From disasters & climate change, to socioeconomic, health, & data inequities, disability & ableism play a role in shaping some of our most pressing social problems. Yet, historically, sociologists have not been trained to engage meaningfully with disability, and sociology as a field has not included many disabled scholars. The panelists, all disabled scholars with expertise in the sociology of disability, are diverse in terms of career stage & research focus.