions, educate them . . . This book should be read by all those who dislike the conclusions, as well as by those who may expect to agree with the theory."

—Contemporary Psychology

"This is an important book, and one which took a lot of courage to write. At a time when many unpopular ideas in the social and behavioral sciences are scorned and their advocates denounced, Professor Stember has produced a piece of scholarship in an area where none but the orthodox have hitherto dared to tread."

TRANSACTION BOOKS PRESENTS . . .

Transaction Books is proud to announce a new series of social science classics: some neglected, others more talked about than read, and all out of print until now. These are not "samplers" of "great minds," but entire, uncut works. They provide an understanding of classic writings as prepared for publication by the masters of social science themselves. Each volume is graced with a new introductory essay, prepared especially for this series. Each essay is written by a recognized, leading expert in the history of social science, who is a scholar intimate with the topic addressed by the book. Transaction hopes that by making these works available in popular paperback editions, the current generation of scholars, students, and interested analysts will have easy access to the makers and shapers of modern social science. The first works to be issued in this series are:
