Course

1. Course. How to Analyze Quantitative Data on Race: Conceptual and Methodological Issues (3:00pm-5:30pm)

Atlanta Marriott Marquis, M304, Marquis Level

Ticket required for admission

Session Organizer and Leader: Tukufu Zuberi, University of Pennsylvania

Co-Leaders: Tyrone A. Forman, Emory University; Evelyn Joy Patterson, Pennsylvania State University; Quincy Thomas Stewart, Indiana University

Most research on race lacks a critical evaluation of racist structures that encourage pathological interpretations. These pathological interpretations have had a profound impact on our theories and methods. This course will focus on the methodological and conceptual issues in the study of race. We will focus on the quantitative analysis of social data. We propose an idea to produce a new approach in which we describe in detail the basic concepts we suggest be used in research of racial stratification.

2. Course. Modeling Emergence: Computer Simulation as a Theory-Building Tool (10:00am-5:30pm)

Atlanta Marriott Marquis, M101, Marquis Level

Ticket required for admission

Session Organizer and Leader: James A. Kitts, Columbia University

A wave of recent research in the top social science journals demonstrates the use of computer simulation to investigate dynamic models of social processes, as researchers use 'computational experiments' to elucidate, extend, integrate, and validate social theory. This session will provide an orientation to this research approach, first by surveying some models and applications and then by demonstrating some general principles of dynamic modeling. Participants will have opportunities to explore sample models and to try out their own modeling ideas, bring laptop computers (Windows, Mac, or Linux) to the seminar. No background in mathematics or computer programming is assumed, but the seminar will include required and recommended preparatory readings.

3. Course. Teaching Statistics (co-sponsored with Consortium for the Advancement of Undergraduate Statistics Education and Inter-university Consortium for Political and Social Research) (10:00am-5:30pm)

Atlanta Marriott Marquis, M303, Marquis Level

Ticket required for admission

Session Organizer and Leader: Roger Woodard, North Carolina State University

This interactive workshop will expose statistics instructors to principles that can improve an introductory statistics course. The workshop will be based on the Guidelines for Assessment and Instruction in Statistics Education (GAISE) that have been adopted by the American Statistical Association. This workshop will be participant centered and produce materials that they can use in their classes immediately. Topics discussed will include: Planning a conceptual course, fostering active learning and using technology in the classroom, finding and using real data and using assessment to improve learning. Students will be exposed to a variety of resources for finding examples and materials such as CAUSEweb.org and Inter-university Consortium for Political and Social Research (ICPSR).

Meetings

Orientation for 1st Year MFP Fellows (8:30am-4:30pm)—Atlanta Marriott Marquis, M109, Marquis Level

Section on Environment and Technology Planning Meeting (6:00-7:00pm)—Atlanta Marriott Marquis, L501, Lobby Level

Opening of the 105th Annual Meeting

7:00 pm Sessions

4. Opening Plenary Session. Where is the “Public” in the Public University? How Disinvestment in Higher Education Threatens Democratic Citizenship

Atlanta Marriott Marquis, Imperial Ballroom, Marquis Level

Session Organizer and Presider: Evelyn Nakano Glenn, University of California-Berkeley

The End of the University Funding Model: What Comes Next? Christopher Newfield, University of California-Santa Barbara

Collapsing Liberal Studies: The Demise of the Humanities, (Some) Social Sciences, and Fine Arts. Sheila Slaughter, University of Georgia

Spinning and Divesting Diversity: How the Corporate University Lauds Inclusion while Promoting Exclusion. Gaye Tuchman, University of Connecticut

Discussants: Clarence Y.H. Lo, University of Missouri-Columbia
Anthony M. Orum, University of Illinois-Chicago
Robert Perrucci, Purdue University
Alessandro Bonanno, Sam Houston State University
Victoria L. Johnson, University of Missouri-Columbia

This plenary brings together three eminent scholar critics of higher education. They examine the political and financial crises in universities and the acceleration of privatization and corporatization of the public university. They also turn critical gazes on the consequences of privatization and corporatization for inclusion and participation in educational institutions and explore how the very notions of democracy and substantive citizenship have thereby been impoverished.

9:00 pm Receptions

Welcome Reception (to 10:30pm)—Hilton Atlanta, Grand Ballroom C-D, Second Floor

All meeting registrants are invited to the Welcome Reception which follows the Opening Plenary Session on Friday evening, August 13, and celebrates the opening of the 105th Annual Meeting.

Saturday, August 14

The length of each daytime session/meeting activity is one hour and forty minutes, unless noted otherwise. The usual turnover is as follows:

8:30 am Sessions

5. Thematic Session. Cultural Citizenship: European Perspectives—CANCELLED

6. Thematic Session. Gendered Citizenship across Social Institutions

Hilton Atlanta, Grand Salon A, Second Floor

Session Organizer and Presider: Lynne Allison Haney, New York University

Panel: Lisa D. Brush, University of Pittsburgh

Kathrin Zippel, Northeastern University

Jill McCorkel, Villanova University

Ellen R. Reese, University of California-Riverside

The last decade has seen a shift in the gender politics of citizenship in the United States as public policies have increasingly narrowed the terms of women's inclusion into key social institutions and restricted their claims to social rights. This panel will examine the shifting boundaries of gender and citizenship. Panelists will address a series of questions: are there new convergences in how women are drawn into public policies and institutions? Are there any inconsistencies in the politics of disentanglement across institutions? Do women's actual claims end up mobilizing positive and negative ideas about liberal citizenship? Or is something different emerging, perhaps a form of post-liberal citizenship no longer linked to the categories of rights/needs and inclusion/exclusion? Panelists will discuss these questions across four social institutions: the welfare state, the penal system, the legal system, and labor rights/organizing.

7. Thematic Session. Health Care as a Right of Social Citizenship in the US

Hilton Atlanta, Grand Ballroom B, Second Floor

Session Organizer: Madonna Harrington Meyer, Syracuse University

Presider: Christine L. Himes, Syracuse University

The United States in Historical and Comparative Perspective. Mary Ruggie, Harvard University

In the Shadow of T.H. Marshall: Social Rights and Health Care for Minority Americans. Ronald J. Angel, University of Texas-Austin

How Business Interests Have Re-shaped Medicare. Pamela Herd, University of Wisconsin-Madison

In this session, three leading health scholars attend to one of the hottest debates in Washington DC: health care reform. They discuss the legacy of health care as a social right of citizenship in the US. The scholars explore historical and current ideological debates concerning health care as a social right of citizenship, the special race and ethnic considerations of health as a social right of citizenship in the US, and the feasibility of balancing the health interests of individuals within a capitalist market framework.

8. Thematic Session. Tensions of Post-Colonial Citizenship

Hilton Atlanta, Grand Ballroom A, Second Floor

Session Organizer: Gay W. Seidman, University of Wisconsin-Madison

What Lessons? Gender, Citizenship and Leadership in Post-Conflict African States. Oyeronke Oyewumi, State University of New York-Stony Brook

Tensions of National Identity in Post-colonial East Africa. Ronald R. Aminzade, University of Minnesota

Showing Citizenship: Museums and National Identities in South Africa and the US in the Post-conflict Era. Robyn Kimberley Autry, Wesleyan University

We Are All Migrant Labors: Citizenship, History, and North Korean Refugees. Hyun Ok Park, York University

Many post-colonial societies inherited borders imposed from outside, with a legacy of tensions over identity, citizenship, and borders. These papers will address different aspects of this legacy, looking at how these tensions play out in politics, culture, and policy debates.

9. Thematic Session. Toward a Sociology of Citizenship in East Asia: Inclusion, Participation, and Social Rights for Immigrants and Rural Migrants in China, Japan, Korea and Taiwan

Atlanta Marriott Marquis, Marquis Ballroom C, Marquis Level

Session Organizer: Keiko Yamanaka, University of California-Berkeley

Panel: Xiaojiang Hu, Beijing Normal University

Xiaomin Yu, Beijing Normal University

Keiko Yamanaka, University of California-Berkeley

Wen-hui Anna Tang and Hong-Zen Wang, National Sun Yat-sen University

10. Special Session. Markets as Social Imaginaries: Cultural Practice and Economic Action

Hilton Atlanta, Room 303, Third Floor

Session Organizer: Daniel Thomas Cook, State University of New Jersey-Rutgers

Presider: Johanna Pabst, Boston College

Figurations, Fabrications and Performances in and of Markets.

Daniel Thomas Cook, State University of New Jersey-Rutgers

Social Interaction as Market Device: The Re-personalization of Banking. Zsuzsanna Vargha, Max Planck Institute

The Culture and the Characters of the Market: Ethnographic and Historical Accounts of Interactional Dynamics. Frederick F. Wherry, University of Michigan

How to Read the Future: The Yield Curve, Affect, and Financial Prediction. Caitlin Zaloom, New York University

A long-standing truism in economic sociology is that markets are embedded in social life, but the presumption often remains that there is something essential about markets and market behavior that are prior to and untouched by social action. This session brings together scholars whose work address how markets themselves are fabricated through social action and discourse. Markets here are conceptualized as "social imaginaries," in the spirit of Benedict Anderson (Imagined Communities), that are forged as much through myth and language as they are through material production and exchange. Participants understand socially-imaginatively constructed markets as being "real" because, to paraphrase W.I. Thomas, they are real in their consequences.

11. Student Forum Professional Workshop. Student-Run Journals: A How-To Guide for Graduate and Undergraduate Students

Hilton Atlanta, Room 304, Third Floor

Session Organizers: Elyshia Aseltine and Megan Reid, University of Texas-Austin

Co-Leaders: Dena Tamara Smith and Kathryn Burrows, State University of New Jersey-Rutgers

Peter Ekman, University of California-Berkeley

Julie Ann Beicken, University of Texas-Austin

Louis Edgar Esparza, State University of New York-Stony Brook

Student run journals are an excellent way for both undergraduate and graduate students to become familiar with the publishing process, both as journal staff members and authors. In the workshop, we hope to discuss how to begin a student run journal, how to find funding for them, how to organize a journal's staff, and what the publishing process might be like.

12. Research and Policy Workshop. Ethical Issues in Research on Illegal Activities

Session Organizer and Leader: Virginia Adams O'Connell, Moravian College

In this workshop, we will review both the major ethical issues involving the study of illegal activities and the actions researchers can take to protect both themselves and their research subjects. We will discuss the challenges associated with defining some standard ethical code of conduct, especially as we move between different methodologies. For example, the codes we employ to guide our survey and interview work cannot always directly apply to visual and ethnographic methods. We will also review some cases where researchers and legal professionals have collided, with the participation of sociologists to talk about the particular challenges they have confronted on the front lines.

13. Teaching Workshop. Integrating Environmental Issues into the Sociology Curriculum

Session Organizer and Leader: Lisa A. Eargle, Francis Marion University

This workshop focuses on how environmental issues can be introduced into the Sociology curriculum. Workshop participants will be exposed to a variety of Internet websites (including those of the Environmental Protection Agency, Scorecard, Department of Energy, and the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration) and the types of information that is available on these sites. Demonstrations and discussions will take place on how this information can be used for course lectures and a variety of student assignments. Course materials (sample lectures and assignments) will be distributed.

14. Regular Session. Markets and Politics

Session Organizer: Yuval Millo, London School of Economics

How do sexual and social experiences, such as childhood sex play or divorce, at one point in a person's life affect their sexual beliefs and behaviors later on? How are sexual attitudes and practices transmitted (or not) across generations? How are individuals' sexual biographies shaped by broader cultural and historical changes, such as the sexual "revolution" of the late 1960s-early 1970s, or the continuing gay rights movement? In what ways do intersections among gender, race, ethnicity, social class, and sexual identity influence these life course processes, even as life course processes influence them in turn? These are the questions explored in this session.

35. Didactic Seminar. Quantitative Narrative Analysis and PC-ACE (to 12:00pm)

Atlanta Marriott Marquis, M304, Marquis Level

Ticket required for admission

Session Organizer and Leader: Roberto P. Franzosi, Emory University

The seminar will illustrate the use of PC-ACE (Program for Computer-Assisted Coding of Events), a computer program specifically designed by Roberto Franzosi for the quantitative analysis of text (narrative text, in particular). PC-ACE does not perform any automatic parsing of texts. Rather, it offers a variety of computer-assisted tools for the storage and retrieval of text in a relational database environment (PC-ACE is an application based on Microsoft ACCESS). The workshop will show how 1. to setup a "story grammar" in PC-ACE (i.e., the categories to be used to code text and where a "story grammar" is the simple semantic structure subject-action-object and their respective modifiers, such as the time and space of action, the fundamental categories of narrative; basically, a "story grammar" corresponds to the 5 Ws of journalism: Who, What, When, Where, Why); 2. to enter parts of a narrative text within the categories of the story grammar; 3. to extract stored information for the purpose of data analysis via the PC-ACE Query Manager and via SQL queries (Structured Query Language); 4. to update stored data values and impute new values via the PC-ACE Update Manager; 5. to perform analyses of the data focusing on network models and Geographic Information System (GIS) tools. For illustrative purposes, we will use a dataset of nearly 400 lynching events that occurred in Georgia (1875-1930) and taken from 1300 newspaper articles.

36. Presidential Panel. Political Representation and the US Census

Session Organizer: Margo Anderson, University of Wisconsin

Panelist: Robert M. Groves, U.S. Census Bureau

Introduced by Census historian Margo Anderson, Director Groves will describe the design and conduct of the 2010 Census enumeration, the innovations and changes in the census this decade, and the roadmap for completing the census and delivering the apportionment and redistricting data to the President and Congress in late 2010 and early 2011. The discussion will comment on the concordances and discordances between the data collection for a country's census and common data collection designs for social science more broadly. Finally, Groves will offer some speculations of changes to censuses to match the increasing diversity of the American public.

37. Thematic Session. Citizenship's Others

Hilton Atlanta, Grand Ballroom C, Second Floor

Session Organizer: Ethel C. Brooks, State University of New Jersey-Rutgers

Panel: Thomas Acton, University of Greenwich-United Kingdom
Grace Chang, University of California-Santa Barbara
Jane L. Collins, University of Wisconsin
Peter Kabachnik, City University of New York-Staten Island
Joanna Regulska, State University of New Jersey-Rutgers
Nidhi Trehan, University College-London

Discussant: Ian F. Hancock, University of Texas-Austin

How do theories of citizenship account for those left outside? What are the promises and limits of citizenship for stateless people, refugees and those who have been displaced or denaturalized through capitalist de- and re-territorialization and neoliberalism, war, imprisonment and practices such as the “extraordinary renditions” carried out in the name of the war on terror? This session looks at the sociological “Others” of citizenship, and the ways in which those Others lay bare the limits of citizenship, through exclusions that are at once raced, gendered, classed and sexual, even as they are predicated on rules of law that can be local, national or international. If these Others -Romani people, Palestinians, displaced people and refugees—make up its “constitutive outside,” precisely because they are left out of the promise of, right to and practice of citizenship, how do we understand the creation and maintenance of the boundaries of citizenship through the everyday practices, resistances and accommodations by and against those to whom the benefits of the citizen are denied?

38. Thematic Session. Education as a Citizenship Right

Hilton Atlanta, Grand Ballroom B, Second Floor

Session Organizer and Presider: Amanda Evelyn Lewis, Emory University

Panel: Jennie Oakes, Ford Foundation

Amy Stuart Wells, Columbia University

This panel will engage the broad question of whether education is a citizenship right in the United States and, if so, what would need to happen in order for our educational system to facilitate access to full citizenship rights for all children. In recent years, there have been a number of struggles for access to quality education. These struggles have continued the legacy of struggle not just for access to some schooling, but to the best kind of educational opportunities with all the privileges that go along. The panelists in this session are all prominent scholars who have played active part in these struggles, putting scholarship in service of efforts to provide broader educational opportunities.

This panel explores the ways in which contemporary practices of identification can be used to strengthen the “embrace” by states of both citizens and non-citizens, to identify both criminals and the innocent, and to reconstruct identities in ways that may enhance claims for reparations for past injustices. The papers promise to clarify some of the positive and negative elements of contemporary identification procedures and to illuminate the social sources of both endorsement of and resistance to such procedures.

The collapse of Soviet type regimes confronted the countries of Eastern Europe and Eurasia with a host of issues relating to citizenship: resurgent nationalism and ethnic conflict, opening borders and European integration, territorial disputes, and the legacies of Soviet and pre-Soviet practices and policies regarding citizenship. The session examines these issues through a complementary set of case studies: how civic, ethnic, and state nationalism have evolved in Russia since the 19th Century and their impact on contemporary Russian notions of citizenship and nationhood; affinities between late socialist and early post-socialist political subjectivity and the emerging neoliberal discourses of citizenship; Soviet-era practices of revoking the citizenship of "un-loyal" citizens and how and why these practices changed in Soviet successor states; and 'post-national' forms of belonging, de-territorialized citizenship, and other forms of kin-state politics in Poland and Hungary in response to EU accession.

As a result of current trends in urbanization and globalization, metropolitan Atlanta has experienced a dramatic growth in both its Asian-American population, as well as many more extensive international social and economic ties. In this session, we propose to investigate the opportunities and challenges faced by the Georgia State University Sociology Department in fostering international collaborative ties with colleagues in China and Korea with the goal of establishing comparative, externally-funded research programs and local community collaborations. Two international projects will be presented. Heying Zhan has established ties with sociology and social science departments in China, and together with colleagues at GSU and Brown University has begun a comparative study of institutional elder care in China and the U.S. Jung Ha Kim has led our efforts to establish a memorandum of agreement between the College of Arts and Science at GSU and the College of Social Science at Ajou University in Korea. In addition to faculty and student exchanges, her goal is to develop ongoing research symposia between the two sociology departments. We are also in the process of extending our community outreach with two projects. Donald Reitzes is working with Atlanta's Center for Pan Asian Community Services on a W.K. Kellogg Foundation-funded project to expand community health education and programs. Charles Jaret engaged with the Southern Regional Council on a Carnegie-funded project to identify successful coalitions between African-Americans and Latinos living in the Southeast.

43. Departmental Workshop. Building a Gender Progressive Department (co-sponsored by Sociologists for Women in Society)

Session Organizer: Abby L. Ferber, University of Colorado-Colorado Springs

Co-Leaders: Abby L. Ferber, University of Colorado-Colorado

Spring; Andrea Stepnick, Belmont University; Kris De Welde,

Florida Gulf Coast University

This hands-on workshop will offer participants the opportunity to share and discuss "worst practices" and then through discussion in small groups move towards recognizing "best practices." Workshop facilitators will guide a conversation about how to strategize movement towards more "gender progressive" departments, and suggest resources.

44. Professional Workshop. Still a Down Market or Reasons for Optimism? The 2009 Survey of Positions for Sociology PhDs

Hilton Atlanta, Room 306, Third Floor

Session Organizer: Roberta M. Spalter-Roth, American Sociological Association

Leader: Jerry A. Jacobs, University of Pennsylvania

In 2009 we found that those searching for new full-time assistant professor positions in academic sociology during the 2008-2009 academic year faced a difficult job market. Some schools in need of new faculty were not authorized to conduct searches, while others found their positions frozen or searches that were already underway cancelled. Yet the losses in positions were not as high as anecdotal evidence would have it. In 2010 we repeat this survey to see if problems such as state budget cutbacks, endowment declines, and declining enrollments, for example, continue to restrict the number of academic positions open to new PhDs in sociology. We expect department chairs, graduate directors, and graduate students to discuss their experiences and the implications of the new findings for the discipline, for departments, and for new PhDs.

45. Research and Policy Workshop. Ethical Issues in Interdisciplinary Work

Hilton Atlanta, Room 301, Third Floor

Session Organizer: Barbara Entwisle, University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill

Co-Leaders: Barbara Entwisle, University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill; Gail Elizabeth Henderson, University of North Carolina
Interdisciplinary social scientists have long been challenged by familiar epistemological divides between qualitative and quantitative methods -- this is the most familiar example. However, during the past several decades, the culture of research has evolved, based both on the "pull" of funding agencies (e.g., NIH, NSF, and other federal sources) and the "push" of exciting interdisciplinary collaborative opportunities. In result, it is currently common to find multidisciplinary teams addressing a range of health, behavior, and population/epidemiological research questions, applied to large scale data sets and when appropriate, collections of human biological specimens. In addition, it is not uncommon for such programs to include data and/or specimens collected from locations outside the US, in collaboration with international investigation teams. In these contexts, researchers may find themselves confronted by culture clashes regarding the norms and practices of research that have been previously unchallenged (unrecognized). A series of cases will be used to generate discussion about these issues in a hand-on workshop.

Yasemin Soysal, University of Essex

The 2010 Meetings coincide with the 60th anniversary of the publication of Marshall's seminal essay, which has remained the touchstone for contemporary scholarship on citizenship. Marshall's essay, it may be recalled, identified three aspects of citizenship, civil, political, and social rights, and argued that the rise of the post World War II welfare state gave members of the working class social rights that enabled them to realize substantive (as opposed to strictly de jure) civil and political citizenship. His essay asked (among other questions), (1) Is equal citizenship consistent with class inequality? (2) Can basic equality be created and preserved without invading the freedom of the competitive market? The current crises engendered by neo-liberal policies that have increased income inequality and eroded state welfare makes a retrospective on Marshall's contributions especially timely. This panel will which aspects of his essay have proved to be the most and least insightful in light of subsequent research and the many economic, social, and cultural changes that have taken place since it was written..

This session explores the theme of embodied citizenship, understood as the ways in which the State and other social actors manage, order, and discipline human bodies in the service of national belonging. Citizenship is linked to rights, status, social location, political economy, and transnational exchange. This session adds bodies to the analytical mix, deepening and expanding our knowledge of how citizenship projects are thoroughly embodied projects. As sociologists and their kin address stratification, they reveal qualifications of citizenship based on corporeal allegiance to social orders. The scholars featured in this session have in their various projects explored how bodies simultaneously inform what it is to be a citizen, including categories of belonging, while also being made to fit into the contours of legitimate citizenship - with all the rights, responsibilities, and costs this entails.

The Triumph of the Market over Citizenship: Implications for Dual Citizenship. Peter Kivisto, Augustana College

The number of individuals with dual or multiple citizenships has increased dramatically in recent years and we can assume that the trend will continue into the indefinite future. In part, this trend is due to the growing number of transnational immigrants who want to maintain ties to their country of origin while also becoming incorporated into the destination country. Furthermore, a growing number of states now permit dual citizenship. This session will examine the significance of transnationalism, factors contributing to states increasingly abandoning their earlier commitment to the 1930 Hague Convention (which asserted that individuals should "have one nationality only"), and the implications of these developments for immigrant inclusion.

Life chances are increasingly regulated by technological systems. Across multiple domains of social life, new systems of control integrate with existing institutional functions to assign risk, value, and identity and sort populations accordingly. In this context, citizenship cannot be encapsulated by the category of nationality alone; it must also be understood as constituted by one's position within multiple databases and co-produced through one's active negotiation of mediated experiences. These articulations of citizenship manifest in new biometric-encoded passports and identity documents that fix identities and sort bodies in highly unequal ways. They can also be witnessed in the intrusive surveillance and policing of people accessing social services, such as welfare benefits or healthcare, further marginalizing the most needy groups in society. New media technologies, ranging from mobile phones to social networking websites to intensely interactive virtual worlds, may afford new opportunities for alternative formations of citizenship or different iterations of exploitation and exclusion. Or, one's genetic profile, as "discovered" by prevalent genetic testing technologies, may be used to justify exclusionary practices by employers, insurers, or healthcare providers, all without the taint of racism, sexism, or ageism, usually associated with more overt forms of discrimination. Nonetheless, the process of social sorting is no less value-laden or biased when it is carried out by automated systems. The task of this thematic session is to interrogate the power dynamics of new technologies and their implications for contemporary notions and practices of citizenship.

73. Special Session. Remaking the Color Line: Black Exceptionalism and Demographic Transformations

Session Organizer and Presider: Amanda Evelyn Lewis, Emory University

Panel: David Sears, University of California-Los Angeles

Moon-Kie Jung, University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign

Tyrone A. Forman, Emory University

Jennifer Lee, University of California-Irvine

In the last few years there has been a great deal of academic and public discussion of demographic shifts, including the increasing presence of Latinos and Asians, projections of whites becoming a minority by 2050, and of possible major shifts in racial politics as Latinos become largest "minority group. While predictions about what these shifts mean vary, they all agree on one point - that blacks are currently and will remain symbolically and materially distinct from other groups. Social psychologist David Sears (2006) recently termed this the "black exceptionalism" hypothesis arguing, "despite the successes of the civil rights movement, a largely impermeable color line continues to restrict African Americans from assimilation into the broader American society." This panel will explore "black exceptionalism" empirically and theoretically in the context of current demographic shifts and political shifts.

Is Atlanta a Latino Mecca? An Exploration of Latino Self-Employment, Political Influence, and Private School Enrollments. Cameron Dee Lippard, Appalachian State University

People on the Way: Asian and Pacific Island Immigrants and

Refugees in Atlanta. Jung Ha Kim, Georgia State University

In the city of Atlanta, immigrants have a very low profile, while in the suburbs their presence is prominent and marked. Virtually no reference was made to immigrant voters or immigrant-related issues in the recent Atlanta city mayoral election, while in the suburban counties local politics, ordinances, and activism are highly charged with controversial measures affecting immigrant communities. What's going on regarding immigrants in metropolitan Atlanta? In the past decade researchers began focusing on immigrants in the South, and this session will add to this body of knowledge. The speakers on the panel will discuss recent developments and conditions in the immigrant and refugee groups in metropolitan Atlanta that they have studied and know well.

76. Didactic Seminar. Small-N Compass: Systematic Cross-Case Analysis

Atlanta Marriott Marquis, M304, Marquis Level

Ticket required for admission

Session Organizer and Leader: Charles C. Ragin, University of Arizona

The analytic challenge of case-oriented research is not simply that the number of cases is small, but that researchers gain useful in-depth knowledge of cases that is difficult to represent using conventional forms (e.g., representations that emphasize the "net effects" of "independent variables"). The researcher is left wondering how to represent knowledge of cases in a way that is meaningful and compact, but which also does not deny case complexity. Set-theoretic methods such as Qualitative Comparative Analysis (QCA), the central focus of this workshop, offer a solution. QCA is fundamentally a case-oriented method that can be applied to small-to-moderate size Ns. It is most useful when researchers have knowledge of each case included in an investigation, there is a relatively small number of such cases (e.g., 10-50), and the investigator seeks to compare cases as configurations. With these methods it is possible to construct representations of cross-case patterns that allow for substantial heterogeneity and diversity. This workshop offers an advanced introduction to the approach and to the use of the software package fsQCA. Both the crisp (i.e., Boolean) and fuzzy-set versions of the method will be presented. Fuzzy set analysis is gaining popularity in the social sciences today because of the close connections it enables between verbal theory, substantive knowledge (especially in the assessment of set membership), and data analysis. Fuzzy sets are especially useful in case-oriented research, where the investigator has a degree of familiarity with the cases included in the investigation and seeks to understand cases configurationally—as specific combinations of aspects or elements. Using fuzzy-set methods, case outcomes can be examined in ways that allow for causal complexity, where different combinations of causally relevant conditions combine to generate the outcome in question. Also, with fuzzy-set methods it is possible to evaluate arguments that causal conditions are necessary or sufficient. Examinations of this type are outside the scope of conventional analytical methods.

77. Departmental Workshop. The Library and Sociology: A New Rapid Assessment Tool for Library Collections and Services Related to Sociology

Session Organizer and Leader: Thomas L. Van Valey, Western Michigan University

Co-Leader: Sally Willson Weimer, University of California-Santa Barbara

Have you been charged to review your academic or college library's collections and Services for sociology? Are you responsible for making suggestions about new library acquisitions in sociology? Do you want to find out what services and resources librarians can provide to the sociology department? A joint committee of librarians (from the Anthropology and Sociology Section of the American Library Association's Association of College and Research Libraries) and sociologists (from the ASA's Department Resources Group) have put together a tool that can be used to quickly assess the collections and services provided by the library for sociology programs. The tool was designed to be used in all types of institutions with sociology programs, from community colleges and schools with courses but no major, to those with comprehensive graduate programs. This workshop will: 1) give a brief background of the process used in constructing the tool; 2) describe the structure and organization of the tool; 3) explain how to use it; and 4) suggest ways that the faculty in the sociology program can work with the librarian to use the tool, both as a quick assessment and also as the basis for longer term collaboration.

78. Professional Workshop. Media and Civic Engagement

Hilton Atlanta, Room 306, Third Floor

Session Organizers: William A. Gamson, Boston College

Jesse Kirdahy-Scalia, OpenMediaBoston.org

Co-Leaders: Marshall Ganz, Harvard University; Stefania Milan, Central European University-Budapest

The session will focus on a year long, web-based dialogue among sociologists (and others) on the question: What are the most important elements that should be present in a media system to promote collective civic engagement? What elements in existing media systems in the U.S. and elsewhere discourage collective civic engagement and how can one counter such influences? Users of the website will be asked to respond to ideas about new and alternative media as well as mainstream media and will include news media, entertainment, and advertising. We will focus on civic engagement as a collective process - that is, civic engagement as the creation of the capacity to participate in politics through communities of like-minded people. The website will be initiated in the Fall and those interested in becoming participants will be recruited through announcements in ASA publications such as Footnotes and the ASA website. While primarily aimed at sociologists, the site will welcome participants from political science, communications, and other relevant academic fields as well as movement activists and members of new media communities. We will create original content for new media and social media communities and make it available on those sites. Our site will aggregate content from the project's various new media channels, consolidating original content and community responses from various sites in one place. Reactor panel: The session at the ASA at the Atlanta meetings will be designed to include both those who have participated in the online dialogue during the year and those who haven't. We will briefly (10-15 minutes) present a sample of materials from the website to give non-participants a sense of it and to remind others of particular segments. Then, we will ask an invited panel to respond to the question: What lessons about the role of the media in promoting or retarding collective civic engagement can we learn from the on-line dialogue of the past year?

79. Research and Policy Workshop. Deep Democracy (co-sponsored with Sociologists without Borders)

Hilton Atlanta, Room 307, Third Floor

Session Organizer: Judith Blau, University of North Carolina

Co-Leaders: Ricardo A. Dello Buono, Manhattan College, Keri E. Iyall Smith, Suffolk University, Mark Frezzo, Florida Atlantic University; Bruce K. Friesen, University of Tampa

Deep democracy is embedded in many social forms: collectives, agrarian communities, economic cooperatives, ethnic communities, faith communities, and the classroom. We sociologists have not fully engaged the topic because many have felt that collectives and cooperatives are socialist or communist, and therefore a dangerous and forbidden field of inquiry. Yet, deep democracy is thriving: in the local food movement, in community efforts to develop alternative energy, and in nonprofits. We learn from communities in the Global South how to practice deep democracy.

80. Teaching Workshop. Building Emerging Citizens: Models that Encourage Students toward Sociology of Citizenship

Hilton Atlanta, Room 308, Third Floor

Session Organizer and Leader: Kathy Shepherd Stolley, Virginia Wesleyan College

Co-Leaders: Diane E. Hotaling, Virginia Wesleyan College; Michael Hirsch, Huston Tillotson University; Jeffrey A. Will, University of North Florida

Inspired by the conference theme, this interactive session focuses on models that forge collaborations between applied sociology and service-oriented programs designed to encourage active citizenship among college and university students. The team of workshop co-leaders is comprised of the director of an award-winning campus service-learning office, and applied sociologists with extensive experience in forging community partnerships, including one who served as mayor. Those exploring ways to use their sociological perspectives and toolkits to more effectively enhance student engagement and active citizenship beyond campus will find this session of particular interest.

This session includes two papers examining free-market-based educational reform efforts - charter schools and the New York City model of mayoral control - and two papers looking at school choice and scholarship policies guided by the goals of equity and greater access. The equity-minded reforms hearken back to an earlier era of policy making when there was less political focus and emphasis on test-driven accountability and competition in public education. This session will help to illustrate the what has been lost and what gained in the last 30 years of educational policy making.

There can be little doubt that not only have medicine and healthcare become increasingly globalized in the last decade, but also that globalization in other spheres have crucially impacted health and well being all over the world. The resulting transnational scope of medicine and healthcare is far from Friedman's conception that the 'world is flat'. Rather, as different facets and articulations of globalization of medicine and health illustrate, globalization is full of contentious concerns about citizenship, identity, and human rights. This panel will investigate the shifting terrain and linkages of globalization of medicine and healthcare: In particular, how citizenship, identity, and rights are being constituted and reconfigured within the changing geo-political context.

Session Organizer: Bethany Titus, Alpha Kappa Delta

Keynote: Michael A. Messner, University of Southern California

107. Special Session. ASA Rose Series. Towards a Sociology of Rights

Hilton Atlanta, Room 211, Second Floor

Session Organizer: Michael Schwartz, State University of New York-Stony Brook

Presider: Cynthia Fuchs Epstein, City University of New York-Graduate Center

Panel: Pamela E. Oliver, University of Wisconsin-Madison

Dawn Wiest, University of Memphis

Joachim J. Savelsberg, University of Minnesota

Ellen R. Reese, University of California-Riverside

The Rose series has a long tradition of publishing policy related themes that touch upon a wide array of social, economic, political and civil rights. Given the rising prominence and widening scope of a Global Human Rights Regime, this special session will feature a panel discussion among forthcoming authors in the Rose Series and their peers whose works touch upon various domestic and foreign aspects of this rights regime. The objective is to explore potential links between these different realms of rights. The panel thereby seeks to advance the rights discussion in sociology.

109. Professional Workshop. National Institutes of Health Funding Opportunities for Early-Career Sociologists: Tales from the Field

Session Organizer and Leader: Lori J. Ducharme, National Institutes of Health

Co-Leaders: Carrie B. Oser, University of Kentucky; Amanda Abraham, University of Georgia; Dennis P. Watson, Loyola University-Chicago

As advances continue to be made in the detection, prevention, and treatment of disease, there is an ever-growing need for innovative social science research on health, healthcare, and the life course. The National Institutes of Health (NIH) offers numerous opportunities for sociological research, but these are often not apparent to persons without prior funding experience. This session is designed to highlight some of the research opportunities for sociologists that can be supported through NIH grants, especially for those who are early in their careers. A variety of funding opportunities are available to support early-career investigators, including graduate students, postdoctoral fellows, and researchers in academic and applied settings. These include pre-doctoral training fellowships, dissertation grants, postdoctoral mentored research fellowships, career development awards, and traditional research grants. The panel will focus on the actual experience of early-career sociologists who have successfully navigated the grant application, review, and funding process for each of these funding mechanisms. This will be an interactive session, with panelists providing advice on identifying funding opportunities, developing a research proposal, writing for a biomedical-oriented review audience, post-award activities, and strategies for building a sociological research career. This workshop provides a unique opportunity for attendees to hear directly from their sociologist peers who have successfully navigated the NIH application and review process. By emphasizing the grantee perspective and experience, this workshop will provide real-world examples of the types of social science funded by NIH, and encourage potential new applicants to explore the many research funding opportunities designed for new and early-career investigators at NIH.

110. Research and Policy Workshop. Using Data from the Wisconsin Longitudinal Study

Session Organizer: Robert M. Hauser, University of Wisconsin-Madison

Co-Leader: Carol Lynn Roan, University of Wisconsin-Madison

The Wisconsin Longitudinal Study (WLS) is hosting a free training workshop for anyone who wants to learn more about the WLS. Along with history and content of the project, we will offer instruction on how to access the data and find the measures you need to answer your research questions. We will also discuss the addition of DNA data to the analysis variables and the April 2010 start of a new wave of data collection. There will be time for discussion to answer any questions audience members have about the data. The workshop is open to all ASA members and especially welcomes users who are new to the data. The WLS has been supported by the National Institute on Aging since 1991. The WLS provides an opportunity to study the life course, intergenerational transfers and relationships, family functioning, physical and mental health and well-being, and morbidity and mortality from late adolescence through age 65. WLS data also cover social background, youthful aspirations, schooling, military service, labor market experiences, family, social participation, psychological characteristics, and retirement. Survey data were collected from the graduates or their parents in 1957, 1964, 1975, 1992, and 2004; from a selected sibling in 1977, 1994, and 2005; from the spouse of the original respondent in 2004; from the spouse of the selected sibling in 2006; and from widow(ers) of the graduates and siblings in 2006-07. Almost 85 percent of surviving graduates continue to participate in the WLS. Data, documentation, and publications are available online at <http://www.ssc.wisc.edu/wlsresearch/>.

111. Teaching Workshop. So What? Connecting Classrooms to Careers for Undergraduate Students

Session Organizer: Kathy Shepherd Stolley, Virginia Wesleyan College

Co-Leaders: Edward L. Akin, Southwestern University; Melody Gaye Lechmere, College of Southern Nevada; Jeffry A. Will, University of North Florida

Sociology students seek connections between theory and practice, how text material applies to the "real world" and their lives in particular, and how sociology can help them get a job. In other words, students rightfully ask "So what?" about their course material. This interactive session focuses on seeing and engaging opportunities for answering these "So what?" questions with students. Academic sociologists who are seeking ways to incorporate a more applied/practice "lens" into their own outlook and classrooms may find this session of particular interest.

The past 10-15 years have seen great progress in our understanding of decision making in both individual and group settings. Among the many areas seeing rapid advancement have been evolutionary and behavioral game theory, cross-cultural perspectives on strategic behavior, altruism and other-regarding preferences, and the integration of choice models into demographic and policy analysis. This session brings together several papers that showcase some of these innovations, either in helping to advance or to apply new developments in theories of choice.

8:30 am Sessions

132. Thematic Session. Children’s Citizenship Status and Experience in a Globalizing World

Hilton Atlanta, Grand Salon E, Second Floor
Session Organizer and Presider: Barrie Thorne, University of California-Berkeley
Liminal Legality and the Experiences of Transnational Children and their Families. Cecilia Menjivar, Arizona State University
On the Borders of Citizenship: The Politics of Low-Income Immigrant Births. Lisa Sun-Hee Park, University of Minnesota
U.S. Immigration Laws and Salvadoran Social Citizenship: How Transnational Parents’ Legal Status Shapes Children’s Well-Being. Leisy Janet Abrego, University of California-Irvine
The United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child has galvanized debates about citizenship, raising issues also pertinent to adults. The UNCRC recognizes the vulnerability and dependence of children through “claim rights” to protection and provisioning by parents and state institutions. But care and protection may embed patterns of control, heightening patterns of subordination; thus, the UNCRC also specifies children’s rights to “participation” in shaping the circumstances in which they live. Participation rights are contingent on the growing competence of the “child,” a category that glosses wide variation in capacities. The broader economic and cultural contexts of children’s lives also enter into constructions of citizenship. The lens of children and childhood opens multiple perspectives on broader issues related to citizenship.

133. Thematic Session. Toward a Sociology of Citizenship in South East Asia

Hilton Atlanta, Grand Ballroom A, Second Floor
Session Organizer and Presider: Robyn Magalit Rodriguez, State University of New Jersey-Rutgers
You Have to Beat Them in Their Own Game: Filipino Immigrant Caregivers and the Informalization of the U.S. Home Care Industry. Anna Romina P. Guevarra, University of Illinois-Chicago
Global Workers, Migrant Citizens: Transnational Labor and the Deterritorialization of Rights in Southeast Asia. Robyn Magalit Rodriguez, State University of New Jersey-Rutgers
Family as First Line of Defense: The (Re)production of Heteronormativity through Welfare in Singapore. Youyenn Teo, Nanyang Technological University
Return Activities among Vietnamese Diasporic Subjects. Hung Cam Thai, Pomona College
Southeast Asia is the site of immense diversity and dramatic social transformations. Competing colonial rivals including the French, the British, the Dutch and the Americans have all attempted to stake claims on the region historically. Just as importantly, the various peoples of region have fought fiercely to define sovereignty in their own ways leading to vastly divergent post-colonial trajectories. From the “tiger” economy of Singapore, to the veritable migrant nation of the Philippines, to the communist-turned-capitalist Vietnam, in each of the countries of the region questions of citizenship are being reconfigured in novel and unexpected ways. This session examines how processes of neoliberal globalization, including transnational labor migration, is giving rise to new understandings of rights and belonging.

134. Special Session. A New Era or Business as Usual? Rendition, Torture and Citizenship at Home and Abroad

Session Organizer and Presider: Marnia Lazreg, City University of New York-Hunter

Panelist: Henri Alleg, Paris, France

Torture and the Global Public Sphere: The Transnational Challenge of Holding States and Non-state Actors Accountable. Rafia Zakaria, Indiana University

The Securitization and Domestication of Diaspora Muslims and Islam: The Case of Turkish Immigrants in Germany and Australia. Michael Humphrey, University of Sydney-Australia

Sovereignty, Extraordinary Rendition and the Politics of Citizenship. Atef S. Said, University of Michigan

As the war in Afghanistan escalates and conflict persists in Pakistan, the prospect of a new era free of abuses such as torture, violations of civil liberties and human rights at home and abroad may not soon materialize. In spite of the release of secret memos and other documents revealing the extent of the use of torture, and the decision taken by the Department of Justice in August 2009 to carry out an investigation, the rendition program is maintained albeit under greater supervision, and laws will be formulated to justify the indefinite detention of a number of individuals. This panel takes stock of the present situation with regard to continued violations of civil liberties and human rights; examines the social meanings of "counterinsurgency" war (overt and covert) on the rule of law; the effects of the rendition program on participating countries; and constructions of citizenship for Muslims in European countries to alleviate security concerns.

135. Special Session. Technology, Rural Competitiveness, and Development (co-sponsored with Rural Sociological Society)

The Effect of Public Housing Relocation on the Well-Being of Residents. Graham Elton Wilson, Georgia State University

Reneighboring Poor Atlanta: The Political Economy of Faith-Motivated Gentrification. Katherine B. Hankins, Georgia State University

Atlanta has instituted tremendous plans to transform the city, from a light rail system built on historic railroad lines to the elimination of project-based public housing. These plans have increased tensions between pro-growth and social welfare factions. This session will address how city government-driven plans for urban redevelopment have and will impact public housing residents, crime, homelessness, and neighborhoods in general.

137. Department Workshop. Building Effective Sociology and Criminology Programs: Insights and Recommendations from the ASA Task Force

Session Organizer: Dennis W. MacDonald, Saint Anselm College

Co-Leaders: Dennis W. MacDonald, Saint Anselm College; Margaret Weigers Vitullo, American Sociological Association; Steven E.

Barkan, University of Maine; Kimberly J. Cook, University of North Carolina-Wilmington; Heath C. Hoffmann, College of

Charleston; Marc Riedel, Southeastern Louisiana University

The purpose of this workshop is to provide for an open discussion of the work of the ASA Task Force on Sociology and Criminology Programs. Following a brief presentation on the major findings and recommendations of the Task Force, workshop participants will have an opportunity for questions and comments on the findings and recommendations, discussion of issues that departments encounter in relation to Criminology and/or Criminal Justice programs, and exploration of strategies for resolving them.

138. Minority Fellowship Program (MFP) Professional Workshop. Dilemmas of Diversity: Inclusion and Exclusion of Racial-Ethnic Minority Graduate Students in Sociology (co-sponsored with the Committee on the Status of Racial and Ethnic Minorities in Sociology)

Hilton Atlanta, Room 308, Third Floor

Session Organizer: Jean H. Shin, American Sociological Association

Co-Leaders: Denise A. Segura, University of California-Santa Barbara;

Scott N. Brooks, University of California-Riverside; Monica Lomeli

and Bridget E. Harr, University of California- Santa Barbara

This workshop unveils new survey data on graduate student diversity from a national sample of sociology departments. Co-sponsored by the ASA Committee on the Status of Racial and Ethnic Minorities (SREM), the ASA Minority Fellowship Program (MFP), and the University of California, Santa Barbara (UCSB), we will compare and contrast the strengths and weaknesses in the professional socialization and support of graduate students by race/ethnicity and gender. We will discuss the different ways that diversity is perceived and valued by students and how these differences impact on the quality of students' experiences in graduate school. Our goal is both to acknowledge the hidden injuries of race/ethnicity as well as identify practices that appear to strengthen the professional development of all graduate students. Current Directors of Graduate Studies (DGS) are particularly invited to participate so we can brainstorm on ways to address any weaknesses in our programs vis-à-vis diversity and strengthen some of our best practices.

139. Regular Session. Community and Crime

168. Presidential Panel. Transnational Feminisms and Precarious Citizenship
Hilton Atlanta, Grand Ballroom A, Second Floor

Session Organizer: Paola Bacchetta, University of California-Berkeley
Presider: Nancy A. Naples, University of Connecticut
Panel: Jyoti Puri, Simmons College
Paola Bacchetta, University of California-Berkeley
Miriam Grossi, Federal University of São Paulo
Cassandra Ellerby-Dueck, University of Southampton
This panel provides a comparative perspective on the imbrications of gender, race, sexuality, class and postcoloniality in precarious citizenship as it appears in various sites across the globe. Through the contributions of multiply-located transnational feminist theorizing the panelists address conditions, subject formations, and conduct implicated in states of precarious citizenship for women, lesbians, transgendered subjects and other queers in India, Germany, The Netherlands, France and Brazil. In doing so, they interrogate dominant notions of citizenship and also rethink normative notions of precarious citizenship in each context.

One Giant Piñata to Whack? Media Representations of Misconduct among Corporate Elites and the Wealthy. Diana Kendall, Baylor University
Economic Inequality and White Working Class Republicans. Monica Prasad, Northwestern University
Rich People's Movements. Isaac William Martin, University of California-San Diego

Citizens in a democracy respond to economic inequalities depending on their judgments based on different underlying conceptions of justice, morality, and rights. This session explores how social and economic inequalities in the United States have led groups to make varied evaluations, leading to a range of political phenomena that will take on increased importance as the United States charts its future following the Great Recession of 2008. Diana Kendall argues that recent media representations of cases of corporate fraud have led to some populist questioning of corporate greed and excess. However, the condemnation of former Enron executives and people who perpetrate Madoff-like investment frauds serves as a form of symbolic reassurance to the public that significant changes are being made to reduce the likelihood of similar occurrences in the future, despite much evidence that shows little has actually changed in organizational and regulatory environments. The rise of the Tea Party movement refocuses attention on white working class Republicans, a segment of the electorate that has become increasingly vocal, visible, and influential in American politics. Monica Prasad uses in-depth interviews with white working-class Republicans from the weeks prior to the 2008 election to identify their evaluations of the meaning of economic inequality. As Isaac Martin argues, several times in the last century, groups of Americans have deployed the familiar repertoire of social movement tactics to demand that the federal government redistribute resources categorically in favor of the rich. Such movements are puzzling because the rich have political resources that would seem to make a social movement unnecessary. Martin reports initial findings from a study of the conditions under which such movement emerge.

Julia I Lane, National Science Foundation

Patricia E. White, National Science Foundation

The Social, Behavioral and Economic Sciences (SBE) Directorate of the National Science Foundation (NSF) each year funds tens of millions of dollars' worth of basic sociological research and provides significant dissertation research support. To keep the SBE sciences vibrant and able to contribute to innovation across NSF, across the federal government, and in society at large, the SBE Directorate has begun an in-depth evaluation and assessment of its future in relation to its ability to sustain and enhance contributions to the NSF basic science mission, as well as facilitate innovation in the government and enhance individual well-being and the vitality of American society. In this session you will be among the first to learn from top-level NSF sources about newly unveiled plans to help keep the SBE sciences robust and up-to-date.

AHRC provides education and tiered risk reduction programs through partnerships to empower adults in the prevention, diagnosis and treatment of substance use, HIV/AIDS, STDs, hepatitis, and other communicable diseases. This session will address the issues faced by AHRC from the political issues around syringe exchange programs to grassroots outreach and tiered risk reduction programs.

175. Professional Workshop. Beyond Procrastination: Keep your Academic Career Moving Forward Smoothly

Session Organizer and Leader: Renate Reimann, FreshLife Coaching

Procrastination sabotages many promising academic careers. From unfinished dissertations to neglected teaching responsibilities and low publication rates, procrastination dearly costs both the individual academic as well as their institutions. The good news: Most procrastination can be eliminated. In this highly interactive workshop, procrastination coach Renate Reimann, Ph.D., guides each participant from recognizing his or her specific procrastination patterns to learning techniques that minimize self-sabotaging behaviors. As a result, participants will improve their self-management skills, acquire tested tools to “stop stewing and start doing” and create structures for sustainable long-term achievement.

176. Teaching Workshop. TeachingWithData.org: Resources for Teaching Quantitative Literacy in the Social Sciences

Session Organizer and Leader: Lynette F. Hoelter, University of Michigan

Co-Leaders: William H. Frey; John Paul DeWitt, University of Michigan

TeachingWithData.org is a pathway on the National Science Digital Library designed to enhance the teaching of quantitative literacy in the social sciences. TeachingWithData.org provides links to teaching resources, data, and other materials to make it easier for faculty to bring real social science data into courses across the curriculum ranging from introductory classes to senior seminars. The workshop will include a brief discussion of quantitative literacy and a focused demonstration of the website. Example resources and tips for use in the classroom will be highlighted.

206. Thematic Session. Caring Labor and Citizenship: An International Perspective.

Hilton Atlanta, Grand Ballroom A, Second Floor

Session Organizer and Presider: Rhacel Salazar Parrenas, University of Southern California

Panel: Ruri Ito, Hitotsubashi University

Cynthia J. Cranford, University of Toronto

Fiona Williams, University of Leeds

Rhacel Salazar Parrenas, University of Southern California

This thematic session will look at the construction of citizenship via the rights and obligations of “caring labor.” By caring labor, we refer to the sustaining of individual needs in society from the caring of children to the caring of elderly to the caring of sick people to the caring of our friends and family. We look at caring labor as a springboard for interrogating relations of race, class, and gender in society. How do differences of race, class, gender, and sexuality distinguish state provisions of caring labor as a right? How do these differences manifest in the distribution of caring labor as a responsibility? What distinguishes this session is it offers an international comparative perspective on the question of caring labor and citizenship. The papers in the session will interrogate how dynamics of race, class, gender, and sexuality shift across various national welfare regimes. The questions we will examine across these various national welfare regimes include the negotiation of an aging society by various nations; the dependence of nations on immigrant women and racial minorities for their caring labor; and the gender division of labor in the family in the context of women’s labor market participation.

207. Thematic Session. Citizenship and Disability: Creating Inclusive Communities

Hilton Atlanta, Grand Salon E, Second Floor

Session Organizer: Allison C. Carey, Shippensburg University

Presider: Cheryl G. Najarian Souza, University of Massachusetts-Lowell

Panel: Richard K. Scotch, University of Texas-Dallas

- Allison C. Carey*, Shippensburg University
- Sharon N. Barnartt*, Gallaudet University
- Marjorie L. DeVault*, Syracuse University

Despite the legislative successes of the Disability Rights Movement, people with disabilities still experience low rates of employment, segregation in education, social marginalization, medical discrimination, and social barriers to exercising their civil rights. Attempts to claim rights by people with disabilities are often met with hostility, resistance, and an attitude that suggests they are unworthy of rights and participation in the national community. This panel will consider the challenges faced by people with disabilities in attaining equal citizenship, the efficacy of rights in creating an inclusive national community that values and supports all of its members, and potential future strategies to support the practice of citizenship by all citizens.

208. Thematic Session. Citizenship in the Era of Mass Incarceration

Atlanta Marriott Marquis, M304, Marquis Level

Session Organizers: Bruce Western, Harvard University

David J. Harding, University of Michigan

Panel: Jeffrey Morenoff, University of Michigan

Becky Pettit, University of Washington

Christopher Uggen, University of Minnesota

Over the last three decades the number of individuals incarcerated in the United States has risen fivefold. Serving time in prison has now become a typical life event among low skill minority males, and prisoners disproportionately come from and return to disadvantaged urban communities. Since most prisoners are eventually released, over 700,000 individuals now exit prison each year in the United States. The era of mass incarceration has important implications for citizenship. “Returning citizens” face myriad obstacles -- legal, economic, social, and political -- to successful re-integration and full membership in their communities. The proposed session would feature current research, both qualitative and quantitative, on the social, cultural, political, and economic processes structuring mass incarceration and the experience of prisoner reentry. The session will focus on the implications of mass incarceration for citizenship, community, and inequality.

209. Thematic Session. Is the Internet Redefining the Concept of Citizenship?

Atlanta Marriott Marquis, M106/107, Marquis Level

Session Organizer: Gustavo S. Mesch, University of Haifa

Panel: Karen Mossberger, University of Illinois-Chicago

Keith N. Hampton, University of Pennsylvania

Gustavo S. Mesch, University of Haifa

Philip Howard, University of Washington

Hampton's presentation will be based on his studies on the effects of the Internet on the public sphere; he will ask whether the use of Internet and mobile phone has resulted in a contraction of the public sphere, reduced exposure to diverse opinions and ideas, reduced social tolerance, lower levels of political participation and a higher exposure to global media and networks. Mossberger will discuss the role of the Internet in the practice of citizenship, voting behavior in the U.S. elections, and the production of new forms of mobilization and political participation. Howard will discuss the means of producing and consuming political culture in various media in the Muslim world, assessing the impact of ICTs on the meaning of citizenship and the distribution of cultural authority in Muslim countries. Mesch will focus on the extent that Internet use has changed ethnic inequalities in exercising citizenship rights by the Arab population in Israel. In particular, Mesch will address minority barriers to accessing governmental, health and political information, and the effect of these inequalities on our conception of citizenship in the information society.

210. Celebrating the Work of Sebastião Salgado: A Sociological Lens on Salgado's Documentary Photography

Session Organizer: Deborah Carr, State University of New Jersey-Rutgers

Presider: Steven J. Gold, Michigan State University

Panel: Tamara Kay, Harvard University

Thomas K. Rudel, State University of New Jersey-Rutgers

Saskia Sassen, Columbia University

Edward E. Telles, Princeton University

This panel brings together five noted sociologists to discuss the contributions of Sebastião Salgado, winner of the 2010 ASA award for Reporting on Social Issues. Salgado, the Brazilian social documentary photographer and photojournalist, is recognized for his images that reveal inequalities throughout the world. His notable works include the books The Other Americas, Sahel: The End of the Road, Workers, and Migrations. He is currently working on a project called Genesis, photographing the landscape, people, flora and fauna of planet earth's remote locations untouched by human development. The discussion will focus on issues including the future of natural resources, migration, workers rights, and the importance of visual sociology.

213. Regional Spotlight Session. Screening of the Atlanta Way: A Documentary Film on Gentrification (to 3:30pm)

Hilton Atlanta, Room 302, Third Floor

Session Organizer: Deirdre A. Oakley, Georgia State University

Panel: King Williams, Pysentific Films

Zettler Clay, Pysentific Films

Saba Tesfanesh Long, Pysentific Films

Emily Turner, Tulane University

Discussant: Timothy Crimmins, Georgia State University

A Pysentific Films and Casclayde Media production, The Atlanta Way is the first documentary film examining the impact of gentrification on racial composition and inequality in a city known as the birthplace of the Civil Rights Movement. Since it was announced in the early 1990s that Atlanta would be site of the 1996 Olympic Games, it has been a place characterized by massive, higher-end redevelopment. These efforts have included the demolition of over a dozen inner-city public housing projects. One impact is that the "Black Mecca" has become far less black with thousands of poor African-American residents seemingly disappearing from the city limits over the last two decades. In fact the inner city has become whiter at a faster pace than any other city in the Nation, resulting in the closest Mayoral race between a black and a white candidate since the 1970s.

214. Departmental Workshop. Running a Successful NSF Research Experience for Undergraduates (REU) Program

Session Organizer and Leader: Mark A. Fossett, Texas A&M University

The workshop will cover several topics relating to NSF-REU programs including: developing a successful proposal; securing necessary support from within the university and from within the department; recruiting students; practical administrative and organizational issues (e.g., housing, stipends, health care, etc.); overseeing the program; serving department, university, and discipline goals; understanding the costs and commitments associated with an REU program; goals for student outcomes; and follow-up reporting and planning for renewal. The workshop is directed to sociologists who are interested in applying for NSF-REU program support but have not had direct experience with a REU program in sociology. The workshop panel will include individuals with many years of experience running successful NSF-REU programs in sociology PhD departments. They will share thoughts on the topics listed above and answer questions that workshop participants may have about these and related issues.

215. Professional Workshop. Applying for a Faculty Position in a Teaching-Oriented Institution

Session Organizer and Leader: Kathleen Piker-King, Mount Union College

Roberts, Hanover College; Gregory L. Weiss, Roanoke College

The workshop will cover the following topics: preparing an effective vita, constructing an effective job application and cover letter, surviving the campus visit, making an impressive teaching presentation, and interviewing with the President and the Academic Chief Officer. The major goal of the workshop is to prepare graduate students to effectively market themselves throughout their job search process from starting to look for a job to getting a job. The workshop materials emphasize that a job search is a long-term developmental process. The workshop is directed to doctoral students who are interested in accepting teaching appointments in teaching-oriented institutions of high education. Although, all doctoral students could benefit from much of the material covered in the workshop.

216. Teaching Workshop. Collaborative Online International Learning: The COIL Center and Virtual Study Abroad

Session Organizer and Leader: Craig B. Little, State University of New York-Cortland

Co-Leader: Susan J. St. John-Jarvis, State University of New York-Corning Community College

The purpose of this workshop is to engage sociologists who are interested in using distance-learning technologies to create either a module or an entire course in collaboration with an international colleague. In a world as interconnected as ours, students must not only access knowledge, but they must better understand the many contexts and cultural points of view which give meaning to what is known. Direct participation in another culture gives a deep appreciation of how meaning is bound to the cultural framing through which the world is experienced. In American post-secondary education the central method for providing students cross-cultural education is through participation in study abroad programs. These experiences are deeply enriching, but fewer than 4% of American students ever participate in such programs. Collaborative, online international learning facilitated by distance-learning technologies offers a cost-efficient, fruitful way for students to have extended peer-to-peer cross-culturally-enriching educational experiences. In this workshop the organizers will offer examples of collaborative international distance-learning from their own teaching experiences as a stimulus to raise questions from the workshop participants. The workshop will include extensive presentation notes, handouts and on-line resources—especially those developed in coordination with the State University of New York's Collaborative On-Line International Learning (COIL) Center.

Towards a Model of Social Fragmentation in Poor Communities: The Principle of Reciprocity Revised. Shira Offer, Bar-Ilan University

This session on poverty brings together two themes. One is the impact of policy, specifically the Earned Income Tax Credit (EITC), often hailed as the most successful recent US anti-poverty program. Papers look at the degree of awareness of the EITC and the ways recipients view and use the EITC. The second theme is social cohesion, with one paper offering a micro conceptualization of the determinants of reciprocity grounded in a review of relevant ethnographic literature, and the other scaling up to a macro look at how poverty and inequality influence social cohesion in Europe.

Discussant: Donald W. Light, University of Medicine and Dentistry of New Jersey

For both moral and practical reasons, nearly all countries have committed themselves to health care as right. Providing health care for all has not been easy for most countries because they have limited resources. All of them spend much less than the United States per capita. Yet equal access is denied to not only the 47 million without insurance but a larger number who go in and out of insurance, or who have policies with limited coverage, because a commercial ethos dominates health care rather than a rights ethos. Immigrants are a test case of human and social rights, and this session will especially address how they affect the discourse on rights.

 Children, Citizenship, and Consumer Culture. Daniel Thomas Cook, State University of New Jersey-Rutgers
 The creation and adoption of the United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child (ratified by every country except the U.S. and Somalia) has galvanized many debates about children and citizenship. The age category "child" (which the U.N. defines as the group between birth and 18) encompasses wide variation in capacity, recognized in rights to protection and provisioning (attending to the dependence and vulnerability of children), and - recognizing the growing capacity -- rights of participation. The broader economic and cultural contexts of children's lives also enter into constructions of citizenship. As these papers suggest, viewing citizenship through the lens of children and childhood provides distinctive insight into multiple dimensions of citizenship.

Democracy of Credit: Transformations in Economic Citizenship in U.S. Society, 1970-2010. Greta R. Krippner, University of Michigan

Credit is an important means to economic participation, and access to this lifeblood of the economy has become a distinctive political issue in different historical periods and different national settings. This thematic session explores to what extent credit is, or has come to be thought of, a right of citizenship. Access to credit, and particularly the structures that give groups in the society differential access to credit, remains a potent political issue. Sullivan argues that there are various senses in which individuals could be thought to hold rights to access and use credit, but these have not previously been elaborated under a common framework. Sullivan discusses three broad conceptions of credit rights that individuals might possess, and contrasts the tenuous rights of borrowers with the highly articulated legal rights of creditors. Carruthers argues that modern economies rely heavily on credit, and credit is essentially about trust. A sociological analysis of credit therefore considers the social dimensions of how creditors come to trust debtors, and Carruthers offers a general framework for thinking about this question. Krippner examines the surprising absence of a politics around credit and finance in late twentieth-century America, seeking to understand how the economy is (or is not) constituted as a political object under different historical conditions.

248. Thematic Session. Family Citizenship: What Rights Do or Should American Families Have?

Atlanta Marriott Marquis, M106/107, Marquis Level

Session Organizers: Barbara Jane Risman, University of Illinois-
Chicago; Myra Marx Ferree, University of Wisconsin

Presider: Barbara Jane Risman, University of Illinois-Chicago

Panel: Sylvia Walby, Lancaster University

Lynn H. Fujiwara, University of Oregon

Janet Gornick, City University of New York-Graduate Center

Discussant: Pierrette Hondagneu-Sotelo, University of Southern California

This session deals with the politics of families, one of the most hotly contested aspects of the "culture war" that has divided American society. Rather than looking backward at these battles and seeking their roots or adjudicating blame, the panelists will be invited to look forward to what sociological thinking about rights and citizenship can suggest about a more empowering politics for diverse families in the coming decades.

Discussant: Rhonda F. Levine, Colgate University

This session will examine the obligations of citizenship as a crucial aspect of democracy and address the basic question, what is the price of citizenship to ensure social rights? Presentations will focus on civic engagement from several different vantage points, including the obligation of students and faculty to use privileged positions for the greater good through collaborative university-community research and assessing how new and different modes of citizen participation shape both policy and protest in the US that can lead to a greater sense of inclusion, participation, and social rights. This session takes up issues that are fundamental to discussing the sociology of citizenship by focusing on not only the rights of citizens but the obligations of being a citizen in a democracy like the United States. In other words, what is necessary on the part of individual citizens to ensure that we have inclusion, participation and social rights?

Immigrants, Corporate Detention, and Human Rights: The Burgeoning Movement in Georgia. Azadeh Shahshahani, ACLU-Georgia

"Immobilizing Immigrants" is an interdisciplinary panel representing the range of intellectual production and practice surrounding the issues of immigrant detention in the United States. The panelists examine immigrant detention and deportation from multiple vantage points noting its rapid expansion since the 1990s. The panelists will critically analyze collapsing categories of state power—local and federal authorities as well as criminal and immigration enforcement powers—that occur in the contemporary episode of detention expansion. In addition, the panelists will address the impact that these collapsing powers have on the bodies and rights of detainees—blurring distinctions between criminals and immigrants as well as citizens and noncitizens—often resulting in widespread abuse and death within the decentralized immigrant detention infrastructure.

251. Special Session. Reimagining Community: Heterogeneity in the Latino Population

Session Organizer and Presider: Regine Ostine Jackson, Emory University

Presider: Regine Ostine Jackson, Emory University

Panel: Suzanne Oboler, City University of New York-John Jay College and Latino Studies Journal

Mary Romero, Arizona State University

A number of scholars and intellectuals have warned against the danger of homogenizing the Latino population. Their unabated growth and settlement in new contexts, such as the American south, make questions about what is obscured by “totalizing representations” of Latinos more urgent. In this session, panelists will consider how we might reimagine representations of Latinos in the US to account for the heterogeneous medley of nationalities that comprise the community, the diversity of circumstances under which various groups migrate and create communities, the divergent race and class obstacles they face, and their different relationships to native-born Americans.

252. Regional Spotlight Session. Race and Labor Organizing in the South, Old and New (co-sponsored with the Section on Labor and Labor Movements)

Session Organizers and Presiders: Kate Bronfenbrenner, Cornell University; Cynthia M. Hewitt, Morehouse College

Panel: Kate Bronfenbrenner, Cornell University

Stewart Acuff, Utility Workers Union of America

William Jones, University of Wisconsin-Madison

The year 2010 marks the 64th anniversary of Operation Dixie, the million dollar Congress of the Industrial Organizations (CIO) effort to organize and build power in the South. While the effort from 1946-1953 was not ultimately successful, labor learned important lessons about the significance of the South for the labor movement, lessons they then built on in the years that followed including organizing victories among paper mill workers in the 1940s, Memphis sanitation workers in 1968, or the apparel and textile workers in ACTWU's Southern Region in the 1970s and 1980s. More recently we have seen a new wave of organizing wins among workers in building services, nursing homes, teachers, and food processing. All of these victories occurred in a climate dominated by employers virulently opposed to unions and extremely adept at exploiting race, citizenship status, class, and gender divisions in the workplace to thwart or crush union organizing initiatives. However, when we look at the organizing numbers we know that the South has great unrealized potential for organizing, as evidenced by the fact that when unions have put resources and energy into organizing in the South they have had equal if not greater success than other regions. Nonetheless, we still have yet to see another ambitious organizing proposal such as Operation Dixie. Organizing the South is an especially timely topic for the 2010 ASA meeting in Atlanta, because of the tremendous increase in international migration to southern states. The Black/White Southern binary, which has been difficult for the labor movement to deal with, has been broken as Latino/ and Asian immigrants have become part of the “New South.” How will this new immigration and the changing landscape of citizenship change labor’s strategy in the South? It is also timely in the aftermath of last year’s election when unions played a significant role in working together with the Obama campaign to register and turn out young, Black, immigrant, and independent voters.

253. Teaching Workshop. Getting Published in TRAILS, the ASA's New Teaching Resources and Innovations Library for Sociology

Session Organizer and Leader: Margaret Weigers Vitullo, American Sociological Association

Co-Leader: Valerie D. Jiggetts, American Sociological Association

TRAILS is the first ever interactive, on-line digital library of peer-reviewed teaching materials for sociology. In addition to providing nearly 2,800 teaching resources in over 70 subject areas, it also creates an entirely new way for faculty to demonstrate their scholarship of teaching and learning for promotion and tenure committees. The first part of the workshop will include a brief history of the ASA's Teaching Resource Center (TRC) and explain how TRAILS fits into and extends the TRC tradition. Next, participants will be introduced to TRAILS and learn how to navigate the site as a user. The third part of the workshop will include a detailed discussion of the criteria that TRAILS area editors use when evaluating new submissions, and provide a step-by-step demonstration of the TRAILS on-line submission system.

Immigration transforms economic, social, cultural and political environments in locations of settlement. Such transformations often realign patterns of both group-based conflict and collaboration on multiple levels (local, regional, national) and involve both established and recently-arrived groups. This session seeks papers exploring various communities, historical and national contexts that will help us better understand the nature of inter-group conflict and collaboration related to international migration.

278. Thematic Session. Religion, Transnational Immigrants, and Citizenship (Co-sponsored with Association for the Sociology of Religion)

Discussant: Rhys H. Williams, Loyola University-Chicago

Immigration to the United States, and indeed, around the world, is increasingly marked by what is called "transnationalism." Given the shrinking world due to physical transportation and electronic communication, migrants are more likely to move back-and-forth, more likely to remain actively involved in life in their homelands as well as their adopted societies, and be cultural "exporters" as well as "importers." For many religious people, "place" has a particular religious meaning, and it must be modified or recreated as part of immigration. This often leads to changing religious identity. On the other hand, for many immigrants, a new land means encounters with new and different religious others, with subsequent affects on identity - sometimes syncretic and other times defensive and reactive. How the transnational dimensions of immigration have affected religion - and the religious lives of people both migrating and staying behind - has been the topic of a recent crop of interesting books. Similarly, another spate of recent scholarship has been examining the dynamics of public and civic engagement of immigrants, and the second and third generations of immigrant families. Important dimension of this incorporation are questions of citizenship, voting, active participation in civil society, and the like. Issues of place and religion have obvious implications for citizenship, not least of which is due to the fact that many religious groups have theological commitments that put them in some tension with the concept of citizenship in a nation-state. It is time to bring these two streams of scholarly concern together by studying the intersection of religion, transnational immigrants, and citizenship.

279. Thematic Session. Urbanization, World Cities, and Citizenship

- Session Organizer and Presider: Michael Timberlake, University of Utah
- Panel: Neil Brenner, New York University
- Patricia Fernandez-Kelly, Princeton University
- Rachel Harvey, Columbia University
- Panelists explore the meanings of urbanism urbanization in relation to globalization. The world's great cities are recognized as hubs in the transnational flows of information, capital, commodities, and people. Questions about citizenship challenge many residents of these "world cities," including recent immigrants, the longer term residents, and urban institutions. The challenges, tensions, and creative responses to “globalization at home” in world cities are explored in this session. The session begins with consideration of the problematic of globalized (or generalized) urbanization, focusing specifically on the nature of urbanization itself as a key dimension of capitalist modernity. It then moves on to questions of citizenship and identity in relation to “world cities,” examining the myriad ways in which residents of these global spaces challenge, and are challenged by, ascribed identities and the attendant rights of citizenship.

280. Special Session. Black Folk and the Sociology of Knowledge: Re-writing the History of American Sociology

Hilton Atlanta, Room 305, Third Floor

Session Organizer: Earl Wright, Texas Southern University

Presider: Obie Clayton, Morehouse College

Panel: David M. Ferguson, University of Chicago

Zandria Felice Robinson, Northwestern University

Earl Wright, Texas Southern University

Discussant: Thomas C. Calhoun, Jackson State University

This session examines the contributions of Black sociologists and predominately Black institutions to the establishment and development of sociology in America. Consistent with the 2010 conference theme emphasizing inclusion, participation and social rights, the papers delivered in this session provide historical examinations of the social science research efforts of Black sociologists addressing social justice issues while simultaneously impacting the discipline in topical areas including the sociology of the south, urban sociology, research methods and theory. Moreover, the major theme of this session centers on the framing of the more than one hundred year sociological marginalization of early Black sociologists and departments of sociology at predominately Black institutions through the sociology of knowledge perspective that leads to conclusions, for example, supporting the idea that the first American school of sociology, the Atlanta Sociological Laboratory (1895-1917), should be canonized with as much vigor as the vaunted Chicago School of Sociology (1915-1930).

281. Special Session. Climate Change and the Interdisciplinary Sociologist: Working across Boundaries on the Human Dimensions of Global Environmental Change

Hilton Atlanta, Grand Salon A, Second Floor

Session Organizer and Presider: Joane Nagel, University of Kansas

Panel: Penelope Canan, University of Central Florida

Barbara Entwisle, University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill

Sharon L. Harlan, Arizona State University

Joane Nagel, University of Kansas

Sammy J. Zahran, Colorado State University

Discussant: Kathleen J. Tierney, University of Colorado-Boulder

Global climate change is altering biogeochemical cycles, weather systems, and the world's major ecosystems in ways that will bring about some of the most important social changes since the industrial revolution. The transition to low carbon economies in the twenty-first century has vast implications for human communities around the world: in the global North and South, in urban, suburban, and rural communities, and among racial, ethnic, class, age, gender, and regional divisions within communities. The implications of this next great transformation are far beyond the expertise of natural science researchers and offer an important opportunity for sociologists in important broad-based scientific research.

This panel will provide a forum for sociologists who have been involved in collaborations outside the social sciences to share their experiences and lessons learned from these interdisciplinary projects. Panelists will discuss their work with bioscientists, geoscientists, physical geographers, engineers, and other non-sociologists in response to these five questions: 1) What is the project about—title, focus, funding? 2) Who is involved, and what role do sociologists play? 3) How are the work, data access, and publication opportunities organized? 4) What have you learned from doing this kind of research, and how is it the same as/different from sociology-only or social science-only research projects? 5) Do you have any advice for colleagues who wish to engage in interdisciplinary climate change research?

282. Departmental Workshop. Findings from Three Waves of the Bachelor's and Beyond Survey: Implications for Departments Developing Curriculum and Extra-Curricular Activities in a Recession-Racked Economy

Session Organizers and Co-Leaders: Mary Scheuer Senter, Central

Michigan University; Roberta M. Spalter-Roth, American

Sociological Association

Between 2005 and 2009 the percentage of sociology majors who are very satisfied with the major fell by 30 percent, and that a relatively small percentage of undergraduate majors go on to graduate school in sociology. This workshop focuses on the implications for faculty members and departments of a four year National Science Foundation funded longitudinal study of a cohort of sociology. The findings are particularly important in light of students and parent's worries about what students can do with a bachelor's degree in sociology in the current recession-racked economy. In a climate of faculty speed up, a new faculty handbook, based on the study findings, demonstrates the importance of integrating student's needs for careers into activities that faculty members are already doing. A variety of suggestions are put forward for improving career advising, integrating career building assignments into courses, and enhancing the activities that can yield positive career outcomes. All of these activities are based on emphasizing the theories, skills, perspectives, and concepts that are central to the discipline. In addition, workshop attendees will be introduced to a public use data set that can be used in methods classes and in department assessments. Participants will be encouraged to discuss the implications of the findings for the ways in which their departments might adjust their programs to help students find positions that reflect the skills they learned as sociology majors.

283. Professional Workshop. Being LGBT in the Academy (co-sponsored with Sociologists for Women in Society)

Hilton Atlanta, Room 307, Third Floor

Session Organizer: Timothy Adam Ortyl, University of Minnesota

Panel: Mary Bernstein, University of Connecticut

Nikki Jones, University of California-Santa Barbara

Salvador Vidal-Ortiz, American University

Carla A. Pfeffer, Purdue University-North Central

Dina Perrone, California State University- Long Beach

In this workshop, faculty will discuss their experiences in tenure track jobs at a variety of college and university settings. Issues to be discussed include: the academic job market, the Lavender Vitae, being out on campus, issues related to promotion and tenure, mentoring LGBT students, building rapport with colleagues, and the intersectionality of identities. Also, in light of the findings of the recent report from the ASA Status Committee on

Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual, and Transgender Persons in Sociology, the panel will discuss the challenges encountered by transgendered people in academic employment. This workshop is co-sponsored by the ASA LGBTQ Caucus, the ASA Sexualities Section, the ASA Sex and Gender Section, and Sociologists for Women in Society.

These papers use methods that involve extensions of recent methodological innovations in the examination of inequality and change over time. Methods used include the following: 1) Variance Function Regression, that simultaneously models both the mean and variance of an outcome variable as functions of covariates; 2) Hierarchical Age-Period-Cohort Regression, and 3) decomposition of covariance. These methods are applied to several substantive problems, such as health disparities, gender inequality, change over time in prejudicial attitudes, and economic insecurity.

Panel: Christophe Bertossi, Institute Francais des Relations Internationales
Jan Willem Duyvendak, Universiteit van Amsterdam
Danielle Joly, University of Warwick

Discussant: John Bowen, Washington University-St. Louis

This session is first in a pair of panels that discuss policies and practices of integration of immigrant and minority populations in different national settings. One central focus will be to question the theoretical and empirical utility of a "national model" approach to explain policies and practices regarding citizenship, nationality, and rights. To what extent are policies and practices consistent across institutional domains and levels (local, regional, national)? How stable are practices and policies over time? What are the process by which political consensus are formed? This panel on 'Western European immigrant countries' (Britain, France and the Netherlands) will look into the, rather recent, construction of national models of immigration and integration: what is the importance of these "models" in the public, political and scientific debates? How are differences and similarities between countries in this respect constructed (both with regard to the settler societies and compared to each other)? Is the 'national model' applied in the same way to post-colonial migrants as to migrants who come from other countries? Does the recent politics of national models in Europe articulate the objective of integration of minority group members in relation to the level of racial discrimination against these marginalized groups?

Labor's Priorities for the Obama Era, and the Employee's Rights Bill. Stewart Acuff, Utility Workers Union of America

The historical spread and expansion of civil and political rights has extended to social and economic rights such as full employment and access to well-paying jobs. This thematic session explores the development of discourses in communities about economic rights, the strategies of labor and other social movements, and the political processes that produce or have not yet produced policy achievements for labor. Victoria Johnson provides historical background on the changing conceptualizations of workers as producers with rights, and the consequences for labor action through US history. Dan Clawson will discuss the fact that in the United States workers have no right to paid sick leaves or vacations, are seriously restricted in their right to take the vacations they theoretically have, and may be penalized or fired for taking sick leave. Stuart Acuff, AFL CIO organizer in Atlanta for many years, now with the Utility Workers Union of America and co-author of the book Getting America Back to Work, will speak on labor's priorities for the Obama era, especially the Employee's Rights Bill.

 Representing government's most significant effort at improving housing conditions and opportunities, the Housing Act of 1949 set up a national housing goal of providing "a decent home and suitable living environment for every American family." Yet more than 60 years later, it remains unclear what this goal precisely entails or how to achieve it. The definition of decent housing is elusive, in part, because of the multidimensional nature of housing as a commodity. What constitutes decent housing in terms of its size, structure type, tenure, price and affordability, location, and access to quality amenities such as schools, transportation, recreation and employment? How is good housing a tool for providing families with community membership and opportunities for social and economic advancement? Is it good policy to allow the private sector and in particular, the finance industry to have so much control and influence over the allocation of such an important commodity? What role should government play, including local, state and federal government, in the provision of housing, particularly under conditions of economic disparities and inequalities? In a country where many families live in housing situations that approximate opulence, why are so many families unable to afford any housing to the point where homelessness remains a chronic condition? This session looks at the rights and responsibilities of communities, governments, and the market to establish workable solutions to the acquisition of "a suitable living environment for every American family."

As immigration supplies people to rich countries whose birth rates have declined, states face a myriad of decisions about if or how much to integrate these strangers through naturalization and nationality policies. Countries differ greatly in their politics. Often left parties want open integration, right parties prefer a tighter approach, and anti-immigration parties want none of it). Countries also differ in the structures of immigration and naturalization institutions. Immigrants must wait 12 years in Switzerland but only 2 in Australia, and the UK and the Netherlands have added tests for governmental and cultural norms and values. There are clear consequences for accepting strangers or keeping them at arms length. The immigrants and their children clearly suffer when they are denied citizenship. In the Americas these strangers are largely from the Hispanic South and East Asia, but in Europe they come from Eastern European, African and the Middle Eastern. A significant number of European immigrants are Muslim. This session looks at how advanced industrialized countries differ in their approaches of making citizens out of strangers.

Discussant: Cecilia Menjivar, Arizona State University

The sociology of citizenship has largely overlooked religion. While the sociology of religion has recently informed new scholarship on immigrant religious life and congregations, most of this research ignores critical social themes such as immigrant rights, citizenship, membership, belonging, and of processes of social inclusion and exclusion. This panel will focus on the diverse ways in which spirituality, religious institutions, practices, and identities are informing, challenging, and in some cases transforming state-based notions of citizenship. Drawing from diverse research reported in three new books authored by the speakers, the panelists will consider this question: How does religion clash, challenge or affirm state-based notions of citizenship for new immigrants? Nearly 40 million foreign-born people live, work and study in the United States today, yet many of them do so outside of full social citizenship and state citizenship rights. Panelists will discuss ways in which religion informs, challenges or affirms state-based rights.

Discussant: Suzanne Oboler, City University of New York-John Jay College and Latino Studies Journal

This panel addresses the potential for and obstacles to African-American/Latino/a alliance-building in the process of building an alternative citizenship, a citizenship from below—one that challenges the current reduction to the right to vote, and focuses instead on collective decision-making and empowerment, and ongoing active participation in the public sphere. The panel's point of departure is the well-worn fact that legal citizenship has neither insulated African Americans and Latino/as from the realities of social and economic inequalities in US society, nor has it guaranteed them equal protection under the law. Instead, the dispensability and abandonment of poor black and brown citizens visibly continues unabated, whether in the form of the ongoing indifference toward poor African Americans and Latino citizen-victims of Katrina; in the rising "warehousing" of racial minorities in the privately-run prisons around the country; in the ongoing unemployment, homelessness and poverty in both communities. In the context of ongoing denial of equal opportunity and full justice for both groups, and despite the media's exploitation of racial differences and divisions, African Americans and Latino have often come together, building solidarity and a shared engagement in common struggles for full equality and social justice. This panel will focus on those moments to assess the current state of African American/Latino relations, and explore such potentially-contentious issues as immigration, poverty, homelessness and unemployment, political representation and coalition building, and race and the meaning of blackness—in short, black-latino alliance building and the potential for citizenship from below in the US today.

Gender, Race, and Resistance: Involuntary Sterilization in Georgia, 1937-1970. Amy V. D'Unger, Georgia Institute of Technology

This session examines historical forms of social control in the South. Bailey and Tolnay will present evidence from a newly constructed database for southern lynch victims that includes individual- and household-level information for the roughly 40% of victims (over 1,000 cases) who were successfully linked to their Population Census records. Their presentation will focus on how the availability of micro-level information for a large number of lynch victims can contribute to our understanding of the nature of historical extralegal social control in the South. Beck will present preliminary data from his inventory of southern lynchings that were not actually carried out, but averted, threatened, or feared. Franzosi and Vicari will present the results of an investigation of lynchings in Georgia (1875-1930) taken from Beck's catalogue of some 400 events as narrated in 1300 newspaper articles. On the basis of quantitative narrative analysis, their presentation will focus on event characteristics (actors, actions, their relations in space and time) rather than event counts. Finally, D'Unger will present data on involuntary sterilization in Georgia from 1935-1970, examining the shifting targets of eugenics policies over time. Utilizing medical records and case histories from all those sterilized at Milledgeville State Hospital - at the time, the largest mental institution in the world - the author examines the race and gender trends in those being sterilized and rationales for sterilization in the context of a changing political, economic, and racial climate.

324. Didactic Seminar. Neurosociology and the Social Nature of the Brain

Atlanta Marriott Marquis, M304, Marquis Level

Ticket required for admission

Session Organizers and Co-Leaders: David D. Franks, Virginia Commonwealth University

Jeff Davis, California State University-Long Beach

Since the last half of the 1990s, which Congress officially labeled "the Decade of the Brain", the ASA and its officers have supported special and regular sessions in neuroscience at our annual meetings. From the beginning, these sessions have been very well attended. In 1999 Dr. Franks and Thomas Smith edited the first collection of essays by sociologists dealing with neurosociological issues titled Mind, Brain and Society: Toward a Neurosociology of Emotion. One reviewer of this volume said that all sociologists should read it, but that he feared very few would because of the wall between biology and sociology. In a relatively short time, it has become evident that this bias has significantly dissipated, and more and more articles and chapters dealing with neuroscience are being accepted in sociological journals and books. Much of this acceptance has been because of the support for neuroscience by our leading theorists who have been invited to start off the seminar proposed below. This seminar should aid in demonstrating the relevance of the brain to our social natures and to maintaining sociology's growing interest and necessary progress in this area.

326. Research and Policy Workshop. NSF Funding Opportunities Merit Review Criteria and Proposal Preparation for Professional Sociologists and Graduate Students

Session Organizer: Patricia E. White, National Science Foundation

Co-Leaders: Jan E. Stets, University of California-Riverside; R. Saylor Breckenridge, National Science Foundation; Jennifer Earl, University of California-Santa Barbara; Celeste M. Watkins-Hayes, Northwestern University; Murray Webster, University of North Carolina-Charlotte

This workshop targets graduate students, faculty, and researchers who are new at proposal writing and submission. Representatives from the National Science Foundation (NSF), its research review committees, and grantees will discuss the proposal development process, elements of a competitive proposal, proposal submission and review, and funding opportunities for sociological research. The format will be interactive, allowing for audience questions and participation.

327. Teaching Workshop. Effective Online Courses: Guidelines and Tips about How to Build Them

Session Organizer and Leader: Darlene A. Smucny, University of Maryland-University College

Sociology courses offer exciting possibilities to promote communities of online learners. Online education is an essential delivery mode for the undergraduate curriculum in many colleges and universities, particularly at institutions that serve nontraditional students (e.g., working adults, active military). Instructors face pedagogical challenges when transitioning from on-site courses to the online environment. Challenges include: How is it possible to engage and support online learners, while maintaining academic rigor and quality? How can the online format be used to teach innovatively, while being practical and budget-conscious in terms of developing online learning objects, activities, and teaching resources? This interactive workshop will (1) explore guidelines to create, enhance, and/or improve online courses in introductory sociology; (2) emphasize how to transition, translate, and transform successful face-to-face classroom activities into the online introductory sociology classroom; and (3) demonstrate how to design online activities and assessments that link to course goals and objectives, while supporting online students' specific needs. Workshop participants will apply and develop guidelines to review sample online sociology classrooms and recommend improvements to enhance student learning.

After decades of neglect - following in the wake of the controversial "culture of poverty" thesis - there has been a resurgence of scholarship at the intersection of culture and poverty. This session will explore the role and relevance of culture in the development of a nuanced understanding of the causes and consequences of poverty and social deprivation. Drawing upon an impressive body of empirical research, panelists will discuss a variety of cultural concepts and techniques of cultural inquiry with the twin goals of (1) showcasing differing approaches to the study of meaning and (2) debating directions for future inquiry that bridge cultural and structural accounts of poverty.

In the last decade at the same time the right has increased its influence in government and the media there has also been an increase in scholars doing research and teaching in areas such as labor and social movements, international affairs and global trade, investment policies; as well as corporate governance, environment and public health. In the last several years those two trends have come to a head as scholars undertaking research or teaching in these areas have found themselves increasingly vulnerable to attack from both inside and outside the academy. These attacks have come in the form of threats to their employment, written and verbal attacks on their character, their research, and the company they keep in the media, and in some cases through either legislation or litigation. In this panel we will examine some of these issues and what they tell us about our field, our society and the future of academic freedom in the academy.

In the wake of the global Great Recession of 2008, contestation about the economic rights of citizenship has produced heated political controversies. For decades, market-oriented policies of free trade, widening inequality, and global speculation have eroded and redefined citizenship rights. But the bursting of the speculative bubble opens the possibilities for sociologists to think about economic policies that will expand the democratic rights of citizenship in this historic juncture. This plenary session provides a sociological analysis of the current global financial crisis, tracing its roots to the rise and fall market doctrines and the political forces that support them. The sociological analysis offered in this session also informs us that the opportunities for new citizenship rights are constrained by the reforms to save capitalism from its own excesses, which might only pave the way for the evolution of capitalism, incorporating new forms of ultimately destructive financial speculation.

Discussant: Irene H.I. Bloemraad, University of California-Berkeley
This session is part of a pair of panels that discuss policies and practices of integration of immigrant and minority populations in different national settings. One central focus will be to question the theoretical and empirical utility of a "national model" approach to explain policies and practices regarding citizenship, nationality, and rights. To what extent are policies and practices consistent across institutional domains and levels (local, regional, national)? How stable are practices and policies over time? What are the process by which political consensus are formed? The first panel on 'Settler societies' (USA, Canada, Australia) analyzes the situation in countries with a long history of immigration: how do they perceive their immigration and integration policies? Do participants in the public, political and scientific debates argue in terms of a "national model"? How do these different social, political and academic uses of "models" interplay with one another? Has the very fact that these countries have been immigration societies for so long influenced their public thinking about change and continuity in these policies? Moreover, does the (marginal) social position of indigenous Americans, Canadians and Australians or of other minority groups have an impact on the idea and politics of a national models of integration? If so, in what way does it affect 'modeling'?

Suffering and the Politics of Intimacy: How AIDS Configures Domains for Social Change—Narratives from India and South Africa. Kavita Misra, Columbia University

This panel explores intimate citizenship, which refers to the freedom and ability to construct and live selfhood and close relationships safely, securely and according to personal choice, with respect, recognition and support from state and civil society (Roseneil, 2009). Papers on the panel consider this theme comparatively: across locales, in the United States and a variety of European countries as well as in the global south (India and South Africa); over time; through the lens of a number of different issues (e.g. HIV/AIDS, family policy); and in relation to politics, policy, and political consciousness.

364. Special Session. Fossil Fuels versus Communities

Fossil Fuels and American Citizenship. Rebecca R. Scott, University of Missouri-Columbia

The BP Catastrophe in the Gulf of Mexico: Present and Future Sociological Impacts. J. Steven Picou, University of South Alabama

Discussant: Elizabeth Wilson, University of Minnesota-Twin Cities

The continued burning of hydrocarbon fuels not only is accelerating climate change but also is causing a host of other social problems for low income and minority communities throughout the world. The impacts on communities and polities have led to new conceptualizations of social rights and political claims, and new forms of collective response to environmental dangers. Al Gedicks looks at the challenges of native communities throughout the world to corporate resource extraction. Rebecca Scott examines the culture that has emerged in communities facing negative environmental impacts of mountaintop removal for coal extraction. Steve Picou, who has written extensively about the Exxon Valdez and Katrina, analyzes the social impacts of the BP Gulf disaster. Elizabeth Wilson (an Engineering PhD and expert on the environmental regulation of carbon sequestration, and recently returned from a visiting professor appointment at Tsinghua University in the People's Republic of China) offers a unique perspective as she discusses the presentations.

366. Regional Spotlight Session. Property Ownership and Change: Post-Housing Crash Patterns in Atlanta's Residential Neighborhoods

Atlanta Marriott Marquis, M101, Marquis Level

Session Organizer: Cheryl B. Leggon, Georgia Institute of Technology

Panel: Daniel Immergluck, Georgia Institute of Technology

Harley F. Etienne, Georgia Institute of Technology

In the wake of the recent and historic housing market crash, foreclosed homes have entered into a vicious cycle of owner-occupation, foreclosure, subsequent bank ownership and repeated conveyances. The downturn has been particularly troubling for inner-city neighborhoods where problematic mortgages were common in the years leading up to the housing crash. In this presentation, we plan to contend that this pattern has significant implications for neighborhood stability and change. Using foreclosure and property tax data, we will present findings from a statistical survival analysis of foreclosed properties in the Atlanta area between 2005 and 2009 in order to demonstrate how long homes remained under the stewardship of banks and investors and the implications of this as repeated property sales and foreclosures took their toll on home values in certain areas of the city. Our conclusions attempt to connect our findings to scholarship in both sociology and planning on neighborhood stability and change and suggest some policy solutions for repairing these damaged neighborhoods.

367. Didactic Seminar. Emergent Technologies for Qualitative Research (to 5:30pm)

Atlanta Marriott Marquis, M304, Marquis Level

Ticket required for admission

Session Organizer and Leader: Sharlene J. Hesse-Biber, Boston College

Emergent technologies have pushed against the boundaries of qualitative research practice. This didactic workshop will explore issues regarding how qualitative researchers can effectively apply new technological innovations, including the use of the internet, mobile phone technologies, geospatial technologies, and the incorporation of computer-assisted software programs, to collect and analyze both qualitative and mixed-methods data. This seminar will: (1) Provide an overview of some of the newest mobile technologies (using GPS) in the service of gathering qualitative data: The mobile phone allows the researcher to capture personal experience in real time and space. The collection of user experience data has enormous implications for the study of human interaction. The researcher is able to study experience in context over an extended period of time using fewer resources and in a less obtrusive manner. We provide in-depth examples how this technology might be applied to a qualitative research project. We will also discuss some of the ethical issues emergent technologies raise for social researchers. (2) Computer Assisted Software for Multi-media Analysis: We demonstrate the latest data gathering and analysis software for analyzing multi-mediated data qualitative data—web-based data, audio, video and images using the computer-assisted data analysis package, HyperResearch (www.researchware.com) (3). Transcription Software for Qualitative Data Analysis: We will also demonstrate cutting edge transcription software and discuss how the importance of transcription and its role in analyzing your qualitative data. We will demonstrate the transcription software, HyperTranscribe (www.researchware.com). Please note: This is not a hands-on seminar, but we will be demonstrating the software and provide you with a set of handouts. The seminar will last for 3 hours.

368. Departmental Workshop. The Department Resources Group (DRG): Preparing for Program Review

Session Organizer and Leader: Yvonne M. Vissing, Salem State College

369. Professional Workshop. Applying Sociology to Careers outside Academia: Association, Government, and Non-Profit Opportunities

Session Organizer and Leader: Margaret Weigers Vitullo, American Sociological Association

Co-Leaders: Rachel Ivie, American Institute of Physics; Matthew C. Marlay, U.S. Census Bureau; Josie Leigh Parker, Georgia State University; Allen Ruby, U.S. Department of Education; Mikel L. Walters, Georgia State University; Regina M. Bures, University of Florida

In this workshop, sociologists who have successful careers outside of academia will describe their own career paths and their suggestions for current job-seekers. Some of the questions that will be addressed include: What unique satisfactions can be found in sociological work outside the academy? Where are jobs outside of the academy posted? What specific skills sets are the most valuable outside of academia? What is a KSA and do you really need one? What are the key differences between an applied curriculum vitae and an academic one? What three things should PhD sociologists preparing for an applied job interview keep in mind? Do applied sociologists ever teach? Immediately following this workshop, the panelists will be participating in the "Applying Sociology to Careers Outside Academia: Job Fair," where interested participants can go table to table and ask the panelists for additional insights and suggestions about how to market their particular sociological skills in the applied workforce. Depending on the number of participants, panels may have time to review CVs and/or cover letters and make suggestions. Participants are encouraged to attend both the workshop and the job fair that follows it.

370. Teaching Workshop. Teaching Statistics

Hilton Atlanta, Room 308, Third Floor

Session Organizer: Julie E. Artis, DePaul University

Co-Leader: Rachel E. Lovell, DePaul University

How can we successfully teach introductory statistics to sociology majors? The social statistics class, typically a required course for the major, can be challenging for both instructors and students. This workshop will focus on strategies to integrate and connect the required social statistics class with the rest of the major, including theory and research methods. Specifically, we will discuss different options for course organization and explore a variety of hands-on activities, lab assignments, and options for final projects. Participants will also have ample opportunity to share their own experiences and suggestions with each other.

Discussant: Karin D. Knorr Cetina, University of Chicago

The idea of market morals has been a popular topic in economic sociology of late, with work from various perspectives. This relates back to an older debate about the civilizing influences of economic exchange, which can still be seen in neoliberal economic arguments about the benefits of free trade. However, new research points to a diversity of morals operating in and through markets, and this session aims to present new research about these various epistemic cultures, particularly work that examines the intersection of economic action and other types of market morals, either conflicting or complementary.

The environmental movement and its broader array of environmental politics serve as master frames for revisioning and restructuring virtually all aspects of social structure, personal perception, and human interaction.

Environmental sensitivities permeate an increasing number of sites and institutions, and touch on conference themes of “inclusion, participation, and social rights.” The environmental movement, following the women’s health movement, played a central role in modern challenges to scientific domination, and in developing routes for citizen engagement with science. 2010 is the 40th anniversary of Earth Day, which catapulted environmental concern into national prominence. Despite conservative political attempts to negate scientific knowledge of environmental problems, we now realize that environmental degradation and climate change represent key features of global politics, economics, and diplomacy. Environmentalism, in its broadest sense, has brought disparate peoples together as citizens of the world. This session will explore diverse meaning of that citizenship.

405. Thematic Session. Global Citizenship and Human Rights: Challenging the Nation-State and National Citizenship Rights?

Session Organizer and Presider: Francisco O. Ramirez, Stanford University

Panel: Saskia Sassen, Columbia University

Helen Stacey, Stanford University

This panel focuses on the rise of an international human rights regime and its expanding scope, both with respect to who has human rights and what these human rights are. Some studies have concentrated on the growing role of international non-governmental organizations while others have emphasized the continuing importance of state actors and inter-governmental organizations. A crosscutting theme in the literature is the role of social movements with transnational agendas and multinational actors, often revolving around global citizenship claims. These global citizenship claims include but are not limited to rights claims based on diverse cultures, ethnicities, religions, languages, genders etc. These claims are at times consistent with well-established national citizenship standards but often go beyond the earlier citizenship packages. Do these new currents challenge state sovereignty and the inter-state system? How? Will historically grounded particularistic concerns be linked to universalistic standards? How?

Discussant: Karen Manges Douglas, Sam Houston State University
We have witnessed a tremendous rise of nativism over the last couple of decades, particularly in the post-911 period. Much of this enmity has been directed toward immigrants. We can see the rise of nativism at the different stages in the immigration process. For example, increasing surveillance, construction of walls, the militarization of the border, and vigilante groups have risen to keep immigrants, especially Mexicans and other Latinos, from entering the country. A variety of government-sponsored forms of nativism have also emerged to locate undocumented immigrants with the ultimate goal being to deport them. These include worksite raids, random traffic checks, and so forth. Furthermore, the establishment of immigration policies—in the context of personal responsibility and accountability—has made even naturalized citizens vulnerable to detention and deportation. Finally, a variety of other forms of nativism (hate groups, hate speech, city ordinances, and English-only policies) have served to create a hostile and unwelcoming environment for immigrants and have impeded their ability to integrate into their communities. This session will explore how these trends have affected alterations in culture, race, and citizenship. In particular, the session will examine how the new nativism has changed the construction, definition, and boundaries of culture, race, and citizenship. The session will aim for a diverse set of presenters to ensure that the experiences of a variety of immigrant groups (Arabs, Asians, Latinos, etc.) are addressed.

407. Professional Workshop. Applying Sociology to Careers outside Academia: Job Fair

Session Organizer and Leader: Margaret Weigers Vitullo, American Sociological Association

Co-Leaders: Rachel Ivie, American Institute of Physics; Matthew C. Marlay, U.S. Census Bureau; Josie Leigh Parker, Georgia State University; Allen Ruby, U.S. Department of Education; Mikel L. Walters, Georgia State University; Regina M. Bures, University of Florida; Rosalind Berkowitz King, National Institute of Child Health and Human Development

During this session, PhD sociologists who have experience working outside of the academy will be available to talk one on one with individuals who are interested in exploring applied careers. Job Fair participants can go table to table and ask the speakers for insights and suggestions about how to market their particular sociological skills in the applied workforce. Depending on the number of participants, speakers may have time to review CVs and/or cover letters and make suggestions. Note that the Job Fair is immediately preceded by a panel discussion entitled “Applying Sociology to Careers Outside Academia: Association, Government, and Non-Profit Opportunities.” In the panel discussion the speakers will be describing their own career paths and their suggestions for current job-seekers. Some of the questions that will be addressed include: What unique satisfactions can be found in sociological work outside the academy? Where are jobs outside of the academy posted? What specific skills sets are the most valuable outside of academia? What is a KSA and do you really need one? What are the key differences between an applied curriculum vitae and an academic one? What three things should PhD sociologists preparing for an applied job interview keep in mind? Do applied sociologists ever teach? Participants are encouraged to attend both the job fair and the workshop that precedes it.

408. Research and Policy Workshop. Qualitative Research (based on Workshops conducted by the sociology program at NSF and research funded by the program)

Session Organizer and Leader: Patricia E. White, National Science Foundation

Co-Leaders: Vilna Francine Bashi Treitler, City University of New York-Graduate Center; Gil Eyal, Columbia University; Nicole Esparza and Paul R. Lichterman, University of Southern California; Stefan Timmermans, University of California-Los Angeles

In 2003 (The Scientific Foundations of Qualitative Research) and 2005 (Interdisciplinary Standards for Systematic Qualitative Research) the Sociology Program at the National Science Foundation convened workshops that focused on articulating research proposal development, review and funding expectations and needs for scholars employ qualitative methods. In response to workshop recommendations, in 2005, the Sociology Program initiated a funding opportunity to Strengthen Qualitative Research through Methodological Innovation and Integration. Workshop participants will presents research funded through the initiative and share their experience as peer reviewers and successful competitors for NSF funding for qualitative research. The goals of the workshop is to highlight NSF-supported projects that develop and strengths qualitative research as well as provide insights into effective grantsmanship for securing support for research employing qualitative methods. The format will be interactive, allowing for audience questions and participation.

409. Teaching Workshop. Teaching about Race and Racism

Hilton Atlanta, Room 307, Third Floor

Session Organizers and Leaders: Sudarat Musikawong, Siena College; Rachael Neal, Coe College

Co-Leaders: Emily M. Drew, Willamette University; Paola A. Molina, University of Arizona

Most sociology departments have at least one course introducing students to racial inequality, often titled "Stratification and Inequality," "Race and Ethnicity," or "Social Problems." Although situated in a variety of courses, racial inequality, especially disparities based in the United States, has become a core part of the Sociology curriculum. Despite its ubiquity, discussing the social and political roots of racial inequality often prompts challenges that are distinctive to teaching about this topic. The purpose of this workshop is to provide a venue for instructors of racial inequality to share strategies for overcoming these unique obstacles. Specifically, the participants in the workshop will discuss: 1. Pedagogical techniques that increase students' engagement with uncomfortable topics, such as: -Assignments that use service learning, interviews, and journaling -Class discussions that promote individual reflection about identity and privilege -The use of quantitative data sources (e.g., the Census Bureau and the Gallop Poll) -Assigning interactive class exercises (e.g., theatre or class debates) -Using technology such as blogs, wikis, streaming videos, etc. -Resources such as articles, books, and films -Tapping into disciplines such as history, law, gender studies, and others -Drawing on relevant recent policies and legislation In this session, participants will exchange suggestions for constructing syllabi, especially those regarding how to choose material that is appropriate for students at different academic levels. Willing participants may also bring sample syllabi to exchange with other participants.

7:00 am Meetings

ASA Business Meeting—Hilton Atlanta, Grand Ballroom D, Second Floor

The ASA Business Meeting is an opportunity for members of the Association to discuss important issues facing the discipline and profession. Members are encouraged to attend this meeting convened by the ASA President Evelyn Nakano Glenn.

Summary reports on the Association and its key activities this year will be given by President Evelyn Nakano Glenn, Secretary Donald Tomaskovic-Devey, and Executive Officer Sally T. Hillsman. The meeting concludes with the traditional transfer of the gavel, marking the transition of duties from President Evelyn Nakano Glenn to incoming President Randall Collins.

This open forum is an opportunity for members to share their insights, reactions, and suggestions. Please consult the flyer in your convention tote bag for details on the Business Meeting agenda.

As noted in the May/June issue of Footnotes and the posting of meeting information on the ASA website, members seeking to present formal resolutions should be prepared to provide background materials on the issue to be discussed. Members who missed the July 1 submission deadline may bring their resolutions and supporting background documentation to the ASA Office in the Room 201 at the Hilton Atlanta by 3:00 pm on Monday, August 16.

8:30 am Sessions

436. Thematic Session. Identity and Belonging, Rights and Responsibilities: Biological Citizenship in the Age of Genomes

Hilton Atlanta, Grand Ballroom B, Second Floor

Session Organizers: Joan H. Fujimura, University of Wisconsin
Ramya Rajagopalan, University of Wisconsin-Madison
Genomics, Biological Anthropology, and the Construction of Whiteness as Property. Kimberly Tallbear, University of California-Berkeley

The Social Life of DNA. Alondra R. Nelson, Columbia University
Constructing Ancestry in Genetic Epidemiology. Joan H. Fujimura, University of Wisconsin; Ramya Rajagopalan, University of Wisconsin-Madison

This session aims to elaborate arguments in debates around “biological citizenship,” by generating a productive and constructive discussion across positions. By focusing on the issue of biological citizenship, we hope this session will encourage further conversation amongst sociologists about sociological engagements with genetic research. This session will engage speakers and participants in a discussion that will explore the following questions: What are the rights and responsibilities pertaining to biological citizenship? Who determines an individual’s biological group membership and these rights and responsibilities? Do these rights and responsibilities extend outside territorial borders? How does biological citizenship interact and/or conflict with other ways of determining and asserting group membership?

437. Thematic Session. International, Federal and Local Governmental Policy Responses to Immigration

Hilton Atlanta, Grand Ballroom A, Second Floor

Session Organizer and Presider: Cecilia Menjivar, Arizona State University

Panel: Doris Marie Provine, Arizona State University
Nestor P. Rodriguez, University of Texas-Austin
Monica Varsanyi, City University of New York-John Jay College

Discussant: David Fitzgerald, University of California-San Diego

This panel will discuss both the enforcement policies that are becoming more prevalent in cities across the country as well as in other major immigrant receiving countries, as well as efforts that are being made in localities to support the rights of new immigrants. The session will include three levels of enforcement/immigrant rights policies

438. Thematic Session. Language and Citizenship

Session Organizer: Richard D. Alba, City University of New York-Graduate Center

Presider: Jennifer Lee, University of California-Irvine

Panel: Monica Boyd, University of Toronto

Hartmut Esser, University of Mannheim

Rubén G. Rumbaut, University of California-Irvine

Discussant: Aristide R. Zolberg, New School for Social Research

The focus of this session is on the role language plays in determining access to civic life in the broadest sense for immigrant groups (and their second generations) in North America and western Europe. The intent guiding the comparative lens is to shed light on how this role is affected by multicultural policies, transnationalism, and other contemporary forces. The discussion is likely to challenge the American exceptionalism that is so frequently assumed in the U.S.

439. Professional Workshop. Strategies for Scholarly Communication: Teaching and Learning Journal Reviewing

Session Organizer: Myra Marx Ferree, University of Wisconsin

Co-Leaders: Lisa D. Brush, University of Pittsburgh; Patricia Yancey Martin, Florida State University; Bandana Purkayastha, University of Connecticut

Good reviewers are made, not born, but while journal editors are decrying the shortage of qualified and willing reviewers for manuscripts submitted to them, graduate students and junior faculty are rarely taught explicitly how to become a competent and confident reviewer. Good reviewers also know how to respond effectively to the reviews of their own manuscripts. This workshop stresses reviewing as a collective process of development of ideas rather than simple gate-keeping. We will outline some of the ways that graduate students and new professionals can be helped to acquire and improve their reviewing skills, how to manage review requests, what editors are looking for in a good reviewer, and how authors can respond most productively to reviews.

440. Research and Policy Workshop. Institute of Education Science and NICHD Funding Opportunities: Hands on Help for Winning Grant Proposals.

Session Organizer and Leader: Allen Ruby, U.S. Department of Education

Co-Leader: Regina M. Bures, University of Florida

441. Teaching Workshop. Teaching Work and Family: Resources, Strategies, and Class Activities

Hilton Atlanta, Room 308, Third Floor

Session Organizer: Stephen A. Sweet, Ithaca College

Co-Leaders: Stephen A. Sweet, Ithaca College; Rebecca Glauber, University of New Hampshire; Margaret L. Usdansky, Syracuse University; Krista Lynn Minnotte, University of North Dakota

This interactive workshop focuses on teaching the interlocking relationships between jobs, careers, and family lives. Activities and learning modules developed by the Sloan Work-Family Teaching Task Force will be examined, as well as resources made available via the Sloan Work and Family Research Network. These curricular materials address methods of analyzing data relevant to work-family concerns; national and international policy; historical dimensions and institutional lags; as well as the prevailing strategies workers use to manage jobs and family roles. Presenters will demonstrate how these concerns can be integrated into courses at all levels of the curriculum.

Staying Above the Fray: Framing and Conflict in the Coverage of Education Policy Debates. Eran Tamir, Brandeis University; Roei Davidson, University of Haifa

Who Deserves Good Schools? Cultural Categories of Worth and Education Reform. Julie A. Swando and Emily Meanwell, Indiana University

Discussant: Karolyn Tyson, University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill
The four papers that comprise this session all illustrate -- in distinct but connected ways - how symbolic and cultural understandings of race and inequality contribute to the process of social reproduction within U.S. public education. Examining such critical issues as the school-to-prison pipeline, NCLB's requirements related to subgroups, and the role of the media in covering and conveying messages about educational reform, these papers constitute a powerful collection of empirical research and insightful social theory that will help ASA participants appreciate the need for more sociological analysis of educational discourse and reform.

Producing Policy Ideas: The Topography of Knowledge Regimes in Four Countries. John L. Campbell, Dartmouth College; Ove Kai Pedersen, Copenhagen University

The ongoing financial crisis has made clear the limits of our knowledge about the economy. Recently, several promising lines of sociological research have begun to explore the creation and application of such knowledge. These include work on the performativity of economics, work examining economists as professionals, and work looking at how economic knowledge is used in politics. While groundbreaking research has been done in each of these areas, a conversation across these approaches has just started to develop. This session aims to bring together scholars studying economic knowledge from these or other perspectives to highlight common ground and clarify differences.

This session addresses two important questions about the cross national relationship of global feminisms: How is the feminist agenda in each global region being formed in relation to (with/apart/against) the U.S. feminist agenda? What do women in each global region need in order to be full global citizens, and what seem to be the best current strategies to achieve this? Panelists from varying global regions will delineate specific current needs; and focus on key institutional change strategies for their regions, such as NGOs, micro-credit, gender mainstreaming, other forms of "national machineries," UN committees, or transnational feminist networking, as they relate to national and transnational feminisms.

Following ASA President-Elect's Presidential theme, "Toward a Sociology of Citizenship: Inclusion, Participation, and Social Rights," I propose a session that examines undocumented immigrants' and their allies' creative practices that allow them to participate meaningfully in U.S. society. Increasingly restrictive immigration and settlement policies aim to drive the estimated 12 million undocumented immigrants in the country toward the margins of society. In the face of nearly insurmountable barriers, however, some immigrants continue to organize and make claims. This session will include a set of papers that highlights the policies, discourses, practices, and structural conditions that both delimit and allow for undocumented immigrants' meaningful participation in U.S. society. Shannon Gleeson's paper uses in-depth interviews with undocumented workers to draw out the narratives they use to give meaning to their role in U.S. society despite being excluded from formal membership. Roberto

Gonzales' paper highlights the anonymity and lack of regulations on the internet that create a space in which students can build national networks, organize, and participate in the immigration debate. Based on archival research, Patricia Macias' paper compares practices and political mobilizations surrounding the deportation of women during the early twentieth century mass expulsion campaigns with current deportation raids. Using original survey data and in-depth interviews, Veronica Terriquez's paper demonstrates how union participation teaches immigrant parents transferable skills that parents then use to demand better conditions in their children's schools. In a prolonged period without comprehensive federal immigration reform, the papers suggest policy goals and practices that will further aid undocumented immigrants to participate and feel included in the U.S.

472. Thematic Session. Race and Citizenship in the Americas

Atlanta Marriott Marquis, Marquis Ballroom C, Marquis Level

Session Organizer and Presider: Eduardo Bonilla-Silva, Duke University

Panel: Diego A. von Vacano, Texas A&M University

Agustin Lao-Montes, University of Massachusetts- Amherst

Tanya Maria Golash-Boza, University of Kansas

Since the work of T. H. Marshall, scholars have made claims about the import of the category "citizen" as a vehicle to advance the political, social, and economic rights of disenfranchised groups in societies (workers, women, racial minorities). However, recent scholarship in the USA (Nakano Glenn, Bonilla-Silva, etc.) and elsewhere has documented the limitations of the category as a political tool for effecting change. Some work shows that since nation-states are racialized as white (Charles Mills, David T. Goldberg, Omi and Winant), racial minorities do not fare as well because they are not seen as "belonging" to the legitimate body politics (Elizabeth Aranda). In this panel we propose to examine how the category "citizen" has worked in the Americas at large, that is, we hope to begin a dialogue on the strengths and weaknesses of this category as a vehicle for advancing the interests of "the people" (in Latin America most progressive scholars use this term to refer to the working classes, poor people, and peasants). The discussion should be illustrative as many Constitutions in the Americas did not restrict citizenship or were more inclusive than the Constitutions of Western democracies and the USA. Hence, this panel will explore issues such as the following: 1) Did the fact that Latin American Constitutions were more inclusive than those of Western nations provide a more open space for racial minorities to advance their interests? 2) Were inclusive Constitutions in the Americas limited in the "safety" they could offer racial minorities in their midst given that they also codified the mythology of the nation as "one people" not divided by race? 3) How have Afro-Latinos and Indians in the Americas relate to their nation-states and how have their nation-states treat them? 4) Can the category "citizen" be useful in the struggle for racial equality in the Americas? 5) Does the notion of "citizen," with duties and responsibilities, limit the political spectrum of challenges to the "racial states" in the Americas and, hence, is an obstacle for advancing racial progress? 6) What is/are the ultimate goals of racial minorities in the Americas, becoming "citizens," maintaining some degree of autonomy, or a combination?

476. Research and Policy Workshop. Panel of Study of Income Dynamics - Studying American Family Lives during an Economic Crisis

Session Organizer and Leader: Wei-Jun Jean Yeung, New York

University and National University of Singapore

This workshop will introduce to potential PSID users what data are available for assessing the financial crisis with the Panel Study of Income Dynamics (PSID). The PSID will be able to assess the interconnected impacts of the financial crisis in multiple domains: 1. Home ownership, financing, refinancing and foreclosure dynamics. Foreclosures on property other than own home are included; foreclosures displacing renters. 2. Companion antecedents and outcomes in the family's overall wealth portfolio, 1999-2009/2011. 3. Pension participation decisions - notably the decision to discontinue a pension and draw down the balance - at the expense of pension wealth accumulation 4. Financial outcomes and job loss and the impact of short term distress as measured by K-6 and abuse of alcohol and cigarette recidivism. These are obtained both from heads, wives and the 18-24 year olds in the Transition to Adulthood (TA) module. 5. Financial help from other family members based in part on 2007 intergenerational transfer module. 6. Impact of the economic crisis on the ability of parents and grandparents to cover school costs of college age children (college support has been shown to have benefited from home price appreciation, 1999-2005). Impacts on the economic and psychological well-being of those 18-25. 7. Small business impacts - since many small businesses have intermingled family and business balance sheets. New start ups? 8. Managing cash flow. Families may cut back on their consumption expenses - or another well-known response is an effort to boost cash flow by finding added labor market hours. With some stickiness in their wage expectations, the short run result will be added unemployment or part time, lower wage jobs. For youth, we have two waves of data of those becoming 18-24 before the economic crisis (2005 and 2007/08) and another cohort entering the 18-24 age range under the conditions of the economic crisis. Do parents and grandparents help or are they too strapped to do much? Along with physical health, and self-reported overall health, we have baseline K-6 measures in the core (2001 and 2003) and in TA 2005 and 2007, and can see changes from family events, 2003-2009. Data from the British panel have shown acute rises in distress from problems of paying home mortgages.

Citizenship, Racial Identity and Political Strategies of the "Second Race" in the 20th Century. David Montejano, University of California-Berkeley

This panel explores the role of race in paths to citizenship, even when nations have by liberal/ egalitarian criteria, such as the United States and Canada. Cook-Martin and Fitzgerald examine how citizenship has historically excluded people by perceived "kinds" and that while we want to strive for inclusion within our borders we are always caught in the dilemma of what to do about those outside our borders who aspire to come in and be incorporated. Ayala and Baldoz discuss how the United States' ascendancy as a global empire with the annexation of Puerto Rico and the Philippines in 1898 produced a crisis in the meaning of American nationhood and a crucial moment that redefined the boundaries of inclusion and exclusion. Looking within our borders, Montejano explores the complicated and shifting identity politics and strategies of Mexican Americans in their quest for first-class citizenship in the Southwest.

In Spike Lee's When the Levees Broke (2006), a resident of New Orleans expresses frustration at being called a "refugee" in his own country after Hurricane Katrina: "When the storm came in, it blew away our citizenship too?" From the wreckage of Katrina to the walls of Palestine; from urban slums in the global south to prison walls in the industrial north; from toxic waste to HIV/AIDS, this panel will bring together sociologists and social theorists who analyze the relationship between the spread of neoliberal economics, the shifting boundaries of citizenship, and the production of 'surplus' populations. As a growing number of people around the world are considered 'disposable' - too sick to produce, too poor to consume, too needy to accommodate - they have become the "collateral damage" of the great "race to the bottom." Some argue that modernity has ushered in a new form of bio-power, shifting the boundaries of exclusion and intensifying the abandonment of those expelled from the body politic (Giorgio Agamben). Others focus on the cultural practices of post-modernity, arguing that globalization has weakened social bonds and promoted self-interested consumption in the place of citizenship (Zygmunt Bauman). Still others point to the fact that the fundamental "right to have rights" is being replaced by a contractual relationship with the state (Margaret Somers). Finally, numerous theorists discuss the ways that neoliberal capitalism relies on an "accumulation of dispossession" (David Harvey) that results in a "triage of humanity" (Mike Davis). No matter whether the focus is cultural, social, political or economic, all of these theorists agree that the current age of neoliberalism has produced disposable populations as well as new strategies for governing and policing their expulsion. This panel will bring them into dialogue and provide an opportunity to compare and contrast different theories and manifestations of "advanced marginality" (Loic Wacquant) in the world's various "zones of abandonment" (João Biehl).

Co-Leaders: Roberta M. Spalter-Roth, Jean H. Shin, and Olga V.

Mayorova, American Sociological Association

Network analysis offers a unique way to visualize social relations by mapping connections and pathways of influence, acceptance of innovation. The concepts behind network analysis extend back to Durkheim, and underlie fundamental insights of modern theories such as Granovetter's "strength-of-weak-ties" (1974) or Small's "organizational context affecting network ties." The power of network analysis has even broken out of the confines of the academic arena and has been discussed extensively in the popular press, including the New York Times magazine (September 2009 - "Are Your Friends Making You Fat?") and in Malcolm Gladwell's best selling book The Tipping Point (2002). A few examples of the kinds of questions that can be answered by using network analysis are: *How do organizational contexts (such as sociology departments for example) affect the ability to develop network ties? *Does the position of early users in networks effect the acceptance of an innovation? *How do support networks increase and decrease individual well-being? In this workshop we will provide an overview of the conceptual basis of network analysis, the kinds of questions that it can answer, and the kind of software that can be used. We then describe how we are using network analysis to study the diffusion of teaching innovations through the ASA's paper syllabi sets and the new digital library of teaching materials: TRAILS. Workshop participants will then have an opportunity to explore how they might apply network analysis to their own research questions.

510. Teaching Workshop. Service Learning and Assessment

Session Organizer and Leader: Fayyaz Hussain, Michigan State University

This interactive workshop is intended for those who are involved in service learning and civic engagement programs. It will also help those who intend to engage their students in service learning programs. We will begin this workshop by introducing a number of service learning and civic engagement models. We will also focus on the institutional linkages and organization of these programs. The second part of this workshop will focus on some of the assessment tools that can be used to assess the learning outcomes of students. In particular, we will focus on the use of a pre and post-test model using Bloom's Taxonomy as assessment tool to measure the impact of the service-learning programs (SLP) on student learning outcomes. Empirical data will be presented. A second, longitudinal study utilizing self-reported data also will be examined.

This session best illustrates why we need more sociological analysis of current educational problems and the reform efforts aimed at solving them. Each of these four papers does a superb job of demonstrating meaningful and powerful relationships between structural inequalities in the larger society and how they are reflected in and reproduced by the public schools embedded within them. Individually and collectively, these papers will serve as models of the enormous potential of sociologist of education to shed light upon critical educational policy issues and help shift the public discourse and debate toward a deeper understanding of educational inequalities and achievement gaps.

Discussant: Betsy Lucal, Indiana University-South Bend

A vibrant sociology of gender diversity has emerged in recent years, which invites us to critically re-make our concepts of how gender functions analytically as a prism through which to study difference and inequality. Panelists each discuss their work on gender diversity with a particular focus on how gender expression or gender identity is being conceived of in new and innovative ways and how this work contests constructions of citizenship in different contexts.

Frances Fox Piven, City University of New York
Christopher Uggen, University of Minnesota
Discussant: Joe Soss, University of Minnesota

This panel will bring together leading scholars of poverty and politics to address a set of enduring yet timely questions that lie at the heart of the 2010 ASA conference theme, "Toward a Sociology of Citizenship: Inclusion, Participation, and Social Rights." The starting point for the panel will be the question of how, in the U.S. context, political sociologists should understand contemporary patterns of political engagement by the poor. The goal, however, will not be to rehash well-known empirical studies of class biases in political participation. Rather, the panelists will be asked to use political action by the poor as a vantage point for exploring deeper normative and empirical questions about the state of political citizenship for low-income people in the United States today. Taking the subtitle of the conference theme as our touchstone, we will ask how changes in social rights are reconfiguring political citizenship for the poor and how patterns of political participation relate to contemporary dynamics of inclusion and exclusion in major societal institutions.

Informational Poster Session 244

Research Funding Opportunities and Data Resources

Organizers: Nicole Van Vooren, American Sociological Association

Sunday, August 15, 2010, 1:00 – 4:00 pm

Hilton Atlanta, Galleria Exhibit Hall, Lower Level

This poster/exhibit session provides a unique occasion to meet representatives of major research funding institutions and principal investigators, researchers, and managers of large-scale datasets that are publicly available for use. Each display by a funding institution provides a visual overview of research funding and the application process, materials for distribution, and time for direct individual discussion. Data resource representatives are available to talk about the featured datasets, their analytic potential, and issues relating to access and use, including state-of-the-art Internet services to access datasets. This is an opportunity for meeting attendees to learn about these datasets and their potential for research and teaching. All meeting participants, including students, are encouraged to attend.

The U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC), based in Atlanta, Georgia, is the nation's lead public health agency. Its mission is to prevent and control disease, injury, and disability and to prepare for emerging health threats. CDC seeks to accomplish its mission in partnership, both domestically and globally, by monitoring health, detecting and investigating health problems, conducting research to enhance prevention, developing and advocating sound public health policies, implementing prevention strategies, promoting healthy behaviors, fostering safe and healthful environments, and providing leadership and training. The agency maintains a full research and practice agenda that includes the prevention of infectious diseases, chronic diseases, injuries, workplace hazards, birth defects, and disabilities, in addition to protection from environmental hazards such as lead and other toxic substances. CDC employs scientists from a variety of disciplines including those from the social and behavioral sciences. Each of these disciplines brings a unique perspective to the conduct of public health research and practice which significantly contributes to CDC's mission overall. Information will be available regarding job opportunities, postgraduate training, the Epidemic Intelligence Service (EIS), and funding opportunities.

2. Fellowship Support for Sociologists American Sociological Association

Presenter(s): Roberta Spalter-Roth, Nicole Van Vooren, Janene Scelza, Olga Mayorova; 1430 K St. NW Suite 600 Washington, DC 20005; phone: 202-383-9005; fax: 202-638-0882; email: research@asanet.org; homepage: www.asanet.org

The American Sociological Association (ASA) provides funding to its members through several small awards and fellowship programs. These include the Fund for the Advancement of the Discipline small awards program, Teaching Endowment grants, and the Spivack fellowship program for applied and policy research.

The ASA and the National Science Foundation jointly support the Fund for the Advancement for the Discipline (FAD). The goal of FAD is to nurture the development of scientific knowledge by funding ground breaking research initiatives and other scientific research activities. FAD provides support (up to $7,000) for substantive and methodological breakthroughs that can advance knowledge and lead to the acquisition of additional research funds. Awards are limited to individuals with PhD degrees or the equivalent.

ASA provides awards (up to $2,000) through its Howerly Teaching Enhancement Grants Program to support projects that extend the quality of teaching in the United States and Canada. Individuals, departments, and a program or committee of a state or regional association are eligible to apply.

Through its Sydney S. Spivack Program in Applied Social Research and Social Policy, ASA supports a Congressional Fellowship and Community Action Research Fellowships. The ASA Congressional Fellowship provides PhD level sociologists with in-depth experience as a staff member of a Congressional Committee or in a Congressional Office or agency. The Community Action Research Fellowships provide support up to $2,500 for sociological work with community organizations, local public interest groups, or community action projects.

3. Minority Affairs Program American Sociological Association

Presenter(s): Jean Shin, Karina Havrilla; 1430 K St. NW Suite 600 Washington, DC 20005; phone: 202-383-9005; fax: 202-638-0882; email: havrilla@asanet.org; homepage: www.asanet.org

The ASA Minority Fellowship Program (MFP) has existed since 1974 and just celebrated its 35th anniversary year (and cohort of trainees) with special events and sessions in both Boston and San Francisco. For the 2011-2012 MFP Fellowship year, MFP is generously supported by annual contributions from Alpha Kappa Delta, Sociologists for Women in Society, the Midwest Sociological Society, the Association of Black Sociologists, the Southwestern Sociological Association, and numerous individual ASA members. MFP applicants can be new or continuing graduate students in sociology, who are enrolled in a program that grants the Ph.D. Applicants must be members of an underrepresented minority group in the U.S. (e.g. Blacks/African-Americans, Hispanics/Latinos, Asians or Pacific Islanders, or American Indians/Alaska Natives). Applicants must also be U.S. citizens, non-citizen nationals of the U.S., or have been lawfully admitted to the U.S. for permanent residence. Application deadline is January 31; notifications are made by April 30. Fellowships are awarded for 12 months and may be renewable. Tuition and fees are arranged with the home department. MFP Fellows are selected each year by the MFP Advisory Panel, a rotating, appointed group of scholars in sociology.

4. Sociology Program National Science Foundation

Presenter(s): Patricia White, Jan Stets, Regina Werum; 4201 Wilson Boulevard Arlington, VA 22230; phone: 703-292-8762; fax: 703-292-9195; email: pwhite@nsf.gov; homepage: www.nsf.gov/funding/pgm_summ.jsp?pims_id=5369&org=SES&from=home

The Sociology Program at the National Science Foundation (NSF) supports basic research on all forms of human social organization — societies, institutions, groups and demography — and processes of individual and institutional change. The Program encourages theoretically focused empirical investigations aimed at improving the explanation of fundamental social processes. Included is research on organizations and organizational behavior, population dynamics, social movements, social groups, labor force participation, stratification and mobility, family, social networks, socialization, gender roles, and the sociology of science and technology. The Program supports both original data collections and secondary data analysis that use the full range of quantitative and qualitative methodological tools. Theoretically grounded projects that offer methodological innovations and improvements for data collection and analysis are also welcomed. The Sociology Program also funds doctoral dissertation research to defray direct costs associated with conducting research, for example, dataset acquisition, additional statistical or methodological training, meeting with scholars associated with original datasets, and fieldwork away from the student's home campus.

The Program resides in NSF's Division of Social and Economic Sciences. The Division supports disciplinary and interdisciplinary research, data collection, and studies to improve measurements and methods. Its goal is to develop basic scientific knowledge of social, behavioral and economic systems, organizations and institutions, and human interaction and decision-making. It also provides support for research conferences, doctoral dissertation project, international group travel, and the development data resources and infrastructure.

5. National Center for Education Research Institute of Education Sciences, U.S. Department of Education

Presenter(s): Allen Ruby; 555 New Jersey Ave., NW Suite 611B Washington, DC 20208; phone: 202-219-1591; fax: 202-219-2030; email: Allen.Ruby@ed.gov; homepage: <http://ies.ed.gov>

Funding Opportunities at the Institute of Education Sciences

The Institute of Education Sciences offers competitive grants for education research through the National Center for Education Research (NCER) and the National Center for Special Education Research (NCSE). NCER and NCSE support research activities to improve the quality of education (including early intervention for children with disabilities) and thereby, increase student academic achievement, reduce the achievement gap between high-performing and low-performing students, and increase access to and completion of postsecondary education. These grants are organized by research topics and under them investigators are identifying existing education programs, practices, and policies that may impact student outcomes along with potential mediators and moderators of their impact; developing new education interventions; evaluating the efficacy of fully developed policies, programs or practices; evaluating the effectiveness of specific interventions taken to scale; and developing and validating assessments.

The primary grant program for both NCER and NCSE is the Education Research Grants program. Under this program, NCER funds research on 14 topics and NCSE funds research on 7 topics. In addition, there are grant programs to support the development of new statistical and research methods, evaluate education programs implemented by states and districts, fund centers on specific research topics, and fund postdoctoral education research programs.

This funding poster will provide an overview of IES's competitive grants program including information on the topics funded, the research goals under which most grants are funded, and the application process. The presenter will be available to provide advice on how to construct a high quality application and to answer design and application questions. For additional information on IES and NCER and NCSE please see <http://ies.ed.gov/>.

6. American Community Survey Office United States Census Bureau

Presenter(s): Tomas E. Encarnacion, Ph.D., Adam M. Anicich; 4600 Silver Hill Road, 3K060F Washington, DC 20233; phone: 301-763-2021; email: tomas.e.encarnacion@census.gov; homepage: www.census.gov/acs

No Long Form in 2010 Census: Where's your social, economic, demographic, and housing characteristics data coming from?

Finding fresh research data used to be difficult. Now data are available on a wide range of topics whenever you want it. Rather than having to wait for the once-a-decade census, the U.S. Census Bureau's American Community Survey (ACS) has emerged as a resource that can strengthen many kinds of research projects with annual social, housing, and economic data. The ACS gives researchers three significant improvements in access to demographic, housing, social, and economic data. First, the Census Bureau's estimates of characteristics for local areas are now updated every year. Second, much of the survey is available through the Census Bureau's user-friendly Internet site, the American FactFinder. Third, the ACS provides a central database for ongoing research.

This poster session focuses on the American Community Survey relative importance to the 2010 Census. The purpose of this presentation is to: 1. Provide an overview of the ACS and the ACS's importance to new demographic, housing, social, and economic characteristics data collection methods and illustrate the shift in sources for small community data from the Census 2000 "Long Form" (discontinued) to the ongoing ACS (which now is the primary source for reliable and timely community demographic, housing, social, and economic data.) 2. Explain the various benefits of using the ACS data. 3. Share tools to assist the data user in acquiring ACS data.

The ACS asks questions of a relatively small number of people living in both housing units (including apartments, single-family homes, and mobile homes) and group quarters (including prisons, nursing homes, college dormitories.) These people have been randomly chosen to represent an area's population and housing. Based on interviews with this small sample, the Census Bureau uses statistical methods to produce estimates of the characteristics covered by the survey for a broad set of geographic areas such as the nation, all states, congressional districts, counties, and more. If time permit, participants will be able to engage in an interactive dialog with a small group of members from the American Community Survey Office Staff.

7. Social Explorer, Inc.

Presenter(s): Andrew A Beveridge; 50 Merriam Avenue Bronxville, NY 10708; phone: 914-337-6237; fax: 718-228-3607; email: andy@socialexplorer.com; homepage: www.socialexplorer.com

Social Explorer is a powerful online demographic research and visualization tool. It allows users to explore local and national census data from 1790 to the present. Based on decades of demographic and programming expertise, Social Explorer enables users to conduct research related to the social sciences, history, business and more with ease.

Last year over 100,000 Social Explorer users created more than 2.8 million maps and 200,000 reports. Social Explorer is used at 16 of the top 20 universities, as ranked by US News, and is in use on the campuses of 19 of the 34 university-based population centers. It has been a go-to resource for the New York Times, with Social Explorer and its president Andrew Beveridge, Professor of Sociology at Queens College and the Graduate Center, having been cited in over 300 articles.

Whether you are a GIS master or have never used a mapping program before, Social Explorer will guide you to the data resources you need in just a few simple clicks. And when you're ready to show off your maps and reports, Social Explorer's slide show tool and Power Point downloads make it easy to impress.

Social Explorer was named an "Outstanding Reference Source" by the Reference and User Services Association (RUSA), a division of the American Library Association. Social Explorer is the only online-only research tool featured among this year's awardees.

Social Explorer and the University of Illinois at Chicago have been awarded a collaborative grant from the National Science Foundation for "Creating and Disseminating Tools to Teach with Demographic Data Maps and Materials," a project to improve undergraduate science skills.

Social Explorer comes in three editions: A Free Edition, which has a limited set of variables, maps and features; A Student Edition, which is similar to the free edition, and is licensed to Pearson Publishing for use in over a dozen Sociology texts, including the best sellers by Henslin and Macdonis, and a Professional Edition with five times the data and more features, which is licensed to colleges, universities and other institutions. The Professional Edition is distributed by Oxford University Press On-line.

8. Electronic and Special Media Records Services Division

National Archives and Records Administration

Presenter(s): Lynn Goodsell; 8601 Adelphi Road College Park, MD 20740-6001; phone: 301-837-0470; fax: 301-837-3681; email: lynn.goodsell@nara.gov; homepage: <http://www.archives.gov/research/electronic-records/>

The National Archives and Records Administration (NARA) is the federal agency responsible for preservation of, and access to, the permanently valuable records of the federal government. The Electronic and Special Media Records Services Division has custody of the permanently valuable computerized records of federal agencies transferred into the National Archives for long-term preservation. The Division has over 200,000 computerized data files from over 100 federal agencies in all three branches of government. Topics reflected in the electronic records holdings at NARA include agricultural data, attitudinal data, demographic data, economic and financial statistics, education data, environmental data, health and social services data, international data, military data, and scientific and technological data.

9. NORC/University of Chicago

Presenter(s): Tom W. Smith; 1155 East 60th St. Chicago, IL 60637; phone: 773-256-6288; fax: 773-753-7886; email: smitht@norc.uchicago.edu; homepage: www.gss.norc.org

The National Data Program for the Social Sciences (NDPSS) is a vital component of the social-science infrastructure. The NDPSS has been described as a "national resource" a "core database" in both sociology and political science, a "gold standard," "the best data available," "the premier academic sociology survey," "the most comprehensive national monitoring of public opinion," and "the highest-quality omnibus survey done in the United States." The two major components of the NDPSS are the General Social Survey (GSS) and the International Social Survey Program. The GSS is currently conducting its 28th round since starting in 1972 and has interviewed over 55,000 respondents. The ISSP has done a cross-national survey each year since 1985 and now covers 46 countries. It has interviewed nearly a million respondents around the world.

10. The Association of Religion Data Archives

Presenter(s): Gail Johnston Ulmer, Stephen Merino, Benjamin McKune, Veronica Roth; 211 Oswald Tower University Park, PA 16802; phone: 814-865-6258; fax: 814-863-7216; email: gmj101@psu.edu; homepage: www.theARDA.com

The Association of Religion Data Archives (ARDA) provides free access to the highest quality data on religion. The ARDA allows you to interactively explore American and international data using online features for generating national profiles, maps, church membership overviews, GIS mapping, QuickStats, QuickLists, denominational heritage trees, tables, charts, and other summary reports. Over 500 data files are available for online preview (including multiple years of the General Social Survey) and virtually all can be downloaded free of charge. The ARDA continues to add new features. Two of the most recent features are GIS U.S. Maps and a Learning Center. Partnering with Social Explorer, the ARDA now provides interactive mapping of demographic data by census tracts and religious adherence data by counties. The expanded Learning Center contains many new Learning Modules for classroom use as well as a Dictionary of Religious and Statistical Terms. Housed in the Social Science Research Institute at the Pennsylvania State University, the ARDA is funded by the Lilly Endowment, and the John Templeton Foundation.

11. Division of Social and Economic Research Agency for Healthcare Research and Quality

Presenter(s): Terceira A. Berdahl, Jim Kirby; 540 Gaither Road Rockville, MD 20850; phone: 301-427-1687; email: terceira.berdahl@ahrq.hhs.gov; homepage: www.meps.ahrq.gov

Sponsored by the Agency for Healthcare Research and Quality (AHRQ), the Medical Expenditure Panel Survey (MEPS) is a vital resource designed to continually provide policymakers, researchers, health care professionals, businesses and others with timely, comprehensive information about the United States population's health, health care utilization, and costs. The MEPS is a continuous on-going nationally representative survey initiated in 1996. MEPS collects data on the specific health care services that Americans use, how frequently they use them, the cost of those services and how they are paid, as well as data on the cost, scope, and breadth of private health insurance held by and available to the U.S. civilian non-institutionalized population. MEPS is unparalleled for the degree of detail in its data, as well as its ability to link health status and health care to the demographic, employment, economic, family and other characteristics of survey respondents. In addition, MEPS is the only national survey that provides a foundation for estimating the impact of changes in sources of payment, insurance coverage, and family status on different economic groups or special populations such as the poor, elderly, veterans, the uninsured, and racial and ethnic minorities. These data have been used to examine factors associated with access to health care, estimates of eligibility for federal programs, racial and ethnic disparities in health, and issues related to the quality and satisfaction with health care. The MEPS is useful for monitoring the effects of social policy on population health, healthcare access, utilization, and quality across time and policy relevant subgroups. All MEPS public use data files are available for down-loading free of charge from the MEPS website: www.meps.ahrq.gov.

12. Division of Labor Force Statistics United States Bureau of Labor Statistics

Presenter(s): Marianne Janes Reifschneider; 2 Massachusetts Avenue, NE Washington, DC 20212; phone: 202-691-5446; fax: 202-691-6426; email: reifschneider_m@bls.gov; homepage: <http://www.bls.gov/tus>

The poster presented will provide data users with information on the American Time Use Survey (ATUS) and the ATUS Well-being Module. The ATUS provides nationally representative estimates of how, where, and with whom Americans age 15 and over spend their time. It is the only federal survey providing data on the full range of nonmarket activities, from childcare to volunteering. ATUS data files are used by researchers to study a broad range of issues; these data files include information collected from over 95,000 interviews conducted from 2003 to 2009. The ATUS Well-being Module, which is being fielded in 2010, uses the ATUS time diary to capture how people felt during various activities; this information can be used to better understand the quality of life in the United States and to develop a measure of society's well-being. ATUS and Well-being Module data files can be linked to data files from the Current Population Survey (CPS). This expands the context in which time-use data can be analyzed.

13. Maryland Population Research Center & Minnesota Population Center American Time Use Survey Data Extract Builder (ATUS-X)

Presenter(s): Sarah Flood, Betsy Thorn; 225 19th Avenue South Minneapolis, MN 55455; phone: 612-624-5818; fax: 612-626-8375; email: floo0017@umn.edu; homepage: www.atusdata.org

The American Time Use Survey (ATUS) is an ongoing time diary survey funded by the United States Bureau of Labor Statistics and fielded by the United States Census Bureau. Data collection began with some 20,000 interviews in 2003 and 14,000 responses have been collected each subsequent year. ATUS respondents are a nationally representative sample of persons aged 15 and older drawn from households who have concluded their participation in the Current Population Survey (CPS), the monthly labor force survey in the United States. For each activity during the day covered by the ATUS interview, respondents are asked what they were doing, where they were, and who was with them.

The ATUS Data Extract Builder (ATUS-X) is a new web-based data dissemination system developed collaboratively by the University of Maryland Population Research Center and the University of Minnesota Population Center. The ATUS public use data are contained in multiple data files, some referring to the person, some to the household, and others to the individual activity. The ATUS-X eliminates the need to write programs to manipulate these separate files to produce a file that is suitable for analysis. It also simplifies the creation of time use variables broken out along multiple dimensions (e.g., time spent watching television at home in the company of one's spouse).

The ATUS-X system available at www.atusdata.org allows researchers to select study populations for data extracts; to create measures of time in user-defined activity aggregations, broken out as desired by time of day, by location, by whether the respondent was engaged in caring for children during the activity or was engaged in eating or drinking during the activity, and by the presence or absence of specified others; and, to request either a rectangular or a hierarchical data extract. Data for survey years 2003 through 2008 are available now and new data will be added as they are released. Customized downloadable datasets come with SAS, SPSS, and Stata command files, which include variable and value labels for ease of use. ATUS-X also provides researchers with accessible and comprehensive online documentation.

14. University of Michigan, SRC Panel Study of Income Dynamics

Presenter(s): Frank Stafford; 426 Thompson, 3200 ISR Ann Arbor, MI 48104; phone: 734-763-5166; fax: 734-936-3809; email: fstaffor@umich.edu; homepage: <http://psidonline.isr.umich.edu/>

The Panel Study of Income Dynamics (PSID) is the world's longest running nationally representative household panel survey. With data collected since 1968 on the same families and their descendents, the PSID is a cornerstone of the data infrastructure for empirically-based social science research. The long panel, genealogical blood-line, and broad content of the data represent a unique and powerful opportunity to study evolution and change within the same families over a considerable time span. The PSID now contains more than 40 years of prospective life histories of families with respondents who have become parents, grandparents and now great-grandparents, as well as over 6,000 respondents who have died since the survey began. These data are being used to support increasingly complex models of outcomes for individuals over the life cycle, for relatives within the same generation of a given family (e.g. sibling models), and for individuals across multiple generations of the same family (e.g. parent-adult child models). Data on employment, income, wealth, health, housing, food expenditures, transfer income, and marital and fertility behavior have been collected annually since 1968. Recent additions include questions on mental health, an expansion of expenditure questions, mortgage distress and foreclosures, and a supplement on philanthropic giving. From 5,000 families in 1968, the study has grown to include nearly 9,000 families and more than 70,000 individuals as of 2009. In recent years, the value of the PSID has been further extended through matching PSID respondents to Census geocodes, permitting the addition of valuable neighborhood characteristics to individual files. PSID data can be used to study the full life course. With rich information collected over many waves on health, retirement, and pensions, and more than 5,000 individuals aged 50 and older, the data support the study of aging. All waves of PSID data and documentation are freely available to Internet users worldwide by accessing the website: <http://psidonline.isr.umich.edu/>. This newly upgraded PSID Data Center is a user-friendly interface that allows the easy creation of customized data files and codebooks in a variety of formats.

15. University of Michigan - PSID Child Development Supplement

Presenter(s): Wei-Jun Jean Yeung; 426 Thompson, 3200 ISR Ann Arbor, MI 48104; phone: 734-763-5166; fax: 734-936-3809; email: ariywj@nus.edu.sg; homepage: <http://psidonline.isr.umich.edu/>

The Child Development Supplement and Transition into Adulthood Study

The Child Development Supplement (CDS) and Transition into Adulthood (TA) study are research components of the Panel Study of Income Dynamics (PSID), a longitudinal study of a representative sample of U.S. individuals and the families in which they reside. The overarching goal of the CDS is to provide researchers with a comprehensive, nationally representative, longitudinal database on children with which to study the dynamic process of early human and social capital formation. The CDS examines developmental outcomes such as physical health, emotional wellbeing, intellectual achievement, social relationships with family and peers, self-esteem, and educational and occupational aspirations. The three wave study first collected data in 1997 from children in PSID families who were aged 0-12. These children were re-interviewed 5 years later in 2002-2003 at ages 5-17. A third wave of CDS was collected 2007-2008 for the children at ages 10-18.

As the CDS youth turned age 18 and older, a new survey called the Transition into Adulthood Study was developed to capture data on young adult developmental pathways and outcomes. This survey fills a gap between detailed information about development up through adolescence, and detailed information on adulthood once PSID panel members become heads and spouses in the main study. Data are collected on health, emotional well-being, community involvement, self identity and perception, expectations, family, peer, and romantic relationships, work, schooling, and more. The study began in 2005 with 745 young adults who participated in CDS and were at least age 18. A second wave was conducted in 2007, re-interviewing the same young adults and newly age eligible sample for a total of 1118 interviews. In 2009-2010 a third wave was collected from 1057 young adults who participated in prior waves and 502 newly age eligible young adults for a total of 1559 interviews. A fourth wave of TA is planned for 2011.

The PSID-CDS archive brings unique strengths to currently available data sets on children and youth, and now, as the sample ages into post-secondary years, has expanded its measures to capture their transitions into young adulthood.

16-19. Eunice Kennedy Shriver National Institute of Child Health & Human Development National Institutes of Health

Presenter(s): Rebecca L. Clark, Ph.D., Ronald Abeles, Ph.D., Augusto Diana, Ph.D., Sidney M. Stahl, Ph.D., Shobha Srinivasan, Ph.D.; 6100 Executive Boulevard, Room 8B07 Bethesda, MD

National Institutes of Health:

- Eunice Kennedy Shriver National Institute of Child Health & Human Development
- Office of Behavioral and Social Sciences Research
- National Institute on Drug Abuse
- National Institute on Aging
- National Cancer Institute
- The National Institute of Mental Health
- National Institute on Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism

NIH, comprising 27 Institutes and Centers, is a major supporter of the social and behavioral sciences, providing an estimated $3 billion in fiscal year 2007. In addition to funding both large and small research projects, NIH also funds fellowships for graduate students, post-doctoral researchers, and senior fellows, career development grants for recent Ph.D.s and more established researchers, supplements to existing research projects to promote diversity in science, center grants, and special grants to support scientific research at educational institutions that have not been major recipients of NIH funds. The NIH Institutes listed above are responsible for more than two-thirds of the NIH funding for social and behavioral research. Substantive areas of interest are broad, and include research in the well-being of human beings across the life course; population studies/demography; the role of education, human capital, and socioeconomic status on health and well-being; physical and mental disability; substance abuse etiology, prevention, and treatment; HIV/AIDS; mental health; health disparities; nursing research; and other research on the role that behavioral and social factors play in health, health care, and well-being.

20. IHIS Project, Minnesota Population Center University of Minnesota

Presenter(s): Miriam L. King; 50 Willey Hall, University of Minnesota, 225 19th Avenue South Minneapolis, MN 55455; phone: 612-624-5818; fax: 612-626-8375; email: kingx025@umn.edu; homepage: www.ihis.us

Integrated Health Interview Series (IHIS): Free Data and Documentation on Four Decades of U.S. Health Status, Health Care, and Health Behavior

The Integrated Health Interview Series (IHIS) simplifies cross-temporal analysis of population health data collected in the U.S. National Health Interview Survey (NHIS), the main source of information on the health of the U.S. population. IHIS is a Web-based system that provides integrated data and documentation covering thousands of sociodemographic and health-related variables from the 1960s to the present. IHIS allows researchers to create tailor-made data extracts containing the variables and years relevant to their own projects. Extensive on-line documentation highlights comparability issues and specifies variable availability, codes and frequencies, and question wording. Funded by NICHD, IHIS helps researchers make consistent comparisons across 4 decades of dramatic changes in health status, health behavior, and healthcare. IHIS data on more than 4 million persons are available for free over the internet (at www.ihis.us) to researchers, educators, and the general public.

21. University of Wisconsin Madison Wisconsin Longitudinal Study (WLS)

Presenter(s): Robert M. Hauser, Tess Hauser, Carol Roan; 1180 Observatory Dr. Madison, WI 53706; phone: 608-262-2858; fax: 608-262-8400; email: jsavard@ssc.wisc.edu; homepage: www.ssc.wisc.edu/wlsresearch

The Wisconsin Longitudinal Study (WLS) is a long-term study of a random sample of 10,317 men and women who graduated from Wisconsin high schools in 1957. The WLS provides an opportunity to study the life course, intergenerational transfers and relationships, family functioning, physical and mental health and well-being, and morbidity and mortality from late adolescence through 2008. WLS data also cover social background, youthful aspirations, schooling, military service, labor market experiences, family characteristics and events, social participation, psychological characteristics, and retirement.

DNA samples were collected in 2007, and in-person interviews with the panel will begin in 2010. Public data are free to download; private data are available by application.

22. Carolina Population Center University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill

Presenter(s): Kathleen Mullan Harris; CB# 8120, University Square, 123 West Franklin Street Chapel Hill, NC 27516-2524; phone: 919-966-5560 / 919-962-1388; fax: 919-966-6638; email: suzanne_hallquist@unc.edu; homepage: <http://www.cpc.unc.edu/projects/addhealth>

The National Longitudinal Study of Adolescent Health (Add Health)

The National Longitudinal Study of Adolescent Health (Add Health) is a study of a nationally representative sample of more than 20,000 individuals that began with in-school questionnaires administered to adolescents in grades 7-12 in the United States in 1994-1995. Since then, the Add Health cohort has been followed into young adulthood with four waves of in-home interviews, the most recent in 2008, when the sample was aged 24-32 years. Add Health combines longitudinal survey data on respondents' social, economic, psychological and physical well-being with contextual data on their family, neighborhood, community, school, friendships, peer groups, and romantic relationships, providing unique opportunities to study how social environments and behaviors in adolescence are linked to health and achievement outcomes in young adulthood. The expanded collection of biological data at Wave IV (2008), including anthropometric, cardiovascular, metabolic, immune function and genetic measures, provides new opportunities to examine the social, behavioral, and biological linkages in health trajectories as the Add Health cohort ages through adulthood.

In this poster presentation, we provide an overview of the Add Health study design and sampling structure; discuss the various public-use and restricted-use contractual data sets available for study; and present new findings from the Wave IV data (released in October 2009). We present descriptive data on health status among the Add Health adults aged 24-32 years, including measures based on biomarkers collected at Wave IV. Using longitudinal data, we trace health trajectories from adolescence into adulthood for key indicators such as obesity, smoking, and physical activity and show their relationship with health outcomes in adulthood measured by new biological data from Wave IV.

Add Health has been funded since 1994 by a program project grant from the Eunice Kennedy Shriver National Institute of Child Health and Human Development, with co-funding from 23 other federal agencies and foundations. Presenter(s): Carissa Scurlock; 921 Chatham Lane, Suite 100 Columbus, OH 43221-2418; phone: 614-442-7375; fax: 614-442-7329; email: Carissa.Scurlock@chrr.osu.edu; homepage: www.bls.gov/nls/nlsy79ch.htm

The Children of the NLSY79 data set profiles the development, achievement, and ability of the children born to mothers in the National Longitudinal Surveys of Youth/79 Cohort. Started in 1986 and repeated biennially, the Child surveys are sponsored by the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics with support from NICHD. The current public release provides Child data collected over a span of more than 20 years and maternal histories that date back to when the mothers were age 14-21. The ongoing Child surveys use mother report, direct assessment, and child self-report to gauge the children's health, abilities, problems, activities, attitudes, school progress, and home environment. Starting in 1994, children 15 and older are no longer assessed but interviewed as Young Adults on schooling, employment, training, family experiences, health, and attitudes. The Child/YA sample ranges in age from birth to thirties and contains significant numbers of minority and economically disadvantaged respondents. More than 7,500 children and young adults were assessed and interviewed in 2008 and an equal number in 2010. While maternal information is included on the Child-YA data file, the NLSY79 Child-Young Adult files can also be merged with any item from the complete longitudinal record of their NLSY79 mothers. The NLSY79 main Youth file contains histories of employment, education, income, training, health, marriage, fertility, household composition, and residence. Information is also available from the mother's interviews about her childcare practices, substance use, illegal activities, aptitude, aspirations, and attitudes. The current public release, available at no cost at <http://www.nlsinfo.org/web-investigator/>, represents 12 rounds of NLSY79 Child and Young Adult survey data as well as the complete histories of their mothers. A searchable, annotated listing of NLS research can be accessed at: <http://www.nlsbibliography.org/>. Details on the NLSY79 Child and Young Adult surveys can be found online at: <http://www.bls.gov/nls/nlsy79ch.htm>.

24. Office of Population Research / Princeton University Mexican Migration Project & Latin American Migration Project

Presenter(s): Karen A Pren; 237 Wallace Hall Princeton, NJ 08544; phone: 609-258-8155; fax: 609-258-1039; email: kapren@princeton.edu; homepage: <http://mmp.opr.princeton.edu/> & <http://lamp.opr.princeton.edu/>

Founded in 1982, the Mexican Migration Project (MMP) has annually administered ethnosurveys to randomly sampled households in various communities in Mexico since 1987. In 1998, the Latin American Migration Project (LAMP) was born. For both projects, each community yields approximately 200 surveyed households in the home country, as well as 10 to 20 households of community members living in the U.S. Responses are converted to electronic format and compiled to form five unique data sets. PERS file contains socioeconomic information for each household member, including basic measures of domestic and international migration. MIG file contains detailed border-crossing, measures of migratory experience of family of origin, extended family and friends, and the social and economic characteristics of the last U.S. trip for each household head. HOUSE file contains measures of household composition and amenities, as well as data about businesses, land, property, vehicles, and livestock. LIFE and SPOUSE files are labor histories, and each record represents a person-year detailing labor force, family/household formation, and cumulative U.S. experience. In addition, we offer the community file with measures of infrastructure, social resources, public services, labor force participation, and education. Currently, the MMP contains 128 communities, while the LAMP includes multiple communities surveyed in Puerto Rico, Dominican Republic, Nicaragua, Costa Rica, Colombia, Peru, Paraguay, Haiti, El Salvador, and Guatemala.

Presenter(s): Monica Espinoza Higgins, Jennifer Martin; 187 Wallace Hall Princeton, NJ 08544; phone: 609-258-0081; fax: 609-258-1039; email: espinoza@princeton.edu; homepage: <http://nis.princeton.edu>

The New Immigrant Survey (NIS) is a multi-cohort prospective-retrospective panel survey of new legal immigrants to the United States based on probability samples of administrative records from the U.S. Bureau of Citizenship and Immigration Services. Two rounds of interviewing have now been completed. A survey pilot project (NIS-P) was carried out in 1996 to test sampling procedures, questionnaire design, and tracking procedures to inform the implementation of the full NIS.

The first full cohort (NIS-2003-1) was sampled during May through November of 2003, yielding data on 8,573 Adult Sample respondents, 810 sponsor-parent ("child proxy") of the Sampled Child, 4,915 spouses, and 1,072 children aged 8-12. The baseline survey was conducted from June 2003 to June 2004. The geographic sampling design takes advantage of the natural clustering of immigrants. It includes all top 85 Metropolitan Statistical Areas (MSAs) and all top 38 counties, plus a random sample of MSAs and counties.

A follow-up interview with 2003 cohort was conducted from June 2007 to October 2009 (NIS-2003-2). Round 2 instruments were designed to track changes from the baseline and also included new questions. As with the Round 1 questionnaire, questions that were used in social-demographic-migration surveys around the world as well as the major U.S. longitudinal surveys were reviewed in order to achieve comparability.

The NIS is a new plan for nationally representative, longitudinal studies of immigrants and their children that promises to provide new kinds of data that will help answer many of the important questions about immigration and concomitantly shed light on basic aspects of human development. The main objective is to provide a public-use database on new legal immigrants to the United States and their children that will be useful for addressing scientific and policy questions about migration behavior and the impacts of migration.

The NIS content includes the following information: demographic, health and insurance, migration history, living conditions, transfers, employment history, income, assets, social networks, religion, housing environment, and child assessment tests. Interviews were conducted in the respondents' language of choice.

26. Spencer Postdoctoral Fellowship in Education Research

National Academy of Education

Presenter(s): Greg White; 500 Fifth Street, NW Washington, DC 20001; phone: 202-334-2340; fax: 202-334-2350; email: info@naeducation.org; homepage: www.naeducation.org

The National Academy of Education/Spencer Postdoctoral Fellowship Program supports early career scholars working in critical areas of education research. This nonresidential postdoctoral fellowship funds proposals that make significant scholarly contributions to the field of education. The program also develops the careers of its recipients through professional development activities involving National Academy of Education members. Fellows receive $55,000 for one academic year of research, or $27,500 for each of two contiguous years, working half-time. ATUS and Eating and Health Module data files can be linked to data files from the Current Population Survey (CPS). This expands the context in which time-use data can be analyzed.

ASA Minority Fellowship Program Fellows

The following current and former MFP Fellows are participating in this year's Annual Meeting Program. ASA and the 2010 Program Committee are pleased to highlight professional activities of these fellows. The ASA Minority Fellowship Program (MFP), in operation since 1974, has been a significant factor in recruiting minorities into Sociology. Fellows continue to make important contributions to the growth of the discipline. The Association takes great satisfaction in acknowledging this form of professional activity.

ASA Honors Program Students

The following undergraduate sociology students were accepted into the ASA Honors Program for 2010. This program requires nearly a week of participation in professional events held concurrently with the Annual Meeting. Students receive full credit for participation only after completion of the program on August 17.

ASA and the 2010 Program Committee are pleased to highlight these students' introduction to the profession of sociology. The Honors Program has a 36-year history of involving sociology students in the ASA Annual Meeting. This year's students are wearing gold ribbons showing their Honors Program affiliation. Please welcome them to their national meeting!

ANNUAL REVIEWS

The Essential Resource for Sociology Research

Annual Reviews offers comprehensive, timely collections of critical, topical reviews written by acknowledged experts. Annual Reviews journals examine 40 focused disciplines within the Biomedical, Life, Physical, and Social Sciences. Our Editorial Committees are specialists in selecting and synthesizing literature into concise, insightful review articles. As a result, Annual Reviews journals are among the most highly cited in scientific literature and are consistently ranked within the top ten of journals for their disciplines as indexed by the ISI® Journal Citation Reports (JCR®).

Annual Review of Sociology

Volume 36 • August 2010 • Online & In Print • <http://soc.annualreviews.org>

Co-Editors: Karen S. Cook, Stanford University and Douglas S. Massey, Princeton University

The Annual Review of Sociology, in publication since 1975, covers the significant developments in the field of sociology. Topics covered in the journal include major theoretical and methodological developments as well as current research in the major subfields. Review chapters typically cover social processes, institutions and culture, organizations, political and economic sociology, stratification, demography, urban sociology, social policy, historical sociology, and major developments in sociology in other regions of the world.

RACE/ETHNICITY: MULTIDISCIPLINARY GLOBAL CONTEXTS

Edited by John A. Powell and Mac A. Stewart

"Race/Ethnicity: Multidisciplinary Global Contexts establishes itself at the rich intersection of race and ethnicity studies. In our new world, where boundaries seem to grow more fluid by the day, this journal is at the forefront of our crucial, global conversation about who we are and where we are going. Race/Ethnicity is scholarship at its best."—Henry Louis Gates, Jr., W.E.B. Du Bois Professor of the Humanities, Harvard University

Special Issue: Human Rights, Social Justice, and the Impact of Race

Volume 3.2 Spring 2010 (single issue price $29.75)

Table of Contents includes:

The Universal Declaration of Human Rights

The Infrastructure of Migration and the Migration Regime: Human Rights, Race, and the Somali Struggle to Flee Violence, Doug Rutledge, Abdi Roble

Perspectives on Durban II, Roy Brown, Camilla Croso, Marco Perolini

Shouldering Responsibility for the Delivery of Human Rights: A Case Study of the D-Town Farmers of Detroit, Monica M. White

Communicating on Social Justice Issues within a Human Rights Framework: Messaging Recommendations for Advocates, Eleni Delimpaltadaki, Julie Rowe

WHAT CAMBRIA AUTHORS SAY

"There is something rare and amazing about Cambria Press—they remain true to their word from the very first conversation to the publication of your accepted manuscript. It is so refreshing to deal with a publisher who is a valiant advocate for their authors. Cambria Press is the best kept secret for academic publishing. Whisper the good word to your colleagues and I am sure that they won't be disappointed. Thank you Cambria for the opportunity of working with people who embody honesty and integrity!"

— Simona Hill, Hip Hop and Inequality,
Professor of Sociology, Susquehanna University

Ageing and Society

*The Centre for Policy on Ageing
The British Society of Gerontology*

...is an interdisciplinary and international journal devoted to the understanding of human ageing and the circumstances of older people in their social and cultural contexts. It draws contributions and has readers from many academic social science disciplines, and from clinical medicine and the humanities. In addition to original articles, Ageing & Society publishes book reviews, occasional review articles and special issues.

journals.cambridge.org/aso

Canadian Journal on Aging / La Revue canadienne du vieillissement

Canadian Association on Gerontology

...promotes excellence in research and disseminates the latest work of researchers in the social sciences, humanities, health and biological sciences who study the older population of Canada and other countries; informs policy debates relevant to aging through the publication of the highest quality research; seeks to improve the quality of life for Canada's older population and for older populations in other parts of the world through the publication of research that focuses on the broad range of relevant issues from income security to family relationships to service delivery and best practices; and encourages the exchange of the latest ideas in gerontological research through the publication of work by international scholars to the benefit of the Canadian and international scholarly communities as well as older adults in Canada and around the world.

Du Bois Review:

Social Science Research on Race

*W.E.B. Du Bois Institute for African and African American Research,
Harvard University*

...is devoted to research and criticism on race in the social sciences. It provides a forum for discussion and increased understanding of race and society from a range of disciplines, including but not limited to economics, political science, sociology, anthropology, law, communications, public policy, psychology, and history. Each issue contains an editorial overview, invited lead essays, original research papers, and review essays covering current books, controversies, and research threads.

journals.cambridge.org/dbr

European Journal of Sociology

Centre National de la Recherche Scientifique, Paris

...publishes articles of interdisciplinary scope which represent some of the best writing in the social sciences today. The journal has a strongly international perspective, with a special interest devoted to the transition from totalitarianism to democracy, to the multiple citizenship and publishes a third issue every year exclusively devoted to state-of-the-art surveys, the elucidation of central concepts and review essays which explore key topics with reference to the most relevant recent publications.

journals.cambridge.org/eur

Journal of Social Policy

Social Policy Association

...carries high quality articles on all aspects of social policy in an international context. It places particular emphasis upon articles which seek to contribute to debates on the future direction of social policy, to present new empirical data, to advance theories, or to analyse issues in the making and implementation of social policies.

journals.cambridge.org/jsp

The Journal of Social Policy is part of the 'Social Policy Package', which also includes Social Policy and Society and the Social Policy Digest. An online resource, the Social Policy Digest, was launched in 2003. The Digest provides a regularly up-dated, fully searchable, summary of policy developments and research findings across the whole range of social policy.

Social Policy and Society

Social Policy Association

...is an international journal that welcomes stimulating original articles that draw upon contemporary policy-related research and associated developments in the social sciences. It contains peer reviewed articles reflecting topical debates and issues within social policy and uniquely, a themed section, edited by a Guest Editor(s). Every themed section includes an introductory piece, a set of peer reviewed articles, a selected review of the key literature, plus a guide to key sources in the area.

journals.cambridge.org/sps

Social Philosophy and Policy

Social Philosophy and Policy Foundation

...is an interdisciplinary journal with an emphasis on the philosophical underpinnings of enduring social policy debates. The issues are thematic in format, examining a specific area of concern with contributions from scholars in different disciplines, especially philosophy, economics, political science and law. While not primarily a journal of policy prescriptions, some articles in each issue will typically connect theory with practice.

The Sociology of War and Violence

SINIŠA MALEŠEVIĆ, National University of Ireland, Galway

Paperback (ISBN-13: 9780521731690) • July 2010 • 376 pages

“...This is easily the best general account of the Sociology of War.”

—MICHAEL MANN, PROFESSOR OF SOCIOLOGY, UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA, LOS ANGELES

“With its combination of theoretical acumen and historical insights, this book is a significant step forward in the reintegration of war into the sociological canon. Both students and experienced scholars will appreciate Malešević’s perspectives on how war made us who we are.”

—MIGUEL A. CENTENO, PRINCETON UNIVERSITY

“This is a major contribution, at once a survey of key intellectual fields (sociological theory, the history of war understood in comparative terms and an analysis of the key social variables involved) and a major piece of innovation, based on a powerful appreciation of ideological and bureaucratic development. There is no better book on the subject.” —JOHN A. HALL, MCGILL UNIVERSITY

NYU Press Is Pleased To Announce Its New Publishing Partnership With The Social Science Research Council

NYU Press is pleased to announce a joint publishing Imprint with the Social Science Research Council (SSRC). Independent and not-for-profit, the SSRC is a pioneer in the social sciences, building international networks, mobilizing knowledge on important public issues, and educating and training the next generation of social science researchers. This exciting publishing agreement will allow NYU Press to publish some of the most innovative and important social science research being done today.

The first title, publishing in November 2010, will be The Measure of America, 2010–2011. This essential report on the quality of life in America is truly path-breaking research of the highest order.

Research you can use

PSID The Panel Study of Income Dynamics

- 37 waves of data collected on a nationally representative sample of nearly 9,000 U.S. families, allowing the study of the full life-course, including: Gen Yers and Gen Xers, Baby Boomers, Retirees
- Demographic, economic, sociological, and psychological data including fertility, marriage, birth histories, adult and childhood health conditions, poverty indicators, income, wealth, expenditures, food security, housing, mortgage distress and foreclosures
- Health and aging data, including retirement transitions, onset and duration of chronic health conditions, activities of daily living, instrumental activities of daily living, mortality, health care expenditures, pensions and wealth accumulation
- Freely accessible, web-based Data Center provides customized datasets in a variety of formats including SAS, Stata, SPSS, Excel, and Text
- Create Intergenerational datasets by linking multiple waves of PSID Data (e.g., multiple generations of family members including elderly parents and adult children)

<http://psidonline.org>

The Child Development Supplement

CDS

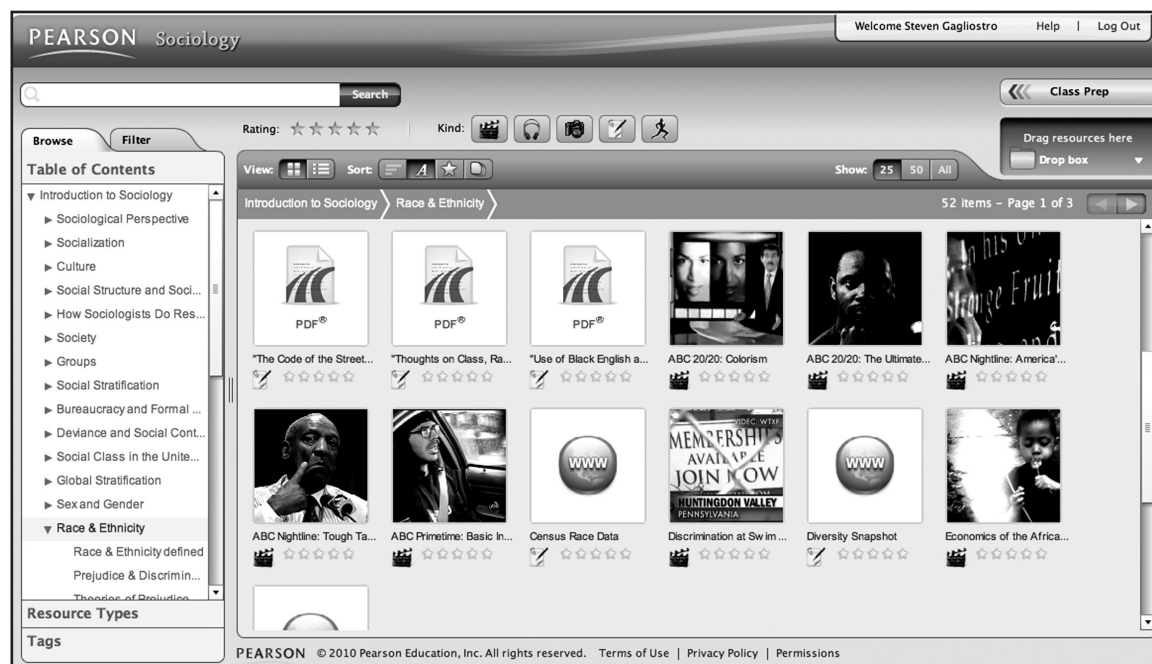

- Three waves of data on 3,500 children aged 0-12 from PSID families who were first interviewed in 1997, reinterviewed in 2002 at ages 5-18, and again in 2007 at ages 10-18
- Re-interview in 2005, 2007, and 2009 for CDS young adults aged 18 years and older during Transition into Adulthood Study
- Measures of child/adolescent cognitive, social and behavioral development, as well as details on extra-curricular activities, sports and community groups
- Rich information about family process and home environment
- Unique comprehensive national time-use information on children and youth of all ages
- Data from all waves of CDS and Transition into Adulthood 2005 and 2007, now available at the PSID website
