Annual Meeting Policies

ASA Council Policy Statement on Social Media during the Annual Meeting

In ASA sessions, some members of the audience may use twitter or other forms of social media to share the results of papers presented. In rare instances people will record sessions; if you prefer that audio recordings or video recordings not occur, please share your request with the audience. ASA encourages all program participants to be sensitive to the requests of others.

Anti-Harassment Policy

ASA has received notice from several sources that graduate students and faculty have experienced racial and sexual harassment at various conference venues. ASA reminds everyone: Our Annual Meeting is convened for the purposes of professional development and scholarly educational interchange in the spirit of free inquiry and free expression. Harassment of colleagues, students, or other conference participants undermines the principle of equity at the heart of these professional fora and is inconsistent with the principles of free inquiry and free expression. Consequently, harassment is considered by ASA to be a serious form of professional misconduct.

The following Anti-Harassment Policy outlines expectations for all those who attend or participate in ASA meetings.

It reminds ASA meeting participants that all professional academic ethics and norms apply as standards of behavior and interaction at these meetings.

1. Purpose

ASA is committed to providing a safe and welcoming conference environment for all participants, free from harassment based on age, race, ethnicity, national origin, religion, language, sexual orientation, gender identity or gender expression, disability, health conditions, socioeconomic status, marital status, domestic status, or parental status (hereafter, simply harassment).

“Participant” in this policy refers to anyone present at ASA meetings, including staff, contractors, vendors, exhibitors, venue staff, ASA members, and all other attendees.

2. Expected Behavior

All participants at ASA meetings are expected to abide by this Anti-Harassment Policy in all meeting venues including ancillary events as well as official and unofficial social gatherings.

- Follow the norms of professional respect that are necessary to promote the conditions for free academic interchange.
- If you witness potential harm to a conference participant, be proactive in helping to mitigate or avoid that harm.
- Alert conference security personnel or law enforcement if you see a situation in which someone might be in imminent physical danger.

3. Unacceptable Behavior

Harassment of any participant is unethical behavior under the American Sociological Association Code of Ethics. Harassment consists of a single intense and severe act or of multiple persistent or pervasive acts which are demeaning, abusive, offensive, or create a hostile professional or workplace environment. Harassment may include sexual solicitation, physical advance, or verbal or non-verbal conduct that is sexual in nature; it may also include threatening, intimidating, or hostile acts; circulation of written or graphic material that denigrates or shows hostility toward an individual or group; epithets, slurs, or negative stereotyping based on group identity.

Attendees are encouraged to immediately report instances of harassment during the Annual Meeting to the ASA Executive Officer, Nancy Kidd, at nkidd@asanet.org, (646) 408-9063 or to the Director of Meeting Services, Michelle Randall, at mrandall@asanet.org. To read the American Sociological Association Code of Ethics in its entirety, visit www.asanet.org and follow the link to “Ethics.”

Welcome from the ASA President

Michèle Lamont

ASA President
Harvard University

C'est avec grand plaisir que je vous accueille dans mon bout de pays, "La Belle Province." That we meet here to debate "Culture, Inequality and Social Inclusion across the Globe" is particularly fitting as these very topics have been at the center of the construction of the Canadian community since 1608, in the context of multiple ethno-national and colonial conflicts.¹ Today, many perceive Canadian society as exemplary when it comes to collective wellbeing, immigration policy, and multiculturalism, while Quebec distinguishes itself by its remarkable (cooperative-based) social economy and vigorous anti- neo-liberalism. This, and much more, makes Canadian and Quebec societies particularly intriguing for curious sociologists. I invite you to learn about them in the four days ahead.

The 2017 program committee has worked hard to assemble an intellectual feast that appeals to a range of palates. Whether you prefer to go for our "menu degustation" (the thematic program (!)), the comfort food (however you define it), or to nibble here or there, we have no doubt that you will leave the table satisfied (gastronomical metaphors being de rigueur in Quebec).

The plenary and presidential session speakers include a number of prominent non-sociologists such as philosophers Nancy Fraser and Will Kymlicka, economists Robert Frank and Nobel Laureate Joseph Stiglitz, First Nations advocate Audrey Sampson, President of the Open Society Foundation Christopher Stone, political scientists Jacob Hacker and Paul Pierson, and law professor Joan Williams. Given our global theme, we have also invited prominent sociologists from around the world, including scholars such as Mike Savage (London School of Economics), Pierre-Michel Menger (Collège de France), Oleg Kharkhordin (European University at St Petersburg) and Laurent Thévenot (Ecole des Hautes Etudes en Sciences Sociale). We will hold twenty Author-Meets-Critics sessions on books carefully selected from nearly 300 new publications. The Saturday evening plenary featuring Ta-Nehisi Coates in conversation with Bruce Western and yours truly, has unfortunately been cancelled due to unavoidable circumstances.

In addition, we have put together several "current events" sessions that address recent political and social developments in the United States and abroad. These will focus on the "Brexit/Trump" moment (organized by the British Journal of Sociology), Trump's challenges to American democracy and American society, as well as social movements and protests in responses to recent developments.

Another aspect of the program builds on a tradition started last year to host town hall meetings. We will have two such meetings. The first one is on Promoting Diversity, Equity, and Inclusion in Sociology (with the participation of Council members Tanya Golash-Boza, Monica McDermott, and Adia Harvey Wingfield and ASA staff member Jean Shin). The second one is on Sociology's Response to Trump (featuring Executive Director Nancy Kidd, and ASA elected officials Ruth Milkman, Eduardo Bonilla-Silva and myself). There, we plan to discuss the ASA's exciting new initiative, the Sociology Action Network (with ASA member Akos Rona-Tas, who came up with the idea). Of course, no one should miss the ASA business meeting (at 7:00 a.m. on Monday!). I hope that many of you will be able to participate in these sessions.

Building on the work of past presidents, the program committee aims to make tools available to help members maximize the presence of sociology in the public sphere. We will host a number of sessions and workshops with this in mind, including one panel organized by our new Director of Communications, Carmen Russell, with the Scholars Strategy Network and The Conversation.

Finally, I am delighted that the Canadian and Quebec sociological associations have enthusiastically responded to our invitation to organize regional panels, as has our local organization committee expertly chaired by Greg Nielson (Concordia) and Jean-François Coté (Université du Québec à Montréal). These bear on a range of topics including Latinos across North America, the criminal and legal systems of Canada and the U.S., and why labor and the left are so "left" in Canada. There will also be a special session celebrating the 75th anniversary of the publication of Everett Hughes's classical book French Canada in Transition. A number of Canadian departments, foundations, and governmental agencies have made contributions that will allow us to bring Quebec performers to the Palais des congrès.

Despite this abundance of activities, I hope that you will take advantage of the featured tours, hang out at cafés, and make time to register that Montréal is a very special place. And please do engage a few of my co-patriots. They love to hang out. You will discover for yourself how warm and welcoming Quebecers are. I have no doubt that they will be eager to share with you their own thoughts on their unique society and on why this is the best place on earth, especially in 2017!

¹Date of the foundation of Quebec city, the first French colony created along the St. Lawrence river.

Acknowledgments

Assembling the program that is now in your hands has been a considerable endeavor, which has required the professionalism and loving care of a great many colleagues. The challenge was particularly daunting given that the ASA meeting services staff went through major transitions as soon as we started planning the meeting. But everyone rose to the task unflinchingly. Now that the adventure is coming to an end, I feel particularly fortunate to have been surrounded by so many amazing people.

First I want to thank the visionary members of the program committee. You can see for yourself how much thought and creative thinking they have put into generating sessions that build on our theme in multiple and surprising ways. I am thrilled to be able to acknowledge their many contributions:

Sada Aksartova, United States Government Accountability Office
 Kathleen Gerson, New York University
 David Grusky, Stanford University
 David Harding, University of California-Berkeley
 Sally T. Hillsman, American Sociological Association
 Graziella Moraes Silva, Graduate Institute in Geneva – IHEID
 Ann Morning, New York University
 Mary Romero, Arizona State University
 Kristen Schilt, University of Chicago
 Yasmin Soysal, University of Essex
 Anna Sun, Kenyon College
 David Takeuchi, Boston College

Second, the ASA staff has simply been remarkable. Jamie Arca carried more than her usual share of the work until Michelle Randall joined her in the fall of 2017. This dynamo team made the impossible happen again and again. Nancy Kidd was extraordinary as she took on the reigns of the organization.

Third, my Canadian friends and colleagues rose to the occasion in so many ways. The local committee, chaired by Jean-François Côté (Université du Québec à Montréal) and Greg Nielson (Concordia University) assembled a wonderful team that put together great sessions highlighting the breadth and depth of the sociological importance of the region. They also wrote informative pieces for Footnotes and put considerable thought into how to feature Montréal through tours and other activities.

Many Canadian funders stepped forward when they were asked to support our meetings. I am particularly thrilled that the main sociology departments of Montréal stepped up: Concordia University, McGill University, Université de Montréal, Université du Québec à Montréal. My colleagues at Canadian Institute for Advanced Research (CIFAR) were also particularly generous with their help. Other supporters include Pearson, the Canadian Federation for the Humanities and Social Sciences, the Fonds de Recherche du Québec, the Social Science and Humanities Research Council of Canada, the Lucie and André Chagnon Foundation, and Harvard University's Department of Sociology.

I am tempted to single out a great many friends and colleagues who provided particular assistance in reaching out to potential speakers or convincing their institutions to contribute. I will not name names for fear of missing anyone and will thank people individually. But I am acutely aware that it takes a village... or a whole organization to pull together such a large and complex meeting.

Finally I thank my family, and close friends and colleagues for being there. I could not have done it without you. You know who you are.

Accessibility Resources and Services. ASA is committed to making the Annual Meeting accessible to all. Should you encounter any problems during the meeting or need additional information about accessibility while at the Annual Meeting, please contact Meeting Services at the ASA Meeting Information Desk located in Viger Hall, Level 2, Palais des congrès de Montréal. Every reasonable effort will be made to assist registrants onsite. If you need services, equipment, or accommodations, but did not notify ASA in advance, ASA may not be able to provide appropriate services due to limited availability and the time required to locate such equipment and services.

Staff at the ASA Meeting Information Desk will coordinate resources that were requested in advance by attendees. ASA will have a small inventory of scooters for use by registrants who need them, however if you prefer to rent your own wheelchair or scooter, please make arrangements with Scoot Around North America (888) 441-7575.

If you have any problem or negative experience related to accessibility, including issues with housing, meeting sessions, travel throughout the city, restaurants, or any other accessibility related issue, please report the issue to the Meeting Information desk, which will be located in Viger Hall, Level 2 of the Palais des congrès de Montréal. An ASA Meeting Services team member will record the concern in our Accessibility Log and will be your advocates in working to resolve the issue whenever possible. By informing us of any concerns that arise we can work toward making the ASA Annual Meeting more welcoming to sociologists with disabilities, and make the cities and hotels where ASA meetings are held more aware of accessibility issues.

ASA Meeting Information Desk. The ASA Meeting Information Desk is staffed by ASA staff to assist if you have questions about meeting arrangements. The Meeting Information Desk is located in Viger Hall, Level 2, Palais des congrès de Montréal.

ASA Store. The ASA Store features works published by the Association as well as ASA logo merchandise and the popular “Keep Calm and Fund Sociology” collection. All attendees are welcome to browse through this area filled with teaching resources, career publications, sociological practice materials, directories, reference volumes, and recent journal issues. The ASA Store is located in the ASA Exhibit Hall, Hall 220C, Level 2, Palais des congrès de Montréal.

Comfort Zone. A comfort room has been designated for use by attendees requiring a respite from meeting activities. The Comfort Zone is located in Room 440, Level 4, Palais des congrès de Montréal.

Emergency Information. To report an emergency within the Palais des congrès de Montréal dial 555 from any house phone. This will connect you to onsite emergency team who can respond immediately. Dial 911 to report an emergency directly to the local authorities. In the case of a meeting-wide emergency, registrants will be emailed pertinent information.

Employment Fair. The inaugural ASA Employment Fair assists sociologists and prospective employers by providing convenient opportunities for employers and job seekers to meet in an informal setting for information-sharing. The Employment Fair is located in Hall D, Level 2, Palais des congrès de Montréal and will be open to all registered attendees 10:00 a.m.- 4:00 p.m. on Saturday, August 12. Annual Meeting badges are required for entry. The Employment Fair area will be available to employers on Sunday, August 13 and Monday, August 14 to interview potential candidates. Interviews are by employer invitation only.

Fragrance-Free Environment. ASA requests that all participants refrain from wearing perfume, cologne and other fragrances, and use unscented personal care products in order to promote a fragrance-free environment for the benefit of attendees with multiple chemical sensitivities.

Gender-Inclusive Restrooms. ASA has designated all-gender restroom facilities on Level 5 of the Palais des congrès de Montréal. These restroom facilities are available for use by all persons, regardless of their gender identity. The facilities will be marked with green signage. Please help make these facilities and this meeting an inclusive space for transgender and gender non-conforming attendees by respecting the right of all genders to use them.

Gender Pronouns. Meeting attendees will have the option of identifying preferred pronouns with badge stickers. Stickers will be available at the Meeting Information Desk.

Health and Wellness. For information on the nearest pharmacy or walk-in clinic, please consult the Montréal Information Desk, staffed by visitor and tourism personnel, located in Viger Hall, Level 2, Palais des congrès de Montréal or your hotel concierge. Visit www.aa87.org/ for an AA meeting finder for Montréal.

Programming Highlights - Special Events

Community College Coffee Hour.

Colleagues teaching in community colleges are invited to Coffee Hour, Sunday, August 13, 10:30 a.m. – 12:10 p.m., room 520A. Join colleagues in a series of ice breaker activities and conversation.

Departmental Alumni Night (DAN).

This gathering will held 9:30 – 11:00 p.m., Saturday, August 12, in room 710B on Level 7 of the Palais des congrès de Montréal. All meeting attendees are invited to attend this event. Participating schools are Indiana University, Northeastern University, University of Minnesota, and University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

Honorary Reception.

After the conclusion of the ASA Awards Ceremony and Presidential Address, registrants are invited to attend the Honorary Reception at 6:30 p.m., Sunday, August 13, in room 710A on Level 7 of the Palais des congrès de Montréal to express appreciation and congratulations to President Michèle Lamont and the major ASA award recipients. The Honorary Reception is supported by the Department of Sociology at Harvard University.

Just Desserts! Carla B. Howery Teaching Enhancement Grant Program Benefit Reception.

Admission for this reception is by ticket only. Proceeds support the Teaching Enhancement Fund, a small grants program designed to support teaching-related projects that have long lasting and transferable impact. The reception is Sunday, August 13, 8:00 – 9:30 p.m. in the Creation Room of the Hyatt Regency Montréal. Those who preregistered for the event will have an indication on their name badge. Others may purchase a ticket at the Registration Services area.

Minority Fellowship Program (MFP) Benefit Reception.

Meet current Fellows and MFP alumni, and reaffirm your commitment to the MFP Program at this benefit reception. Admission is by ticket only. Proceeds will go to the Minority Fellowship Program, which supports pre-doctoral training for students of color. Those who preregistered for the event will have an indication on their name badge. Others may purchase a ticket at the Registration Services area. The reception will be held Sunday, August 13, 9:30 – 11:00 p.m. in room 710B on Level 7 of the Palais des congrès de Montréal.

Reception for Scholars with International Research and Teaching Interests.

All meeting participants interested in international scholarly collaborations or in meeting colleagues from other countries and learning about sociology globally, are invited to attend this reception in honor of our international colleagues on Saturday, August 12, 7:00 - 8:00 p.m. in room 710B on Level 7 of the Palais des congrès de Montréal.

Student Reception.

All students registered to attend the Annual Meeting are invited to an open student reception on Saturday, August 12, 6:30 - 7:30 p.m. in room 710A on Level 7 of the Palais des congrès de Montréal.

Student Book Giveaway.

All students registered to attend the Annual Meeting are invited to a special book giveaway sponsored by ASA exhibitors on Tuesday, August 15. Please meet outside the entrance to the Exhibit Hall, Hall 220C, at 1:30 p.m.

Welcome Reception.

All meeting registrants are invited to the Welcome Reception on Friday, August 11, 7:00–8:00 p.m., in room 517A on Level 5 of the Palais des congrès de Montréal to celebrate the opening of the 112th Annual Meeting. This social hour follows the conclusion of the Opening Plenary and provides opportunities to renew past acquaintances, chat with old friends, and find a newcomer to guide. New members and first-time meeting attendees are particularly encouraged to attend. The Welcome Reception is generously supported by the Department of Sociology at McGill University, the Department of Sociology at the Université du Québec à Montréal, the Department of Sociology and Anthropology at Concordia University, the Université de Montréal, and the Fonds de recherche du Québec.

Featured Sessions

ASA Awards Ceremony and Presidential Address.

All attendees are invited to attend the ASA Awards Ceremony and Presidential Address to honor award winners and share in President Michèle Lamont's address Addressing the recognition gap: Destigmatization processes and the production of inequality. The ceremony and address will be held Sunday, August 13, 4:30 – 6:10 p.m. in room 517D, Level 5, Palais des congrès de Montréal. Session: 306

ASA Town Hall.

The town hall format allows audience interaction and organic discussion on issues that are important to the ASA membership. There are two town hall sessions scheduled for 2017. Sessions: 77, 380

Author Meets Critics Sessions.

Author Meets Critics sessions are designed to bring authors of recent books deemed to be important contributions to the discipline together with discussants chosen to provide different viewpoints.

Sessions: 45, 46, 81, 125, 126, 158, 199, 236, 237, 275, 312, 349, 387, 423, 424, 425, 456, 492, 525, 555

First Time Attendees Orientation.

If this is the first time you have attended an ASA Annual Meeting, please plan to attend this orientation session. This special session provides the opportunity to meet Association leaders and staff. Advice from ASA Officers and experienced attendees will help you chart a course through the myriad activities and substantive programming. The orientation is scheduled Saturday, August 12, 10:30 a.m. – 12:10 p.m. in room 516C on Level 5, Palais des congrès de Montréal.

Graduate Programs in Sociology Poster Session.

A resource area for enrolled and prospective graduate students will be open for browsing in the Exhibit Hall during Exhibit Hall hours. School representatives will be available Saturday, August 12, 2:30 – 4:10 p.m. to discuss their programs in person. Session: 87

Plenary and Presidential Sessions.

Plenary sessions are chosen by the ASA President as outstanding and compelling programming that elucidate the theme and are of interest to a large population of the membership. No other programming is scheduled against plenary sessions. The Presidential sessions are selected by the ASA President for their unique perspectives and spotlight top scholars in the field.

Sessions: 5, 76, 77, 116, 192, 231, 269, 306, 340, 379, 380, 417, 488

Presidential Sessions on Current Societal Challenges.

Four sessions have been added to the program that highlight current events and the sociological response. Topics include the Trump administration challenges to American democracy and society, the consequences of the Trump election and Brexit, and the protest and social movement response to the Trump election. Sessions: 121, 122, 310, 346

Regional Spotlight Sessions.

The local arrangements committee, co-chaired by Jean-François Côté, Université du Québec à Montréal, and Greg Nielsen, Concordia University, has organized a number of panels that capture some key regional history and issues of Montréal. Sessions: 47, 82, 200, 276, 350, 388, 493, 556

Research Funding Opportunities and Data Resources Poster Session.

This poster session provides a unique opportunity to meet representatives of major research funding institutions and principal investigators, researchers, and managers of large-scale, publicly available datasets. Each funding agency's poster will display an overview of the research funding they offer, and representatives will be on hand to discuss the application process and potential research proposals. Data resource posters will feature datasets and analytic tools available to researchers, and attendees will learn how to gain access to the data and discuss potential uses of it. In addition to traditional posters, interactive digital posters will be on display Sunday, August 13, 1:00 – 4:00 p.m. in the Exhibit Hall. Session: 268

Roundtable Sessions.

There are two types of roundtable sessions at the Annual Meeting. The Informal Discussion Roundtable session, Sunday, August 13, 10:30 a.m. – 12:10 p.m., Room 517C, is designed to facilitate discussion about specific topics including, but not limited to, methodology, policy, and professional concerns. Formal papers are not presented. The Open Refereed Roundtable sessions, Saturday, August 12, 10:30 a.m. – 12:10 p.m., and Monday, August 14, 10:30 a.m. – 12:10 p.m., room 517A, organizes papers around a central theme and allow authors to present and discuss.

Sessions: 50, 203, 354

Special Sessions.

Special Sessions incorporate many of the session suggestions submitted by ASA members for invited panels. These sessions may be on topics that further investigate the meeting theme, contribute to the review of the discipline, or focus attention on other timely and important issues.

Sessions: 10, 44, 121, 122, 123, 124, 157, 196, 197, 198, 235, 274, 310, 311, 346, 347, 348, 385, 386, 421, 422, 455, 524, 554

Thematic Sessions.

The 2017 Program Committee developed a set of invited sessions to explore aspects of this year's meeting theme. These sessions delve into important social and political issues, explore international and comparative viewpoints, and discuss the importance of sociological contributions.

Sessions: 6, 7, 8, 9, 39, 40, 41, 42, 43, 78, 79, 80, 117, 118, 119, 120, 154, 155, 156, 193, 194, 195, 232, 233, 234, 270, 271, 272, 273, 307, 308, 309, 341, 342, 343, 344, 345, 381, 382, 383, 384, 418, 419, 420, 453, 454, 489, 490, 491, 521, 522, 523, 552, 553

Student Training and Programs

ASA Student Forum

ASA welcomes all undergraduate and graduate students to the Annual Meeting. Students who join ASA automatically become members of the ASA Student Forum. The Student Forum is the formal advocacy and governance arm for students and the Student Forum Advisory Board (SFAB). At the Annual Meeting, it arranges professional workshops aimed at students' career concerns, student-only paper and roundtable sessions, the Student Forum Travel Awards, the Student Reception, a business meeting, and admission to the traditional book give-away at the end of the Annual Meeting (Tuesday). The Student Forum is also pleased to offer an annual Professional Development Certificate for its members, based on attendance at a number of particular sessions, events, or workshops. Please visit the ASA Information Desk in Viger Hall, Level 2, Palais des congrès de Montréal for details, including the necessary forms and instructions.

ASA is pleased to recognize the 2016-2017 members of the Student Forum Advisory Board (SFAB):

Kati Barahona-Lopez	University of California, Santa Cruz
Karen Okigbo	City University of New York, The Graduate Center
Uriel Serrano	University of California, Santa Cruz
Derek Silva	University of South Carolina
Irene Snyder	Elizabethtown College
Isabel Sousa-Rodriguez	City University of New York, The Graduate Center
Aisha Upton	University of Minnesota

Student Training and Programs

ASA Honors Program

The Honors Program has a more than four-decade history of involving talented sociology undergraduate students in the ASA Annual Meeting. It arranges participation in a series of events held at the Annual Meeting, including separate briefings on careers and graduate school. Students meet and interact with ASA leaders as well as the Honors Program Advisory Panel. As always, this year's students are wearing ribbons showing their Honors Program affiliation. Please welcome them to their first Annual Meeting.

Student Training and Programs

ASA Minority Fellowship Program (MFP)

The ASA Minority Fellowship Program (MFP), a pre-doctoral training program in existence since 1974, has been a significant factor in recruiting members of under-represented racial/ethnic minority groups into faculty, administrative, and other professional roles in the discipline. To date, more than 500 scholars of color have received MFP Fellowship awards, and at this year's Annual Meeting, MFP Cohort 44 will be introduced at the MFP Benefit Reception. MFP alumni continue to make important contributions to the growth and vitality of sociology, through their research, teaching, service, mentoring, and/or leadership.

001. Course 01. Finding Your Voice: Experiential Course on Blog-writing as a Form of Public Sociology

Palais des congrès de Montréal, 520E, 10:00 a.m.-5:00 p.m.

Session Organizer: Mindy L. Fried, Arbor Consulting Partners
Leader: Mindy L. Fried, Arbor Consulting Partners

Blogging has become an increasingly powerful vehicle for sociologists to write about critical social issues for both popular and academic audiences. The traditional repositories for our writing are professional journals or reports. Most often, this type of writing is vetted and judged, and there are fairly clear “guidelines” that frame what and how we write. Blogging takes us out of this realm, and provides a freer landscape for writing about what you know and what you care about. This one-day, hands-on workshop is for those who are interested in exploring blog-writing, as well as those who have already begun blogging and would like support in finding their voice and/or figuring out their focus. In a thoroughly non-judgmental environment, participants will have an opportunity to clarify why they want to blog and what they want to blog about, particularly focusing on blogging as public sociology. We’ll look at the spectrum of blogs being published by sociologists, and will work on finding our unique “blog writing voices”. Through a series of fun, experiential exercises, we will focus on writing with a purpose, bringing our sociological eye to telling a story that includes sensory images, an arc and a resolved conflict; linking one’s personal experience to larger sociological issues; incorporating our - or other people’s - research in ways that are engaging; and more. We will also talk about some of the challenges of writing in a public format (e.g., concerns about colleagues’ responses, dealing with legitimate critics and annoying trolls). And finally, we will touch upon some of the nuts and bolts of blogging, including possible platforms for blogging (e.g., setting up your own blog, blogging on other sites). By the end of the day, all participants will have a draft of a blog post, and some concrete ideas about where to pitch it and/or publish it. Who knows? Maybe some participants may even decide to collaborate!

The 2017 Annual Meeting will offer a special workshop aimed at increasing knowledge of both traditional and social media, as well as strategies for using these tools in sociological work. The Media Preconference is organized by Dustin Kidd (Temple University). Topics covered include: Creating a social media strategy Twitter for Academics Engaging with Journalists Social Media Techniques for the Classroom

003. Course 03. Advanced Regression Modeling: A Discrete Approach

Palais des congrès de Montréal, 520D, 1:00-5:00 p.m.

Session Organizer: Roger A. Wojtkiewicz, Ball State University

Leader: Roger A. Wojtkiewicz, Ball State University

This research workshop is directed to experienced users of regression analysis in their research. It provides advanced regression modeling tools that will be useful in producing stronger analysis for publication. The prerequisite for the workshop is knowledge of statistics and regression analysis as taught in a one-year graduate sequence. The workshop has five main parts: 1) explanation of key regression modeling concepts, 2) examination of strengths and weaknesses of four approaches for considering the influence of control variables; 3) discussion of alternative approaches for modeling interactions involving categorical and interval variables; 4) instruction of how to use spline variables to model linearity; and 5) specification of verbal hypotheses that can be tested with each modeling technique. There are generally four kinds of hypotheses which can be addressed with regression analysis. The simplest is whether there is an effect for an independent variable on a dependent variable. This effect is easily estimated by bivariate or multivariate regression. A second kind of hypothesis is about how other independent variables, often called control variables, explain the effect of an independent variable on a dependent variable. This hypothesis is modeled by adding control variables in some sequence to a baseline model. The third type of hypothesis is about how the effects of an independent variable on a dependent variable are contingent on the level of a second independent variable. Regression models with interaction variables address this kind of hypothesis.

The fourth kind of hypothesis is about the degree to which an independent variable is linearly related to a dependent variable. Spline variables can be used to examine issues of linearity. The purpose of this methodological workshop is to expose participants to underlying conceptual issues behind using regression modeling to address the second, third, and fourth types of hypotheses. The topics that I intend to cover are as follows: Key Regression Modeling Concepts - Nestedness - Higher Order Differences - Constraints Control Modeling - Small and Big Models - Allocating Influence With Multiple Control Variables - One-at-a-Time Without Controls - Step Approach - One-at-a-Time With Controls - Hybrid Approach Modeling Interactions - Interactions Between Dummy Variables - Interactions Between Dummy Variables and Interval Variable - Three-Way Interactions - Estimating Separate Models Modeling Linearity With Splines - Introduction to Knotted Spline Variables - Spline Variables Nested in Interval Variable - Regression Modeling Using Spline Variables Testing Research Hypotheses - Bivariate Hypothesis/No Controls - Bivariate Hypothesis/Unanalyzed Controls - Bivariate Hypothesis/Analyzed Controls - Hypothesis Involving Interactions - Hypothesis Involving Nonlinearity

004. Course 04. WIncorporating American Community Survey and U.S. Census Data into Undergraduate Courses

Palais des congrès de Montréal, 520F, 1:00-5:00 p.m.

William H. Frey, Brookings Institution

Leader: John Paul DeWitt, University of Michigan

Co-Leaders: Jill Bouma, Berea College
Katherine R. Rowell, Sinclair Community College
Esther Isabelle Wilder, Lehman College

This workshop will focus on how professors can integrate the analysis of U.S. Census and American Community Survey (ACS) data in relevant, user-friendly ways in such courses as Intro Sociology, Social Problems, Stratification, Race Relations, the Family, Sociology of Aging, Population, and more. Participants will learn about the Social Science Data Analysis Network (SSDAN) directed by Professor Frey at the University of Michigan. The course will begin with an overview of the SSDAN project and data analysis materials. Brief tutorials on the easy-to-use software tools will follow, with examples drawn from existing U.S. Census and ACS access tools. In a "hands-on" session, two person teams will "play the role of students" and conduct analyses of pre-tailored 1950-2010 Census, and 2005-2015 ACS data.

The notion of dignity is at the center of claim-making in contemporary society. This session brings together scholars who reflect on this theme in different national contexts. The conversation will concern definitions of dignity as it manifests itself in space and time, how to weaken group boundaries and broaden the community of actors who are recognized as having full cultural membership, and the particular cases of indigenous people and African Americans as crucial social divides in North- American societies.

PANEL STUDY OF INCOME DYNAMICS

INSTITUTE FOR SOCIAL RESEARCH • SURVEY RESEARCH CENTER

The Panel Study of Income Dynamics (PSID) is the world's longest running national household panel survey. Begun in 1968, the study has collected 40 waves of data from the same families and their descendants over nearly 50 years. More than 10,000 families participate in the PSID, including a refresher sample of immigrant families added in 2017. Because PSID follows descendants of original sample members, the study is a unique source for studying the intergenerational transmission of health & economic wellbeing.

NEW data from the 2016 Wellbeing and Daily Life Supplement (PSID-WB) are now available. PSID-WB provides data from PSID heads and spouses/partners on wellbeing, personality traits, and cognitive skills.

Child Development Supplement (CDS) & Transition into Adulthood Supplement (TAS)

•Measures of child/adolescent cognitive, physical, social and behavioral development as well as unique comprehensive national time-use information on children and youth of all ages.

Original CDS & TAS: Three waves of CDS data on 3,500 children aged 0-12 from PSID families who were first interviewed in 1997, re-interviewed in 2002 at ages 5-18, and again in 2007 at ages 10-18.

•Six waves of TAS data were collected biennially from 2005-2015 for CDS young adults aged 18 years and older.

Ongoing CDS & TAS: A NEW round of CDS (CDS-2014) with data from over 4,300 children and caregivers is now available.

•The 7th wave of TAS will collect data in 2017 from young adults ages 18-28 from all PSID families, regardless of their CDS participation.

The vast majority of data are freely accessible through the web-based Data Center which provides customized datasets

Monetary Sanctions as Punishment for the Poor

Alexes Harris

"Alexes Harris exposes the costs and consequences of these sanctions through a detailed and far reaching examination. Drawing on legal precedent, state practices, and in-depth interviews, Harris uncovers the unique penalties faced by the poor in encounters with the criminal justice system, as unpayable legal debt becomes a source of permanent punishment. A Pound of Flesh is a must read for those interested in the punishment and inequality in America."

EASTERN SOCIOLOGICAL SOCIETY 2018 ANNUAL MEETING CALL FOR PAPERS

The Eastern Sociological Society welcomes submissions, drawing on every methodology, addressing any and all issues of interest to sociologists. The 2018 meeting will have a special focus on "As Time Goes By: Social and Institutional Change."

Since its founding as a social science, sociology has addressed issues having to do with the causes and consequences of societal change. The classical texts of sociology framed the grand perspectives and questions that continue to motivate and guide sociological inquiry. At the center of sociology's agenda is a multi-faceted interest in mechanisms of social and institutional change. What drives the diffusion of rational myths, institutionalized practices and cultural beliefs of advanced industrial economies in an emergent world society? What are the consequences of diffusion of rational capitalism and organizational forms in non-Western countries? Why is human migration an endemic feature of the global economic order and what are the consequences of a world on the move? What accounts for 'blending' and 'segregating' social dynamics in heterogeneous populations? How and why do race and gender matter in understanding social inequalities? What mechanisms drive collective action aimed at addressing social problems and inequalities? Where does trust and cooperation come from? What explains counter-movements aimed at pushing back societal change? What is the role of political actors and the state in social and institutional change?

Speakers for presidential panels include Richard Alba, Jeffrey Alexander, Nina Bandelj, Mary Brinton, Dalton Conley, Pawan Dhingra, Paul DiMaggio, Mitch Duneier, Matthew Hughey, Michèle Lamont, Omar Lizardo, Harvey Molotch, Alejandro Portes, Saskia Sassen, Mario Luis Small, Duncan Watts, Bruce Western, Fred Wherry, William Julius Wilson, and Viviana Zelizer.

We look forward to submissions that will fill the missing links. Although the ESS especially encourages submissions related to this year's theme, we welcome submissions on all sociological topics. Potential methods and formats include: individual papers; wholly constituted sessions (with names and affiliation of all presenters); thematic conversations (panels of two or more scholars engaged in debate or exchange); workshops on specific topics and techniques; special sessions organized around prominent scholars and their work.

Paper submissions and session proposals are due by October 15, 2017.

Questions should be sent to easterns2018@gmail.com

006. Thematic Session. Beyond the New Collaborative Creed in Health: Culture and Identities in Healthcare Practice and Research

Palais des congrès de Montréal, 511C, 8:30-10:10 a.m.

Session Organizers: Tania M. Jenkins, University of Chicago
Mathieu Albert, University of Toronto

Presider: Scott Frickel, Brown University

Questioning Interdisciplinary Policy in Health Research: Fostering Inclusiveness or Reproducing Old Boundaries Between Epistemic Cultures? Mathieu Albert, University of Toronto; Suzanne Laberge, Université de Montréal

Cultures of Evidence: Evidence-based Medicine as Boundary Object in Professional Status Hierarchies. Tania M. Jenkins, University of Chicago

The Ties Between Physicians' Status Competition and the Cultural Authority of Medicine. Daniel A. Menchik, Michigan State University

The Culture of Standardization in Newborn Screening. Stefan Timmermans, UCLA; Zachary Webster Griffen, UCLA
Discussant: Scott Frickel, Brown University

Collaboration has become the new creed of health research and health services policies in the U.S. and internationally. Interdisciplinarity and interprofessionalism are considered signposts of excellence and innovation in knowledge production and health care delivery. The subtext of this collaborative ideal is that the traditional social order, characterized by competition among disciplines and professions, should be replaced by new forms of interaction free from hierarchies. Researchers and health professionals should bracket their own internalised epistemic and professional identities to serve the common good. However, a growing body of work has shown that attempts to break down organizational boundaries between disciplines and professions do not always ensure that cultural boundaries will naturally fade away. Various concepts have emerged to describe the cultural dimensions of scientific and professional practices: "disciplinary habitus" (Bourdieu 2004), "epistemic culture" (Knorr-Cetina 1999), "academic tribes" (Becher and Trowler 2001), and "thought styles" (Fleck 1935). These concepts emphasize that scientists and professionals are embedded in community-specific (albeit porous) webs of significations. Disciplinary and professional cultures are thus defined as taken-for-granted ways of thinking about and/or doing science and professional tasks, including what constitutes "good" science or professional practice. These internalised and therefore durable cultural schemes can pose a challenge to the collaborative creed, by forming the basis for power struggles both among and within disciplines and professions. This session therefore explores how dominant taken-for-granted cultural schemes, or doxa, create cultural boundaries and are used by health professions and health research communities to maintain hierarchies and control access to resources.

007. Thematic Session. Culture and Poverty from an Empirical Perspective

Palais des congrès de Montréal, 511B, 8:30-10:10 a.m.

Session Organizer: Mario Luis Small, Harvard University

Presider: Mario Luis Small, Harvard University

Panelists: Mario Luis Small, Harvard University

Orlando Patterson, Harvard University

Jennifer Lee, University of California, Irvine

There is a long and contentious history of research examining how culture may reproduce poverty from one generation to the next. This session examines the possible role of culture and "disruptive narratives" in undermining reproduction rather than furthering it.

008. Thematic Session. Emotions and Inequalities

Palais des congrès de Montréal, 511D, 8:30-10:10 a.m.

Session Organizer: James M. Jasper, Graduate Center of the City University of New York

Presider: James M. Jasper, Graduate Center of the City University of New York

Emotional Domination and Charismatic Authority: Two Micro-techniques of Power. Randall Collins, University of Pennsylvania
Feeling Inequality. Deborah B. Gould, University of California, Santa Cruz

Group Processes: Connecting Inequality and Emotions. Karen A. Hegtvedt, Emory University; Cathryn Johnson, Emory University

Session 008, continued

Bereavement, Emotions, and Race Differences in Repeated Exposure to the Death of Family Members. Debra Umberson, The University of Texas at Austin

Discussant: James M. Jasper, Graduate Center of the City University of New York

For this thematic session I am enlisting scholars who specialize in different forms of inequality, but who have also written about emotions and morality. Each will discuss the emotional mechanisms that have sustained or challenged inequality along one dimension or another, including gender, race, class, and sexual orientation. Each presentation will combine a report on recent research and a response to several shared questions. Collins will address how public displays of emotions differ across social class. Gould will discuss the transformation of shame into pride in LGBTQ and other stigmatized groups. Hegtvedt and Johnson will address responses to injustice. Debra Umberson will use new research to discuss the different life chances that influence how members of different races develop emotional styles that stick with them through life.

009. Thematic Session. LGBTQ Culture, Inequalities, and Social Inclusion (cosponsored with Canadian Sociological Association)

Palais des congrès de Montréal, 511F, 8:30-10:10 a.m.

Session Organizer: Tina Fetner, McMaster University

Presider: Howard Ramos, Dalhousie University

Performative Progressiveness in Gay Neighbourhoods. Amin Ghaziani, University of British Columbia; Adriana Brodyn, University of British Columbia

Beyond Bullying, Toward New Sexual Possibilities: Reimagining the Social Landscapes of High School. Jessica Fields, San Francisco State University; Jen Gilbert, York University; Laura Mamo, San Francisco State University

The Church and the Streets: Black LGBT Sexuality in the Pre-Stonewall Era. Mignon R. Moore, Barnard College-Columbia University

Competing Cultures of Exclusion and Inclusion: The Social Landscape of Attitudes toward LGBT Rights. Tina Fetner, McMaster University

Cultural processes of inclusion and exclusion have long been arbiters of sexual hierarchies that place performances of heteronormativity in a dominant social position. As legal and political battles assign a greater share of civil rights to LGBTQ people, these cultural patterns of exclusion and inclusion carve inequalities into the social landscape. This panel examines LGBTQ culture(s), inequalities, and social inclusion, emphasizing the role of the state, communities, and activism.

010. Special Session. Access without Integration: The Logic, Forms, and Consequences of Segregated Inclusion

Palais des congrès de Montréal, 511E, 8:30-10:10 a.m.

Session Organizers: Fabien Accominotti, London School of Economics

Shamus Rahman Khan, Columbia University

Panelists: Angelina Grigoryeva, Princeton University

Martin Ruef, Duke University

Erin A. Cech, University of Michigan

Anthony Abraham Jack, Harvard University

Lauren Rivera, Northwestern University

The session brings together recent and developing work showing how inclusion and exclusion can operate together – what we refer to as segregated inclusion – in a variety of empirical settings. While scholars of inequality often hold the prior that exclusion means more inequality, and inclusion means less, this panel challenges this simple model. Reflecting on the logic, forms, and consequences of segregated inclusion across a range of cases, from urban settings to elite occupations and universities, will provide a fuller understanding of how the dynamics of different forms of boundary maintenance preserve, challenge, and transform inequality. Presentations will reflect on how measurements of inclusion or exclusion depend on how these phenomena are observed in urban settings; on the gender and class determinants of segregated inclusion in elite occupations; on the lived experience of it at elite universities; and on the consequences of segregated inclusion for social inequality. Such work both advances new theoretical ground and provides unique insights into empirical cases.

011. Professional Development Workshop. Constructive Reviewing: Tips for Writing the Kind of Manuscript Reviews You'd Like to Receive

Palais des congrès de Montréal, 512D, 8:30-10:10 a.m.

Session Organizer: Claire M. Renzetti, University of Kentucky

Leader: Claire M. Renzetti, University of Kentucky

Panelists: Linda Renzulli, Purdue University

David G. Embrick, University of Connecticut

In this workshop, three journal editors will discuss the process of peer review, including the history, purpose and importance of peer review; how editors select reviewers; principles of ethical and responsible peer reviewing; how to write constructive feedback to authors and editors; making a publication recommendation; and reviewing the revised manuscript.

012. Teaching Workshop. Bringing Social Justice into the Classroom through Applied Sociology

Palais des congrès de Montréal, 512E, 8:30-10:10 a.m.

Session Organizer: Jessica MacNamara, Keuka College

Co-Leaders: Athena Elafros, Keuka College

Sarah Glann, State University of New York-Buffalo

This workshop will focus on class activities and assignments specifically designed to engage students in relevant social issues that bridge the classroom-community divide. The discussion will focus on the development, implementation, and debriefing of these activities and assignments. Specific topics that will be covered include, bullying, environmental justice, and gender inclusive housing on college campuses. The goal of this workshop is to create a space where the panelists and audience can share teaching resources and develop long-term networks.

013. Regular Session. Art and Money in Creative Living

Discussant: Gilles Bibeau, Université de Montréal

In 2012, an important student's movement led Quebec universities to the longest strike ever. Access to Higher Education (HE) was at stake: The threat of a hike in (relatively low) tuition fees was perceived by students as a source of growing inequalities and a dangerous step toward the Americanization of Quebec's society. While many sociologists see college degrees as the main markers of the new class structure, HE is also central to the operation of knowledge economies and provides access to recognition, power and wealth in an individualistic society. While many regard HE more as an individual investment in human capital, others view it as a means to lower inequality. Yet others are concerned that HE diverts public resources toward the elite at the expense of more universally accessible K-12 education. Against this background, this session will consider the potential impact of students' movements on individual and collective social mobility. It will ask: How can HE contribute to equality instead of distinction?

This panel examines the experiences of American Muslims through the conference's theme of "Culture, Inequalities, and Social Inclusion across the Globe." In these four papers, the presenters show how Muslims in the United States have experienced cultural inequality especially since September 11, 2001 and also how they have struggled to integrate their experience with the rest of the United States through both Muslim and American institutions. Besheer Mohamed uses survey data to show how Muslims continue to be distrusted by the American population, as well as how American Muslims navigate their relationship to mainstream America. Saeed Khan examines how American Muslim organizations navigate both the challenges of prejudice and the intricacies of Islamic finance as a means of establishing and maintaining financial stability. Pamela Prickett asks how and why African American Muslims experience inequality within American Islam through interrogating the intersection of race/religion/class and ongoing methods of boundary formation between these identity categories. Finally, Jeff Guhin examines how and why the hijab becomes a morally salient part of Muslim Americans' lives—and the lives of non-Muslims as well. Kristine Ajrouch, a scholar of American Islam, will serve as presider and discussant.

Over the past fifteen years there has been a remarkable revival of what is often termed 'cultural class analysis'. This seeks to use Bourdieu's concept of cultural capital to offer approaches to class which differ from the more familiar occupational schemas. It is argued that these can give more purchase on how class relations are being reconfigured - especially through the pulling away of an 'elite' class, from a complex and fragmented set of middle classes, and with a distinct 'precariat' at the bottom. This form of sociological analysis has had considerable public interest in several nations, especially the UK where Social Class in the 21st Century (Mike Savage et al, Pelican 2015) has been widely reviewed and is a popular best seller. This current is an interesting case study of 'public sociology'. Cultural class analysis is strongest in Europe, but is also being applied across the globe, and this session will bring together leading proponents and showcase important comparative research.

More data were accumulated in 2002 than all previous years of human history combined. By 2011, the amount of data collected prior to 2002 was being collected every two days. This dramatic growth in data spans nearly every part of our lives from gene sequencing to consumer behavior data. While much of these data are binary or quantitative, text-based data is also being accumulated on an unprecedented scale. In an era of social research plagued by declining survey response rates and concerns about the reliability and generalizability of qualitative research, these data hold considerable potential to answer many of the most pressing questions within our discipline, yet sociologists lag behind scholars in other fields in learning how to collect, analysis, and interpret so-called "big data." These questions have critical relevance to the "Culture, Inequalities, and Social Inclusion across the Globe" theme of the 2017 Annual Meetings. Despite an unprecedented amount of qualitative or text-based data, cultural sociologists have left this wellspring of information about the arguments, worldviews, or values of hundreds of millions of people from internet sites and other digitized texts to computer scientists who possess the technological expertise to extract and manage such data but lack the theoretical direction to interpret their meaning in situ. This panel brings together leading scholars in both cultural sociology and computational social science for an open-ended conversation about the potential for interdisciplinary synthesis in order to address questions about how big data might be used to study culture, inequalities, and social inclusion.

043. Thematic Session. Theorizing Frameworks and Methodologies for the Study of Intersectionality: Sociological and Interdisciplinary Conversations

Over the last two decades, intersectionality has emerged as arguably the most significant, paradigm-shifting contribution of feminist theorizing, with many feminist sociologists at the forefront of this pioneering work. At the same time, intersectional theory and research has been critiqued on a number of fronts, and sociological frameworks in particular have been challenged by interdisciplinary debates and approaches. Ironically, the very research that has sought to challenge fixed categories has been taken to task for reifying these very categories, in both qualitative and quantitative research. While much research has focused on race, gender and class, other forms of difference have received less attention, including sexuality, nation, citizenship, and ability. Currently, the next generation of intersectional researchers is mapping out how to incorporate these critiques into concrete research projects. What are the possibilities, limitations and lessons of intersectional scholarship? What kind of methodologies can bridge theoretical critiques with new empirical findings? This panel provides an overview of current intersectional frameworks, situates sociological critiques in conversation with interdisciplinary approaches, and engages with cutting-edge research that is moving intersectionality forward in innovative ways.

Most sociology faculty would argue that majors should develop key research skills as they move through their programs. This workshop will provide participants with examples of ways of integrating "real" research into the undergraduate curriculum, with an emphasis on methods courses. Engaging students in data collection and analysis ("real" research) has the potential of increasing student interest in research and highlighting the links between undergraduate studies and post-baccalaureate employment and graduate study. Further, real research projects can provide valuable service to a variety of clients within our communities and within our colleges or universities. Workshop presenters come from diverse institutions and will provide examples from their own teaching and student mentoring. The practical issues of faculty time constraints, semester schedules, student skill levels, and funding for such projects will also be discussed.

049. Teaching Workshop. Facilitating Student Learning through Class Discussion

Palais des congrès de Montréal, 512G, 10:30 a.m.-12:10 p.m.

Session Organizer: Jay R. Howard, Butler University

Faculty often wish to engage students in class discussion, but sometimes our efforts fall flat and we give up the effort. Why should we seek to engage students? What classroom norms sometimes undermine students' participation? Which students are most likely to participate and to choose not to participate? How can an instructor manage both the dominant talkers and the non-talkers? We will engage each of these questions utilizing a review of the research to identify ways to structure class discussion to engage students and maximize learning. This workshop will help faculty recognize classroom norms related to participation in discussion and how to redefine the classroom in ways that facilitate students' active engagement and thereby enhance learning

This plenary session tackles questions related to distribution and recognition in the context of growing inequality. As a famous debate between political philosopher Nancy Fraser and Axel Honneth acknowledges, there have often been tensions between the 'class politics' associated with the distribution of resources and the 'identity politics' associated with recognition. Under some circumstances, access to resources (distribution) may be contingent on recognition (of groups as full members of the community); in other cases, the salience of group identity may diminish commitments to redistribution. Speakers will revisit this debate by reflecting on how progressive neo-liberalism connects with populism to reconfigure distribution and recognition. Two economists will also discuss the negative impact of growing inequality on the well-being of specific groups as well as collective well-being. This session is supported by the Canadian Institute for Advanced Research (CIFAR).

This town hall meeting will inform our members of the various ways in which ASA and affiliated organizations have been responding to the various challenges to our discipline emerging from the Trump Administration. Panelists will also share their personal views on valuable and effective responses on the part of sociologists. Finally, they will engage with ASA members to discuss these challenges and current and future responses.

078. Thematic Session. Apocalypse Now: The Rise and Resonance of Dystopic Imaginaries

Palais des congrès de Montréal, 511A, 2:30-4:10 p.m.

Presider: Michael Rodríguez-Muñiz, Northwestern University
Panelists: Andreu Domingo, University of Barcelona
John R. Hall, University of California-Davis
Ruha Benjamin, Princeton University

Discussant: Ann Mische, University of Notre Dame
Contemporary public discourse has become inundated with apocalyptic and doomsday narratives about the future. These narratives instigate and intensify anxieties and fears about environmental catastrophes, economic depressions, ethnoracial demographic invasions, global warfare, and biological disasters. Dystopic imaginaries are, to be sure, not unique to our present, but their pronounced rise and resonance over the past several decades demands sociological and social scientific interrogation. Building on growing scholarly interest in "imagined futures," this panel brings together leading thinkers from sociology and neighboring fields to discuss and debate the emergence and effects of dystopias. From various angles—substantive, methodological, and theoretical—panelists will shed light on the construction, circulation, and consumption of dystopic imaginaries across different national and international contexts. What factors and dynamics have contributed to the global proliferation of apocalyptic narratives? How does the discursive content and narrative structure of dystopias differ or overlap? What sorts of political actions and affiliations are dystopias provoking, and how should we theorize the link between such imaginaries, power, and inequality?

079. Thematic Session. Cultural Categories, Political Power and Social Closure: Frontiers of Theory and Research

Palais des congrès de Montréal, 511C, 2:30-4:10 p.m.

Session Organizer: Andreas Wimmer, Columbia University
Presider: Andreas Wimmer, Columbia University
Panelists: Deirdre Bloome, University of Michigan

Greta R. Krippner, University of Michigan
Andreas Wimmer, Columbia University
Ellis Monk, University of Chicago

Discussant: Andreas Wimmer, Columbia University

This panel explores how culture (templates of legitimacy, organizational blue prints, notions of dignity, etc.) influence how political actors gain and loose power and what the consequences are for structures of inequality in a society, including inequality in prestige, power, and economic resources. Conversely, political strategies and relationships can influence which cultural patterns are adopted and taken-for-granted, again with consequences for patterns of inequality. The panel introduces new theoretical approaches and empirical research strategies to disentangle this "dialectical" relationship between culture, politics, and social inequality.

080. Thematic Session. Culture Meets Criminology: Cultural Approaches to the Study of Crime and Punishment

Palais des congrès de Montréal, 511B, 2:30-4:10 p.m.

Session Organizers: Josh Guetzkow, Hebrew University
Matthew Clair, Harvard University
Panelists: Lois Presser, University of Tennessee
Joachim J. Savelsberg, University of Minnesota
Josh Guetzkow, Hebrew University
Ron Levi, University of Toronto

As criminology has established itself as a discipline in its own right, it has also erected disciplinary borders. Nowhere can this be seen more clearly than in the failure of developments in cultural sociology to penetrate criminological research. This panel will examine the current state of cultural theorizing in criminology and discuss how theoretical advances in cultural sociology over the past thirty years can help us to rethink and revitalize the study of crime and punishment. Invited panelists will discuss how their research shines a unique cultural focus on various aspects of crime and punishment: how culture interacts with neighborhood context to produce varying rates of crime and violence, the role of culture in courtroom dynamics and sentencing outcomes, how culture influences the process of re-entry, and what role culture has played in the development of tough-on-crime policies. We will also engage in an agenda-setting discussion of where and how to employ the tools of cultural sociology in future research.

084. Professional Development Workshop. Addressing Incivility in the Classroom: Effective Strategies for Faculty

Palais des congrès de Montréal, 516B, 2:30-4:10 p.m.

Session Organizer: Chavella T. Pittman, Dominican University

Leader: Chavella T. Pittman, Dominican University

Classroom incivility refers to student behaviors that disrupt the learning environment. They can range from texting in class to outright intimidation or threats. Regardless of the severity of or motivation for the classroom incivility, research suggests they are on the rise. Unfortunately, faculty may not be prepared to deal with them. This is particularly troubling for marginalized faculty who are more frequently the targets of student incivility. In this workshop, participants will learn about faculty's (especially those with marginalized statuses) experiences with student incivility. They will also learn about the potential consequences for faculty of unchecked classroom incivilities. Most importantly, participants will learn and practice strategies they can use to address problematic student behaviors.

085. Policy and Research Workshop. Applying for National Institutes of Health Funding Announcements

Palais des congrès de Montréal, 512B, 2:30-4:10 p.m.

Session Organizer: Shobha Srinivasan, National Cancer Institute

Leader: Shobha Srinivasan, National Cancer Institute

Panelists: Michael L. Spittel, NICHD

Chloe E. Bird, RAND

Valerie L. Durrant, National Institutes of Health

The purpose of the training session is to assist sociologists in approaches and methods in getting NIH support. The session will provide an overview/goals of NIH funding opportunities; present information on pitfalls in applications; and give an overview of the scientific review process. There are many opportunities that are ripe for the insights, perspectives, and expertise of social scientists--but many in the discipline think of NIH as narrowly focused on clinical or biomedical definitions of health. Did you know, for example, that there are several efforts and opportunities at the NIH that are looking for more sophisticated means of capturing residential histories, neighborhood effects, and social context? There is even a Program Announcement that is searching for demonstrable effect of population level interventions that have group level impact. These are all issues that line up directly with the social sciences! The time for sociology at the NIH has never been greater--as the scientific issues that are important to the agency are clearly showing, through the literature, a need to integrate both the biological and the social to provide clear answers to complicated problems. The session will also highlight experiences of people who have gone through this process and have been successfully funded. Additionally, the session will cover some areas of specific interest to the National Institutes of Health institutes and centers and also provide an overview of the review process. Learning objectives: 1. To provide guidance on the NIH funding announcements 2. To provide an overview of the requirements of the funding announcements 3. To enable potential applicants to compete successfully for awards under these announcements

086. Teaching Workshop. Connecting the Undergraduate Sociology Major Curriculum to Greater Career Readiness at Graduation

Palais des congrès de Montréal, 512E, 2:30-4:10 p.m.

Session Organizer: Nancy A. Greenwood, Indiana University Kokomo

In this workshop intended for faculty interested in curriculum development and change and/or ways to increase sociology majors will look at ways of making small or large changes to existing sociology program curriculum to assist students to be better prepared to do and find work in the local or statewide employment structure, especially in the non-profit and government sectors, but also in business. We will discuss options for curricular design, specific courses to help students see these opportunities, tweaking course content, service learning and internship opportunities, supporting students' presentations at professional meetings, and the option of accrediting your program by the Commission for Accreditation for Applied & Clinical Programs in Sociology (CAPACS). We will offer some helpful handouts. Participants are encouraged to bring their questions or issues for discussion.

Robert K. Merton's 1936 essay on exclusion as an unintended consequence of purposive action has opened an important path for a systemic sociology of cultural and social inequality processes.

This presidential session bring together sociologists who consider various sites for such processes, ranging from Wikipedia to college cultures, and other aspects of our daily lives. Authors are particularly concerned with the closing of opportunities as an unintended consequence of action.

A recent National Academy of Science report (The Integration of Immigrants into American Society) finds that as immigrants become integrated into American society many facets of their lives improve including educational attainment, occupational distribution, income, and language ability. However, some other indicators decline in areas of health, crime, and family patterns especially for the second generation. And for many, immigration status is more determinative than are measures of integration for social and economic mobility. This panel will dig deeper into this general finding and focus on the children of immigrants and how they are faring in contemporary American society. The panel members will discuss their research around the social and cultural institutions as well as the processes that facilitate and constrain the integration of today's 1.5 and second generations.

118. Thematic Session. Culture and Population Processes

Palais des congrès de Montréal, 511B, 4:30-6:10 p.m.

Session Organizer: Margaret Frye, Princeton University

Prsident: Margaret Frye, Princeton University

Panelists: Arland Thornton, University of Michigan

Vida Maralani, Cornell University

Aliya Saperstein, Stanford University

Margaret Frye, Princeton University

Beginning with the pioneering works of Malthus and Quetelet, culture has long been part of the theoretical foundation of demographic analysis. Yet in recent years, demographers have begun to more openly embrace the empirical tools and theoretical constructs developed within cultural sociology, from schemas and repertoires to cultural models. These four panelists will explore some of the implications of this recent "cultural turn" for our understanding of population dynamics. Specifically, panelists will explore how an understanding of cultural sociology can help us to understand four core topics in demography: racial classification, fertility and labor-force participation, development and family change, and the transition to adulthood.

119. Thematic Session. Elites' Repertoires of Inequality: Comparing Preferences Towards Redistribution in Unequal Societies

Palais des congrès de Montréal, 511D, 4:30-6:10 p.m.

Session Organizer: Elisa P. Reis, Federal University of Rio de Janeiro (UFRJ)

Prsident: Elisa P. Reis, Federal University of Rio de Janeiro (UFRJ)

Panelists: Larry Bartels, Vanderbilt University

Abram de Swaan, University of Amsterdam

Serge Paugam, CNRS/EHESS/ENS

Chana Teeger, London School of Economics

Discussant: Leslie McCall, Northwestern University

Social scientists have usually expected democracy and equality to correlate and yet we live in an era of unequal democracies. Recent studies in sociology and political science have focused on the attitudes of elites as a possible explanation for the growing inequality in American society. Although it is hard to assess the exact impact of elite preferences on policy outcomes, there is wide consensus that changes in preferences of elites towards redistribution are a necessary (even if not sufficient) condition for redistribution to take place. This session will add a comparative dimension to this question focusing on how economic and political elites across the globe make sense of inequality, what they perceive as the consequences of inequalities, and what they recognize as desirable and viable measures to reduce inequality. We will feature sociologists and political scientists engaged in conceptual and empirical work on elites preferences towards redistribution as well as studies that focus on the cultural boundaries of the elites towards the poor and their potential implications for redistribution.

120. Thematic Session. Settler Colonialism and Indigenous Resurgence (cosponsored with Canadian Sociological Association)

Palais des congrès de Montréal, 510D, 4:30-6:10 p.m.

Session Organizer: Jeffrey Steven Denis, McMaster University

Prsident: Jeffrey Steven Denis, McMaster University

Panelists: Rima Wilkes, University of British Columbia

Vanessa Watts, McMaster University

Hayden King, Ryerson University

Bonita Lawrence, York University

Indigenous-settler conflicts over land and treaties have escalated, socioeconomic disparities persist, and the number of missing and murdered Indigenous women has proliferated. Meanwhile, Idle No More and other Indigenous movements highlight resilience and resurgence, in face of ongoing injustices, as do the launching of commissions, reports, and recommendations into renewing relations. Front and centre are demands for, and in turn promises of, (re)building "nation-to-nation" relations with Indigenous peoples, potentially transforming the structural and ideological foundations of the settler state.

121. Presidential Session on Current Societal Challenges. Trump's Challenges and Responses by Protest and Social Movements

Palais des congrès de Montréal, 516E, 4:30-6:10 p.m.

Session Organizer: Kenneth (Andy) Andrews, University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill

Prsident: Kenneth (Andy) Andrews, University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill

Panelists: Dana R. Fisher, University of Maryland

Marshall Ganz, Harvard University

Douglas McAdam, Stanford University

Zeynep Tufekci, University of North Carolina

Trump's election has been met with a broad wave of protest and activism across numerous constituencies and claims. The Women's March alone mobilized an estimated four million protesters in the day following the inauguration. In the subsequent weeks, we have seen hundreds of protests challenging proposed policies and rallying to support shared values and interests. Support for established advocacy and social movement organizations has surged while new groups have sprung up quickly. Panelists will consider central questions about the resistance informed by current research on this wave of protest: Who's participating in the resistance and why? What forms of activism and coalitions are emerging? What lessons can we draw from prior movements and protest to understand the current moment? What difference has or can this activism make in the short or long run?

122. Presidential Session on Current Societal Challenges. Trump's Challenges to American Society

Racial Boundaries in Trump's America: Chocolate Cities and the Enduring Problem of the Color Line. Marcus Anthony Hunter, UCLA

Gender, Policy, Politics: New Divides among Women and Men. Ann Shola Orloff, Northwestern University

Politics in the contemporary United States features rising concerns about class, gender, racial/ethnic and rural/urban forms of inequality and polarization. The candidates in the 2016 presidential election proposed to address these issues in starkly different ways, and partisan political divides have only deepened since the Republican victory. Panelists will address the implication of President Trump's politics and policies for distinctive forms of inequality, types of social boundary and distribution of power. The panel will also discuss the implications for claims-making and recognition of both citizens and denizens of the United States, and for political mobilization in the future.

Palais des congrès de Montréal, 516D, 4:30-6:10 p.m.

Presider: Carmen Russell, American Sociological Association
Panelist: Brian Southwell, University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill
Sociologists engage everyday life in their work, producing information invaluable to policymakers, a wide range of professionals, and, really, anyone who interacts with other people. However, even the most helpful knowledge is useless unless it reaches those who can make use of it. Dr. Brian Southwell, Director of the Science in the Public Sphere program at RTI International, faculty member at Duke University and the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, and host of the public radio show, The Measure of Everyday Life, will join Carmen Russell, Director of Communications for the ASA, for a frank discussion of how and why sociology does (and does not) make it into news coverage and public discourse. The Measure of Everyday Life, which features social scientists and their research, has been recognized by Player FM as a best sociology podcast; in addition to airing weekly on WNCU in the Raleigh-Durham media market, the show also has been downloaded as a podcast in more than 75 countries around the world and has featured projects from all over the globe. Southwell also is an active social scientist in addition to hosting the show; his new edited book on misinformation, Misinformation and Mass Audiences, appears in the Fall 2017 University of Texas Press catalogue.

128. Policy and Research Workshop. How to Write a Successful Fund for the Advancement of the Discipline (FAD) Proposal

Palais des congrès de Montréal, 512F, 4:30-6:10 p.m.

Session Organizer: Nicole V. Amaya, American Sociological Association
Leader: Nicole V. Amaya, American Sociological Association
Panelists: Michael W. Yarbrough, John Jay College (CUNY)
Caitlin Patler, UC Davis
Stephanie A. Bohon, University of Tennessee

The Fund for the Advancement of the Discipline (FAD) program is jointly supported by the American Sociological Association and the National Science Foundation. The goal of the FAD program is to advance the discipline of sociology by funding small (up to $8,000), groundbreaking research initiatives that have the potential to stimulate new lines of research and innovative research conferences that will foster new networks of scientific collaboration. The ASA FAD program manager will give an overview of the program, including its history and what to expect from the funding application and evaluation process. Two recent award recipients will discuss how they wrote their proposals, what was emphasized, how they built the argument that their research or conference would advance the discipline, and how they incorporated evaluations received from the FAD committee. The third panelist has previously served on the FAD committee and will give insight on the selection criteria and how FAD proposals are reviewed. The purpose of this workshop is to encourage applications, especially from scholars in the early stages of their careers and those in departments without extensive research support. Workshop attendees are encouraged to bring questions regarding their own proposals and about the program more broadly.

129. Teaching Workshop. Protecting Public Scholars from Backlash (cosponsored with Sociologists for Women in Society)

Panelists: R. L'Heureux Lewis-McCoy, The City College of New York - CUNY
Adia M. Harvey Wingfield, Washington University in St. Louis
Marisa Camille Allison, George Mason University
Jodi O'Brien, Seattle University

Increasing attacks on scholars and scholar-activists have highlighted that academic freedom policies are not up to date with 21st century technology and means of public engagement. Worse, it appears that universities are unable, or perhaps unwilling, to jeopardize their reputations and donations in effectively defending the academic freedom and free speech of public scholars. All public scholars and intellectual activists face the risk of the public "talking back," but these risks are heightened for women, people of color, and, especially, women of color. This interactive workshop will provide academics the tools necessary to support and protect public scholars and intellectual activists, with particular attention to what departments, universities, and professional organizations can do. The workshop centers on the consequences of engaging the public on issues that are particularly controversial -- namely inequality and exclusion.

INQUIZITIVE: Prep your students for learning

In use at more than 1,000 schools, InQuizitive helps students master—and retain—core concepts and theoretical perspectives, giving you more time in class for meaningful discussions and activities. A variety of interactive and applied questions improve comprehension of key learning objectives and deliver answer-specific feedback. Formative and adaptive, InQuizitive personalizes the learning experience for students and encourages them to go back into the reading.

"With InQuizitive, students are incentivized to read the chapter and complete the corresponding InQuizitive activity by the due date, which led to higher quality class discussions this semester." —MICHAEL MASTERS, Associate Professor, Montana Tech

The Art and Science of Social Research

DEBORAH CARR, ELIZABETH HEGER BOYLE, BENJAMIN CORNWELL, SHELLEY CORRELL, ROBERT CROSNOE, JEREMY FREESE, AND MARY C. WATERS

Show your students how social research really unfolds. Written by a team of internationally renowned sociologists with experience in both the field and the classroom, The Art and Science of Social Research offers authoritative and balanced coverage of the full range of methods used to study the social world. The authors highlight the challenges of investigating the unpredictable topic of human lives while providing insights into what really happens in the field, the laboratory, and the survey call center.

CONTENTION The Multidisciplinary Journal of Social Protest

Editors: Benjamin Abrams and Giovanni A. Travaglio

Contention offers a novel contribution to the study of social protest and political behavior. The journal intends to advance knowledge about a comprehensive range of collective actions, social movements, and other forms of political and social contention. Its main purposes are to offer a multidisciplinary forum to scholars from different fields and to bridge the gap between them, within and across the social sciences and humanities.

National Belonging in a Jewish Democracy: The Case of Arab Palestinian Citizens of Israel. Josh Guetzkow, Hebrew University

Discussant: Bernice A. Pescosolido, Indiana University

Panelists will discuss the greater salience of stigmatization as compared to discrimination across variously marked groups. They will also highlight how national contexts and cultural repertoires influence types of responses individual offer when confronting racism. They will also compare the salience of collective and individual responses in the context of neoliberalism. The panel will show how history, social and symbolic boundaries and groupness enable and constrain the experience of everyday racism.

155. Thematic Session. Encountering the Law

Palais des congrès de Montréal, 511A, 8:30-10:10 a.m.

Session Organizer: Brian Gran, Case Western Reserve University

Presider: Brian Gran, Case Western Reserve University

Against the Law: Mob Violence and the Politics of Vigilante Justice in India. Poulami Roychowdhury, McGill University

Law's Struggle with Religion: Equality and Inclusion. Bryan Turner, City University of New York-Graduate Center

Now more than ever, people across the world are encountering law in manifold areas of social life. As human rights are implemented, institutions and cultures of rights are created and sometimes suppressed. Newcomers encounter different ideas, languages, beliefs, and practices, often through legal systems, whether local, national, or international. Actors running these legal systems, which are often corrupt, may take a dim view of strangers' legal concerns. Individuals who are vulnerable may turn to "law" for protection, even while many people are discovering that law increasingly serves as a panopticon across multiple hierarchies and in many parts of their societies. Sociologists participating in this panel will present cutting-edge ideas and research on multiple encounters people experience with law in all areas of contemporary social life. While this panel will remind us that law is everywhere, panelists will offer insights into new questions for sociological scholarship on law.

156. Thematic Session. How Technology is Changing Social Relationships

Palais des congrès de Montréal, 511C, 8:30-10:10 a.m.

The Shifting Boundaries of Urban Community. Jeffrey Lane, Rutgers University

The impact of contemporary technologies on interpersonal relationships has riveted public attention. Anxieties abound concerning smartphone-obsessed parents who neglect their children, teenagers socializing in virtual spaces, and the ever-growing importance of social media in all spheres of life, from online romance to online activism. What do we know empirically about new technology and social interactions so far, and what else lies ahead?

157. Special Session. Gen(der) X: New Cultural Revolutions in the Global South And The Restructuring of Women's Work

Thinking Global Restructuring With Gender: What Are The Stakes?

Leslie Salzinger, University of California at Berkeley

Discussant: Cynthia Fuchs Epstein, Graduate Center, CUNY

This panel seeks to unpack the processes of economic and cultural restructuring by highlighting research on gender and work in the global south. Showcasing evidence from India, Mexico and the Middle East, panelists use emerging economies as unique petri dishes to witness the impact of global production networks on micro inequalities. Together, we will ask: When we view the market through this lens of gendered personhood, how do we make sense of these cultural orders and shifts? And in what ways do these exogenous scripts mold internal social movements in these societies? The last half-century has witnessed a range of international responses to the dissemination of neoliberal markets, norms and values. One such significant reaction has been the worldwide systemic inclusion of women in new kinds of workforces. And more recent research reveals these renegotiations are palpable even in higher ends of the labor spectrum. For example, in Arab "global" work environments, although women and men both suffer penalties for being "local", men suffer a higher relative penalty in global contexts than their female peers. Similarly, research from India's elite professional firms show that women uniquely poised to restructure cultural scripts because domestic firms over conform to idealized neoliberal values of merit and equality. By invoking these perspectives, this panel urges its' audience to look not just as how markets become cultural; but also how in these sites of emergence, markets produce new cultures of an ideal worker capable of renegotiating existing hierarchies of gender and class.

158. Author Meets Critics Session. Citizen-Protectors: The Everyday Politics of Guns in an Age of Decline (Oxford University Press, 2015) by Jennifer Carlson

159. Policy and Research Workshop. The Panel Study of Income Dynamics

Palais des congrès de Montréal, 512D, 8:30-10:10 a.m.

Session Organizer: Paula W. Fomby, University of Michigan

Leader: Paula W. Fomby, University of Michigan

This interactive workshop is geared toward current and prospective users of the Panel Study of Income Dynamics (PSID, psid.org), the world's longest running longitudinal household panel survey. It provides an overview of the general structure and content of PSID and its supplemental surveys (including the Child Development Supplement, the Transition into Adulthood Supplement, and the Disability and Time Use Supplement) as well as an update on recent and current data collection efforts (the Rosters & Transfers Files, the Childhood Retrospective Circumstances Study, the Web/Mail Supplement, and the 2014 Child Development Supplement). The second half of the workshop includes a detailed walk-through of the PSID website, documentation, and data center as well as a question and answer session related to participant specific inquiries. The PSID has collected data on a wide range of sociologically relevant topics from a nationally representative sample of US families and their descendants since 1968. Content domains include employment, occupations, income, wealth, education, expenditures, health, aging, marriage, childbearing, child development, youth transitions, philanthropy, intergenerational relations, and numerous other topics.

160. Teaching Workshop. The Politics of Collaboration: Issues of Power and Pedagogy in Faculty-Student Research Partnerships

Palais des congrès de Montréal, 512B, 8:30-10:10 a.m.

Session Organizer: Gary Alan Fine, Northwestern University

Leader: Gary Alan Fine, Northwestern University

Co-Leader: Peter S. Bearman, Columbia University

Panelists: Ann Mische, University of Notre Dame

Dawn T. Robinson, University of Georgia

Iddo Tavory, New York University

How to maintain a productive research collaboration between faculty and graduate students is a salient challenge, but is one with great benefits. As scholars who have engaged in important collaborations as students and as faculty, we recognize issues of power and the importance of clarity in setting the terms of any joint scholarly engagement both prior to the project and throughout data collection, writing, and the publication process. When operating with trust and transparency, collaboration can be important for pedagogy and mentorship, but at times dissatisfactions and even feelings of betrayal or deception are possible. With many sociological publications developing from a "research team," explicit attention to collaboration across status lines is essential.

161. Regular Session Ethnomethodology and Conversation Analysis: Achieving Recognizable Objects and Information - Medical Settings

In most massified educational systems, the rankings and quantified indicators have become progressively more frequent and contribute to the hierarchization of pupils and schools. Quantitative evaluations are used to measure “educational performances,” not only for international comparisons, but also to assess the efficiency and the impact of programs, and management and treatment of educational problems. The way they are read and used by the actors may contribute to the stagnancy of the social, racial and gender inequalities, but with the impression of a transparency and an equal school system. This thematic session investigates evaluation practices in different countries and their presumed objectivity, as well as the alternative views of such practices by educational actors, parents, and pupils. From a critical perspective, this session will highlight the effects of educational evaluation practices on social, gender, and racial inequalities in schools. The differences in the educational systems’ structure, their organization and their contribution to these inequalities will be discussed in the light of the different levels, from primary to higher education, in order to emphasize the variations in the amplitude of these reproduction. This session includes papers from the USA, Belgium, Switzerland, and France and will contribute to the international comparison on these questions.

194. Thematic Session. Global Work, Culture and Inequality

The Moral Measure of Overwork. Allison Pugh, University of Virginia; Sarah Elizabeth Mosseri, University of Virginia

Multiple scholars have documented the power of work as a moral measure in the United States. Despite increased work precariousness, and some reported ambivalence about work by cohort or generation, there is evidence that many invest increasing symbolic importance in work – in having a full-time job, being busy, working long hours, and the like – as proof of one’s adulthood, honor, or character. How does this compare globally or, in the US, across populations? Panelists will consider the culture of work in various contexts and comparatively, including in finance/tech sectors, in the US, Europe and elsewhere, and by gender and class.

195. Thematic Session. International Perspectives on the Measurement of Race and Ethnicity

 Discussant: Danielle Juteau, Université de Montréal

Issues of capturing statistically ethnic diversity in the contemporary world remain a challenge across cultures, embodying different conceptions of the meaning of ethnic difference and variation. This session will focus on issues such as the use of the term “race” and color, reliance on questions on national origin, the significance of language, use of religion as a marker, and the problems posed by capturing ethnic mixture. There will be a particular emphasis on French Canada, Europe and Latin America.

196. Special Session. Culture and Embodied Cognition: Readjusting Boundaries between Mind, Brain, and Body

How do we think ... make meaning ... process and comprehend the people and things we encounter in our daily existence? Traditionally, scholars studying these matters offer different answers to these complex questions. Some—including neurologists, cognitive psychologists, evolutionary biologists and computer scientists—attend almost exclusively to neural operations. They address what we might call the “inside” aspects of thought, as they tie the structure and function of the brain to processes such as attention, perception, classification and memory. Others—including cognitive sociologists, cultural anthropologists and social psychologists—attend to what we might call the “outside” dimensions of thought. Here the study of mind takes priority over the brain as scholars explore the sociocultural conventions and norms that inform what we attend to or ignore, how we classify people, places, objects or events, and what we remember or forget during our social encounters and experiences. In recent years, a third group of scholars have suggested a more expansive approach to cognition. Theories of “embodied cognition” help us bridge brain and mind and connect the inside and outside elements of thought. The body is central in building that bridge. Embodied cognition theories suggest that how we think, make meaning, process and comprehend the world involves the sentient—what our bodies feel, what they see, hear, smell, taste and touch. Thus the brain alone cannot explain how we think, and thought is not simply the product of cultural patterns and rules. For these theorists, our bodily experiences and the contexts in which those experiences are situated prove equally important to a thorough understanding of cognition. In this session, participants will present sociological research that is informed by the embodied cognition movement. Through both theoretically and empirically based presentations, panelists will offer support for the perspective as a lens on culture and cognition. Moreover, they will address what the embodied cognition movement holds for the future of culture and cognition and the steps the field must take to fully realize such benefits

Despite the "cultural" nature of many of the issues central to migration scholarship, the application of tools and concepts from the sociology of culture to investigate questions of immigration has been, overall, halting and uneven (Levitt 2005, Menjivar 2010). This session will explore the possibilities of a more cultural approach to the study of migration by bringing together sociologists who are employing tools of cultural analysis to study migration processes and subjectivities. The session will both highlight effective strategies for using culture to investigate pressing and timely questions about migration, and identify common threads that might form the basis of a shared cultural sociology of immigration. The questions that such a sociology would seek to answer, both in this session and beyond, might include: How do migrants classify and assign meaning to members of receiving country populations, and vice versa? How is cultural life and practice reorganized at the level of everyday life in the process of settlement? How are newly emergent forms of identity and self-classification among migrant populations contested and negotiated in the intra-group setting? How do migrants receive, adapt, or reject cultural practices, schemas, and discourses made newly available in the receiving country context? How do migrants understand and experience notions of citizenship, nationality, legality, and belonging in everyday life? How can long-standing terms of analysis such as "assimilation" and "acculturation" be reconceptualized to provide increased analytical leverage and empirical rigor? Presentations in this session will highlight innovative approaches to the study of migration through cultural sociology.

Leader: Wendy Naus, Consortium of the Social Science Associations
Do you have a passion for advocacy, or perhaps just looking to learn what you can do to promote sociological scholarship to inform policy? During this workshop, you will learn about how politics and the actions of elected officials can shape policies impacting scientific research, discuss ways research can meaningfully inform policy on a range of topics, how sociologists can engage in the policy process from home and in Washington, crafting messages about your research that resonate with lay-audiences, and effective ways of engaging the general public in support of social science research. ASA is a founding member of the Consortium of Social Science Associations (COSSA), a Washington, DC-based advocacy organization whose primary purpose is to promote sustainable federal funding for social and behavioral science research and federal policies that positively impact the conduct of research. COSSA Executive Director Wendy Naus will lead a discussion these and other topics, and share best practices for engaging in advocacy and outreach on behalf of your science. Be sure to bring your questions and ideas.

Social scientists have become preoccupied with a systematic examination of the ways in which cultural processes such as evaluation, commensuration, canonization and standardization are feeding into inequality. This session brings together some of the most generative recent research on this topic, with the hope of stimulating increased attention to how classification, meaning-making and institutionalization participate in pathways that feed inequality.

232. Thematic Session. Field-Based Approaches to the Study of Political Discourse

Palais des congrès de Montréal, 511C, 12:30-2:10 p.m.

Rodney Benson, New York University
Bart Bonikowski, Harvard University

Sociologists have recently returned to the study of institutional politics, reclaiming territory previously ceded to political science. From the analysis of social cleavages and political parties to policy feedback effects, the discipline is once again engaging with the role of political power in producing and reinforcing social inequality. As part of this development, growing emphasis is being placed on the centrality of political discourse in both enabling and constraining social change. The stigmatization of immigrants and ethnic minorities, the populist vilification of political and intellectual elites, and the elision of substantive issues in favor of incendiary rhetoric have become common features of political culture in the U.S. and Europe alike. Sociologists are in an ideal position to shed light on the range of discursive repertoires in legislative and electoral politics, the mechanisms that lead political actors to select particular discursive options, and the impact of particular forms of claims-making on policy and the contours of subsequent debates. Such work must take on a doubly relational perspective: it must consider meaning as constituted by systems of symbolic relations and it must view discursive choices as stemming from the relations among political actors and between political actors and their target audiences. Field analysis offers a particularly useful framework for understanding these processes. This session seeks to showcase cutting-edge research that employs a field-based perspective to research on political discourse in institutional politics, with a particular focus on unique sources of data and innovative methods that are able to capture the relational properties of claims-making.

The papers on this panel examine the complex relationship between happiness and inequality using diverse methodologies and from global perspectives. Calvo et al's paper draws data from the Gallup World Poll to examine determinants of immigrants' happiness across different immigration pathways (Global South-Global North, South-South, North-North, North-South). Bartram's paper examines the relationship between immigration and happiness, investigating whether migration to a wealthier country brings greater happiness to the immigrants. Based on data from a three-year project that consists of both ethnographies and a national representative survey, Hsu et al analyze the multiple cultural sources of happiness in urban China under the conditions of great political change and economic inequality. Simone Schneider uses data of the European Social Survey 2012/13 to examine whether subjective social status – a person's perception of his/her social standing in the social hierarchy – is an important psychological mechanism explaining the inequality-satisfaction link across European societies. Benjamin Radcliff and Alexander Pacek analyze the political determinants of inequality in subjective well-being across nations.

234. Thematic Session. Mobilizing Culture in Divided Cities: Inclusion, Exclusion and the Politics of Urban Belonging

How is culture mobilized toward inclusion – but also exclusion – across the unequal urban realm? It is a classic insight of urban sociology that most cities are somehow “divided,” concentrating difference and fostering multiple communities. Much rarer are investigations into the production and use of cultural forms where city space is brought into focus. The city is a locus for making and distinguishing cultural categories, artifacts, and senses; it is an environment where culture is wielded in inventive, substantive ways that shape the physical order of social inequality, as well as how it is felt. This session addresses how culture in a variety of forms is mobilized in place-based struggles over belonging in cities around the world. Inspired by scholarship on cultural boundary-marking, spatial struggles over authenticity and righteousness, and the nexus of culture, power, and inclusion, our participants focus on how divided cities pivot on – and can be improved or worsened through – strategies of cultural mobilization that aim toward inclusion of some kind, but may have a counterface of exclusion as politics play out in and on space. We look at how space can be a platform, a tactic, or a project in struggles over culture that yield greater inclusion or exclusion. We dwell on cases where political valences are not always so plain, requiring deeper analysis and comparison. By engaging directly with varied, intersecting social inequalities, we highlight tricky contexts that can broaden our knowledge about bolstering inclusion in troubled cities, yet with circumspection.

Across the world, technological advances enable communication and information flows previously unimaginable yet also create challenges for social actors – from individuals and communities to companies and nation-states – regarding privacy, that is, its protection, limits and management. In previous work, sociologists and others distinguished between behavior and speech that was “in public” versus “in private.” Regardless of whether the line between public and private was ever as bright as we now assume, today behavior and speech leave data trails that can reveal beliefs, traits, actions and interests that not only may be considered private, but also have real effects on individual and collective outcomes. At the same time, advances in (and lack of or variation in legal limits on) monitoring, storing, and analyzing all of this “big data” (i.e., surveillance) enable commercial and government entities to have significant power that crosses political boundaries and legal jurisdictions. Global actors, including governments and corporations, social movements and citizens, seek both to utilize these technologies for individual and collective benefits but also to limit their reach and impact. This session seeks to explore privacy and surveillance as related to fundamental sociological concepts and questions from multiple perspectives, including but not limited to, sociology of culture, media & technology, law, social psychology and group processes, and political sociology. The session is open to empirical research as well as theoretical exploration of issues related to privacy and surveillance in society from various international or comparative perspectives. This session seeks to explore these issues from multiple perspectives, including but not limited to, sociology of culture, media & technology, law, psychology and group process. The session is open to empirical research on a related topic, as well as theoretical exploration of the key issues related to privacy and surveillance in society.

One of the issues sociologists must consider as part of their retirement planning is whether they want to maintain a connection with their institution or organization (or if they want to establish a connection with another institution or organization). This session will focus on some of the possibilities in maintaining a connection as well as some of the barriers that have been encountered. The presenters are from a range of different types of institutions, and different parts of North America, and they have had varying experiences. They will make short presentations of their experiences, then the discussion will be opened to questions from the audience.

240. Policy and Research Workshop. Contingent Faculty in Academic Sociology (sponsored by the ASA Task Force on Contingent Faculty)

Catherine L. Moran, University of New Hampshire

Victor W. Perez, University of Delaware

ASA has established a Task Force on Contingent Faculty to examine employment trends, conditions of employment, the position of contingent faculty in the university, the effects on careers, and the consequences for higher education. Conditions for full-time non-tenure-system faculty are generally dramatically better than conditions for part-time per-course instructors, with the former more common at research universities and the latter more common at community colleges and state universities. The Task Force aims to have a (highly) preliminary report by the 2017 Annual Meeting, and will seek feedback from workshop participants on our understanding of the larger framework of these changes and their consequences. We seek feedback on the existing situation on various kinds of campuses and on recommendations for future action by ASA, sociology departments, universities, and individuals. All panelists are Task Force members.

This session will feature some of the most important recent work on the many manifestations of globalization as they impact inequality. This includes the circulation of expressive culture, the influence of transnational social movements, and the transformation of practices of citizenship. In addition, participants will consider the relative importance of economic inequality as compared to social and political status.

Comparing the Political Economy of Inequalities in the United States and European Large Metropolis. Paul Pierson, University of California-Berkeley; Patrick Le Galès, Sciences Po CNRS

Rising segregation by income and the global proliferation of gated communities threaten social cohesion and imply the secession of the rich from social and civic responsibilities. Social classes seem to inhabit separate worlds, feeding populism in many countries. Policies to reduce economic segregation -- inclusionary zoning, court-ordered housing integration, mobility programs like Moving to Opportunity, and mixed-income housing programs -- are often resisted with NIMBY tactics, and even when implemented, may stigmatize or isolate low-income households. This panel asks: What do the most recent trends in economic segregation look like in the US and abroad? Can the US learn from the integration policy experiences of other societies with similar class polarization? How can we frame policy discourse and design economic desegregation programs to encourage social inclusion and reduce the growing separation of social worlds?

On Demarcating the Moral. Steven Lukes, New York University
Morality has been of increasing interest as a field of empirical inquiry to anthropology (ordinary ethics), economics (behavioral economics), psychology (moral psychology), moral philosophy (experimental ethics), and neuroscience. Sociologists have been developing a new sociology of morality, too. Our proposed thematic session will ask what sociologists' contributions to these ongoing debates have been and should be. In light of the meeting's theme, we wish to explore two more specific questions. What have sociologists learned about the moral dimensions of power and inequality? How have they or can they benefit from looking at these issues in comparative perspective? In many societies, morality is widely invoked in public discourse and in organizational life and at both the macro and the micro levels. For example, on the one hand, morality sometimes legitimizes power and inequality, and sometimes manifests and widens unequal distributions of material and cultural resources. On the other hand, morality fuels protest and resistance; historically, moral views and institutions have often been at the heart of social and political change. How do sociologists understand these social processes? What are the significance and effects of moral norms and practices? To what extent are they used strategically? To what extent are they dependent on underlying moral background elements? How do they shape power and inequality outcomes? Last but not least, what practical implications (if any) follow from sociological accounts of the interactions between morality, power, and inequality? We have identified four panelists from a larger list (the first four in the list below). One of them, Webb Keane, is an anthropologist who has just published a major book on these topics, Ethical Life: Its Natural and Social Histories. Thus, a further goal of this panel is to bring an anthropologist to the table, on the assumption that our two disciplines can benefit from a joint discussion of these questions.

273. Thematic Session. The Globalization of Contemporary Art: Markets, (De-)Coloniality and (De-)Commodification

Palais des congrès de Montréal, 512C, 2:30-4:10 p.m.

Presider: Adrian Favell, University of Leeds

Panelists: Olav Velthuis, University of Amsterdam

Larissa Buchholz, Northwestern University

Patricia A. Banks, Mount Holyoke

Virag Molnar, The New School for Social Research

Discussant: Michael Hutter, WZB Berlin Social Science Center

Building on the powerful presence of Howard Becker (Artworlds) and Pierre Bourdieu in the discipline, the narrowly focused but richly significant sociology of contemporary art and artworlds offers a lens on key processes of global cultural diffusion, inequalities, and urban change. Contemporary art, for example, has become central to the cultural consumption and self-image of elites around the world, as well as the conflicted transformation of global cities through cultural policy and gentrification. The session assembles several of leading pioneers articulating an agenda that crosses economic, cultural, and global sociology. Two speakers, Velthuis and Buchholz, in their work tackle the creation and collection of value in contemporary globalizing commercial art fields, while Banks and Molnar's work look into counter-hegemonic possibilities and paradoxes, in emergent contemporary African art and urban street art, respectively. Commentary will be led by Hutter one of the most distinguished senior names in the field. The panel will be organized with short interventions/statements and open back and forth discussion, with pro-active chairing – in a lively roundtable format.

In this workshop, publicly engaged scholars and activists will discuss how they bridge the oft-lamented chasm between the academy and 'real world' social justice work (e.g., LGBTQ activism, feminism, antiracist activism, and economic justice). Some topics that panelists might address include: the advantages and challenges of doing public sociology; writing/speaking for academic versus popular audiences; building activist connections outside academia; justifying/amplifying one's public sociology in CVs, on the job market, and during tenure consideration; and thinking critically about causes one cares about. No affiliation with the Caucus will be required to attend this workshop in the spirit of building bridges with other sections and increasing Caucus visibility within ASA.

278. Professional Development Workshop. Preparing for Applied Work Outside of Sociology: Lessons in Translation

Palais des congrès de Montréal, 512E, 2:30-4:10 p.m.

Session Organizer: Kathleen C. Oberlin, Grinnell College

Leader: Kathleen C. Oberlin, Grinnell College

What should one consider when transitioning from graduate school to an alternative academic position/applied position? What are some of the best practices for how to approach 'translating' one's skill set? Or, simply how should one talk about skills and experience for a broader, applied audience? What is useful, what's valuable, and what needs to be developed further for certain types of positions? The preceding questions are simply a few of the issues we will consider in this workshop on applied positions tied to the social sciences. This workshop will be of particular interest to graduate students and faculty considering a transition/expansion of their academic work.

279. Policy and Research Workshop. Women's Rights and Policy: International Human Rights Treaties and Constitutional Reforms

Co-Leader: Susan C. Pearce, East Carolina University

Building on the work of Sociologists for Constitutional Reform (SCR)—a group devoted marshaling sociological research, teaching, and service to inspire innovative thinking on the potential for an amended or revised Constitution—this workshop explores the issue of women's rights in the US. Notwithstanding its status as a path-breaking document and its strengths in the area of first-generation civil and political rights, the US Constitution has fallen out of step not only with cutting-edge human rights thinking (emanating from the UN, the NGO sector, and the world of social movements), but also with the revised constitutions of many countries. Accordingly, SCR members have published on the benefits of amending or revising the Constitution to capture the emancipatory potential of contemporary human rights norms. Citing the proposed Equal Rights Amendment, which earned 35 of the necessary 38 state ratifications in the 1970s before expiring in 1982, and the 1979 UN Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination Against Women (CEDAW), which the United States signed but failed to ratify, the workshop organizers will lead a discussion of the following questions: How are the ERA and CEDAW relevant to the current period? Why should we consider amending or revising the Constitution to include women's rights? How might such an amendment or revision affect policymaking and institution building in the US? How might it affect norms, consciousness, and practices in the U.S.? As members of SCR, the workshop organizers will moderate a conversation on ways to incorporate a concern for constitutional reform in general and for women's human rights in particular into research, teaching, and service in sociology.

307. Thematic Session. Higher Education/Shifting Processes

Palais des congrès de Montréal, 511B, 8:30-10:10 a.m.

Session Organizer: Yasemin Soysal, University of Essex

Panelists: Kim Voss, University of California

Michael Sauder, University of Iowa

Francisco O. Ramirez, Stanford University

Yasemin Soysal, University of Essex

Higher Education systems across the globe are being transformed. Recent decades have seen the expansion of the core missions of higher education systems (beyond teaching and research to driving regional and national economic development) along with their increasing embeddedness within a wider framework of competition (facilitated by national and international excellence rankings) and assessments (via national quality assurance schemes). This panel addresses the nature of university changes, the global forces that lead to changes, and the cultural/institutional frames utilized to make sense of these changes.

308. Thematic Session. Population Health and Culture: The Contributions of Sociological Theory and Methods

Palais des congrès de Montréal, 511D, 8:30-10:10 a.m.

Session Organizer: Christine A. Bachrach, University of Maryland

Presider: Christine A. Bachrach, University of Maryland

Transforming the Food System: A Cultural and Infrastructural

Approach to Public Health. Andrew Deener, University of Connecticut

Individual Choice and Public Health: Considerations of Risk, Parenting, and Prevention in Childhood Vaccine Decisions.

Jennifer A. Reich, University of Colorado Denver

Heterogeneity in Network Structure and Health Seeking Behavior

Associated with Health Ideation in a Senegalese Population. Jack Sandberg, George Washington University

Discussants: Andrew J. Perrin, University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill

Peter S. Bearman, Columbia University

The panel examines multiple ways that the sociological study of culture contributes to improving population health science. Population health seeks to understand how population health outcomes are jointly shaped by the interplay of macro-level factors (e.g. stratification systems and cultural institutions) and individual-level phenomena (e.g. biology, cognition, behavior). This session focuses on one facet that is beginning to receive more attention within population health – culture. Panel members will address the following questions: (a) how do cultural frames, beliefs, and values impact health behaviors, health care, and health promotion; (b) how do individual agency, social interaction, and cultural institutions combine to produce change in health; and (c) what contributions can students of culture address to improve health in the U.S. and across the globe? The panel features three speakers who will present research that examines the cultural underpinnings of health at the population level. The two discussants will reflect on key questions and challenges in conducting research that can augment the contributions of research on culture to understand and improve the health of populations.

309. Thematic Session. Preserving Cultural Heritage: Hegemony, Sustainability, and Global Commodification

Palais des congrès de Montréal, 511E, 8:30-10:10 a.m.

Session Organizer: Alvaro Santana-Acuña, Whitman College

Presider: Alexandra Marie Kowalski

Trading Places: Pathways of Negotiating Space on World Heritage

Sites. Robert Parthesius, Leiden University and New York University-Abu Dhabi

World Society and World Heritage. Michael A. Elliott, Towson University; Vaughn Schmutz, University of North Carolina at Charlotte

Cultural Models of World Heritage: Leaders, Discerners, the Persistent, and the Disengaged. Victoria Reyes, University of California, Riverside

Commodifying the Past: When Becoming World Heritage Site Does More Harm than Good. Alvaro Santana-Acuña, Whitman College

From Kyoto to Paris to Abu Dhabi, national and local governments strive to preserve their cultural heritage for present and future generations, whether tangible (e.g., cities, buildings, and objects) or intangible (e.g., languages, songs, and rituals). Such efforts are often driven by the desire to acquire the prestigious “World Heritage” label from UNESCO. Instituted in 1972, this UNESCO program only adds to its list heritage of “outstanding universal value.” This list now includes 1031 properties, the majority of which (801) are cultural sites. Most of these are found in Europe, while Africa has the lowest amount of them. This inequality suggests that preservation efforts entail strategies to fix the boundaries of these cultural products. The result is an “imagined heritage,” by which visitors are expected to experience in situ tangible objects or intangible activities that authentically portray peoples' lives in a given past. This session will analyze the fabrication and preservation of cultural heritage. Who fabricates it and how? How is preservation understood and implemented in different cultural contexts? What role does the UNESCO World Heritage program play in the production of global cultural hegemony? Since World Heritage candidates must meet uniform criteria, can the acquisition of World Heritage status endanger the preservation of a site due to cultural standardization? The session will also address the issue of sustainability by analyzing the clash between rising mass heritage tourism (e.g., Prague's historical center or India's Taj Mahal) and preservationists' call for more inclusive cultural heritage protection.

310. Presidential Session on Current Societal Challenges.
Trump's Challenge to American Democracy?

Palais des congrès de Montréal, 510C, 8:30-10:10 a.m.

Session Organizer: Michèle Lamont, Harvard University

Presider: Peter Gourevitch, University of California-San Diego

Panelists: Eduardo Bonilla-Silva, Duke University

Jacob Hacker, Yale University

Sidney Tarrow, Cornell University

Joan C. Williams, University of California - Hastings College

Panelists will address the various ways in which the Trump presidency has created new and distinct challenges for the American Polity, for the political system, as well as for various groups of citizens and non-citizens. Offering different and complementary perspective, they will also draw conclusion and make recommendations for the road ahead.

311. Special Session. Remaking Academic Life Across the Globe: Institutional Ethnographies of the Corporate

Palais des congrès de Montréal, 511F, 8:30-10:10 a.m.

Session Organizers: Marjorie L. DeVault, Syracuse University

Eric Mykhalovskiy, York University

What Institutional Ethnography Offers Struggles to Subvert the

Corporate University. Janice Newson, York University

The Institutional Ethnography approach promises to illuminate organizational changes that are often occurring "behind our backs" but have profound effects on people's work and everyday lives. In this session, scholars using Institutional Ethnography will present analyses of transformations in university life in different parts of the world. Their presentations will explore the varying local expressions of an international move toward the corporate university, including consequences for faculty and students and the contributions of Institutional Ethnography for contemporary struggles in higher education.

Everyday, journalists are looking for expert sources on topics their audiences care about, topics sociologists are natural experts in. They want to talk to you... but are you ready to talk to them? The ASA is looking to bridge that gap and hosting a workshop/panel designed to help members improve their public engagement practices. For that purpose, we are working with The Conversation and Scholars Strategy Network and have invited them to come to Montreal to discuss how they can help sociologists promote their research to the widest possible audience. The Conversation (theconversation.com) is an independent source for informed commentary and analysis, all written by the academic and research community and edited by journalists for the general public as a way of promoting a better understanding of current affairs and complex issues among the public at large. The Scholars Strategy Network (scholarsstrategynetwork.org) seeks to improve public policy and strengthen democracy by organizing scholars working in America's colleges and universities, connecting their research to policymakers, citizens associations, and the media. The workshop panel will provide details on how to: • Pitch and write commentary, op-eds, essays and analysis for general interest media • Promote oneself as an expert source on particular topics of interest to media and public • Engage in an interview whether for print, TV, radio, and live broadcast • Build a portfolio of "news hits" in the course of creating a public persona as a subject matter expert

Mobility of Individuals and the Question of Security within and without Borders: Muslims in Europe and Migrants' Crises. Riva Kastoryano

Discussant: Louise Cainkar, Marquette University

This session concerns the place of Muslims and Islam in Western Europe. It considers the tensions between their desire to view themselves as socially integrated and valuable contributors to societies, and their stigmatization as 'the enemy within'. It also considers their relationship with other Muslims and their experience of racialization. Their position leads us to rethink social and symbolic boundaries in the post-Brexit European context, against the background of the refugee crisis.

The concept of "field" has proved useful across a number of sociological research areas. These substantive research programs include the areas of culture, organizations, political sociology, social movements, and race and ethnicity. While the idea of fields has been associated with the work of Pierre Bourdieu, scholars have developed the concept in the context of their engagement with empirical work, often in ways that do not reflect Bourdieu's conceptualization. This panel takes stock of these developments by considering how the different theoretical approaches are used across research areas and what advantages and disadvantages that each has. In particular, we attempt to discuss how to think about problems of boundary formation within and across fields.

Discussant: Shamus Rahman Khan, Columbia University

Although it is widely acknowledged that economically elite families play an important role in the stratification system, they have not yet garnered sufficient attention from social scientists. In this session, prominent scholars will bring fresh insights to a range of topics connected to wealth-holding and wealth transmission among the global ultra-wealthy, a cutting-edge research area within sociology. The papers will touch on stratification, economic sociology, the sociology of culture, and sociology of the family. They will have a broad appeal to both scholars and students. Brooke Harrington, Copenhagen Business School, highlights the secretive world of global wealth management experts and the ways in which they work closely with ultra-wealthy families to preserve wealth and shield it from government authorities. Jeremy Schulz, UC Berkeley, highlights the complex role of liquid and illiquid wealth within multigenerational business families in provoking conflict and building solidarity. He explores the symbolic meanings of both forms of wealth and how they mediate relations between older and younger generations. Lisa Keister will discuss how individuals and families accumulate wealth and join the top ranks of wealth holders. Rachel Sherman, New School for Social Research, looks at how wealthy and privileged New York parents cast themselves as morally worthy of their social advantages and thus as legitimately entitled. Legitimate entitlement depends on hard work, reasonable consumption, giving back, and raising children with similarly "good values."

Contextualizing Quebec's Interculturalism in Canada's Multiculturalism: A Transcultural Standpoint. Afef Benessaïeh, TÉLUQ

Discussant: Ben Carrington, University of Texas-Austin

Throughout the 20th century, various models of social inclusion have been proposed in order to reconsider the monolithic vision of national cultures among the various societies in the Americas, ranging from multicultural, or intercultural, to transcultural – either in the United States, Canada, Québec, Mexico, Brazil, Peru, or elsewhere. Based either on the recognition of the presence of a plurality of the cultural communities in a society (multicultural), or of the relations among those cultural communities (intercultural), or again of the transformations occurring in the meeting of those cultural communities (transcultural), those models have fueled different kinds of sociological analysis, as well as public policies in various contexts, and have being embodied in a wide variety of social and cultural expressions. Is one of these models, or which one of these models, can pretend to a mode adequate vision of the inclusion of the cultural differences (and particularly, for example, of the inclusion of First nations) within the various societies throughout the Americas? If so, what are the practices associated with these models, in terms of their social, aesthetic and ethical dimensions? How do the practices intersect with the (multi/inter/trans)cultural representations in those contexts? How are the specific cultural practices defined in such occasions? How are they performed? Do they ask for specific forms of dramatization, and to what extent do they reframe the grand narrative of national cultures? How far do they still challenge the monolithic vision promoted by the Western/European legacy of the modern colonization of the Americas, relayed by the formation of the nation-states throughout the Americas? And is there any possibility of transnational or hemispheric identification produced accordingly.

344. Thematic Session. What You See is What You Get? New Thinking on Race and the Visual

What You See Is What You Get? Influences of Ancestry and Phenotype on Racial Perception and Categorization. Destiny Peery, Northwestern University

Race has long been believed in the West to be a straightforward matter of perceiving obvious differences in superficial physical traits. As Western societies have become more demographically heterogeneous, however, the idea that one can simply "see" race has increasingly come under fire. Myriad groups including but not limited to multiracial people, Latinos, South Asians and Middle Easterners pose challenges to racial classification as usual in official checkboxes. And while some contend that DNA-based definitions offer a solution for assigning individuals to races, there is no definitive genetic taxonomy on the horizon. If anything, both biologists and social scientists have demolished the myth that races are genetically discrete, naturally-rooted and objectively-delineated groupings of human beings. Yet the widespread belief that we passively "see" racial difference endures, making it a key element of the cultural toolkit of racially stratified societies.

345. Thematic Session. Youth Jobs and the Future: Problems and Prospects

Palais des congrès de Montréal, 511D, 10:30 a.m.-12:10 p.m.

Session Organizer: Lynn Sharon Chancer, Hunter College

Presider: Lynn Sharon Chancer, Hunter College

Panelists: Maria Kefalas, St. Joseph's University

Lynn Sharon Chancer, Hunter College

Arne L. Kalleberg, University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill

Martin Sánchez-Jankowski, University of California-Berkeley

Discussant: Christine Trost, University of California-Berkeley

A recently published report The Plummeting Labor Market Fortunes of Teens and Young Adults (2014) found employment prospects for teens and young adults had grown precipitously worse between 2000 and 2011. During the 'Great Recession' of 2007, youth unemployment in America soared to a post-War record of 19%. While this social problem is well-known and focused upon across Europe, it is very severe – if relatively overlooked – in the United States where, currently, 10 million youth are without work and millions more are under-employed. Moreover, surprisingly little has been written about youth unemployment specifically, and the sense of anxiety it creates within what Arne Kalleberg calls a now 'precarious economy.' In the US, labor market policies generally have been discussed, but mostly in terms of simple loss of earnings whereas early life unemployment creates a harmful multiplier effect, engendering a wide range of negative adult life outcomes and attendant social problems. Most worrisome, perhaps, is the significant increase in American youth who feel insecure and 'disconnected' from work and education, and who feel that their life chances and opportunities are depressingly uncertain or declining. Youth joblessness is a major public issue affecting American society and culture. Ironically, social scientific responses to youth joblessness have been analogously 'disconnected'. Within sociology, not enough discussion has taken place between scholars interested in political economy, culture, work, labor and family about this issue: also the problem of youth joblessness has not been tackled with the focused aim of influencing policy-makers, politicians, and legislators. This panel tries to fill in this gap with papers that take a wide range of perspectives on youth, jobs and precarity. Each of the papers also make policy recommendations – some involving economic and political changes, and others changes in cultural attitudes – so as to both further investigate this issue and recognize its significance going forward

346. Presidential Session on Current Societal Challenges.

The Trump/Brexit Moment: Causes and Consequences

Palais des congrès de Montréal, 518B, 10:30 a.m.-12:10 p.m.

Session Organizer: Mike Savage, LSE

Presider: Mike Savage, LSE

The Lost Unifying Energy of the State: Responding to Three Constituents: EU states, Financial Markets and the People. Patrick Le Galès, Sciences Po CNRS

The Revolt of the Rust Belt: Place, Politics, and Sociology in the Twenty-First Century. Michael McQuarrie, London School of Economics

American Hybrid: Donald Trump's Strange Marriage of Populism and Plutocracy. Paul Pierson, University of California-Berkeley
This session reflects on challenges posed by the U.S. election and related political developments in Europe, such as the 'Brexit' referendum in the UK. Papers discuss how we can understand the election of Donald Trump as President of the United States, and what sense social scientists in particular can make of the political events that are now shaping political and social life in the US, the UK, and elsewhere. They examine the dimensions of sociology to which the election result calls attention – for example, populism, nationalism, inequality, anti-elite politics, migration, finance, and expertise – as well as considering the broader global patterns in which Donald Trump's election appears to fit. This session brings together some of the authors contributing to a special issue of The British Journal of Sociology to be published in Fall 2017, to be edited by Nigel Dodd, Michele Lamont, and Mike Savage.

347. Special Session. Generations of Suicide: Understanding Cohort Differences in Suicide Risk

Palais des congrès de Montréal, 512A, 10:30 a.m.-12:10 p.m.

Session Organizer: Steven Stack, Wayne State University

Presider: Frank Trovato, The University of Alberta

Durkheim and His Discontents: A Social Psychological, Emotional, and Cultural Re-Appraisal of Suicide. Anna S. Mueller, The University of Chicago; Seth Abrutyn, University of British Columbia

How Being "The Other" Matters: Examining the Influence of Social Context on the Individual Risk of Suicide Using a U.S. Big Data Solution. Bernice A. Pescosolido, Indiana University

Generations of Suicide: Understanding the Increased Risk for Suicide among U.S. Postwar Birth Cohorts. Julie A. Phillips, Rutgers University

The Strain Theory of Suicide. Jie Zhang, SUNY College at Buffalo
Discussant: Matt Wray, Temple University

The session deals with current developments in the sociological analysis of suicide, on the occasion of the 120th anniversary of the publication of Durkheim's classic work, Suicide. Each participant will deal with how their perspective is both similar and different from that of a classic Durkheimian model of suicide and discuss the latest developments in their ongoing stream of research on suicide.

348. Special Session. Intra- and Inter-Religious Divisions (cosponsored with Association for the Sociology of Religion)

InterContinental Montreal, A. Fraser, 10:30 a.m.-12:10 p.m.

Session Organizer: Michael O. Emerson, North Park University

Presider: Michael O. Emerson, North Park University

Religion, Gender and the Sociology of Islam: Sunni and Shi'a Perspectives on Gender Traditionalism. Gabriel A Acevedo, University of Texas at San Antonio

Civil Religion and the Crisis in American National Identity. Rhys H. Williams, Loyola University Chicago

The Freedom to Choose: Religious Homes, Religious Divorces, and Who's Homeless. Nancy Ammerman, Boston University
Discussant: Korie L. Edwards, Ohio State University

Papers in this session situate religion under a framework of intersectionality. Invited session participants will discuss how religion intersects with gender, national identity, and family. Through the framework of intersectionality, this session will contribute to our understandings about intra- and inter-religious divisions.

351. Policy and Research Workshop. Grant-Seeking from Private Foundations: What Investigators Should Know

Palais des congrès de Montréal, 512B, 10:30 a.m.-12:10 p.m.

Session Organizer: James A. Wilson, Russell Sage Foundation

Leader: James A. Wilson, Russell Sage Foundation

Panelists: Leana Chatrath, Russell Sage Foundation

Rhoda Freelon, Spencer Foundation

Vivian S. Louie, William T. Grant Foundation

Seeking external funding for social science research is an increasingly competitive process and preparing a successful letter of inquiry and grant application can be a challenging and time-consuming exercise. In addition to the many government sources of research funding, private foundations can also be an important source of financial support. It is important however, to recognize that foundations differ from government sources in their funding priorities – foundations generally tend to have more constrained resources and target their funding for more specific purposes. In this panel session, program staff from three of the nation's most prominent funders of social, educational, economic and policy research will provide an overview of foundation programs and priorities, new initiatives, and the basics of grant-seeking from private foundations. With extensive experience in evaluating proposals as part of the grant-making process, panelists will also discuss, from the perspective of a funding organization, what investigators should consider when writing a grant application. This panel is designed to be especially useful for early career scholars but is also informative for more experienced investigators.

352. Teaching Workshop. The Benefits of Integrating Community Service as a Vehicle for Enhancing Courses to Promote Social Justice and Humanistic Values

Palais des congrès de Montréal, 512C, 10:30 a.m.-12:10 p.m.

Session Organizer: Michelle Marie Proctor, Madonna University

The focus of this interactive workshop will be to engage participants through discussion and activities exploring the latent and manifest benefits and logistical challenges of collaborative community service-learning projects. The goals of this workshop will be to assist participants in gaining insight into the value of community service-learning. In addition it will provide insight into pedagogical skills that can be used to promote and implement opportunities for students to become aware of power inequalities existing within society generally, and more specifically how they can develop and promote a sense of social justice of non-human animals.

Across the globe, societies are pulled apart by conflicts driven by linguistic, religious and ethno-racial differences, poverty and inequality, nativity, and more. Yet, hope persists against all odds, fed by normative commitments for belonging, solidarity, and social justice. This plenary features social scientists who are asked to reflect on actual and potential political and societal tools for achieving a better future and more successful societies. They will discuss some of the main challenges we face, and ways to make symbolic and social boundaries more permeable for greater social inclusion.

ASA staff will present data on the representation of various groups in the ASA leadership. The President will discuss what the ASA has done to address concerns about inclusion in our professional association and, together with three council members, will engage in an exchange with the audience concerning what we can do better. We will address not only diversity in our organization, but larger issues about participation, cultural citizenship, and marginalization in departmental life and higher education more generally. Please join us for constructive conversation about concrete steps ahead.

381. Thematic Session. Moving On Up: Symbolic Boundary Creation and Upward Mobility amongst Middle and Professional Classes in the Global South

Palais des congrès de Montréal, 511B, 2:30-4:10 p.m.

Discussant: Jules Naudet, CNRS-EHESS

Over the last three decades, global inequality has become increasingly characterized by within-country rather than between-country income inequality (Firebaugh 2003). And while there is contestation over the role globalization plays in this process (Giddens 1999), the diffusion of neoliberalism has undoubtedly shaped the way in which mobility is experienced and symbolic boundaries are traced across the world. This panel seeks to critically examine the contemporary reconfiguration of this stratification amongst upper-middle, middle and professional classes in global south sites where these processes are particularly rampant. We invite papers that decode the ways in which established social structures and traditional hierarchies in these countries are being renegotiated through social, cultural and economic processes. Unlike established postindustrial societies, we expect sites in the global south to allow us a window into understanding meaning-making processes as a response to global cultural references and exchanges. We not only seek to gain a better understanding of the composition of these new kinds of elite mobility but also of the ways in which the boundaries that demarcate "elite", "professionals" and "middle class" are defined anew in a globalizing world. What are the new markers of class in these sites? How do these frame pre-existing norms and cultural repertoires? What can that tell us about the complex relationship between globalization and stratification? We expect these comparisons to help inform new ways of understanding both similarities and difference between national cases; as well as to introduce new ways of thinking through concepts and methodologies inherited from the West.

382. Thematic Session. Panel Discussion: Culture, Social Science Research, and Policymaking

Palais des congrès de Montréal, 511D, 2:30-4:10 p.m.

Adam Gamoran, William T. Grant Foundation

Thomas M. Medvetz, University of California, San Diego

Alonzo Plough, Robert Wood Johnson Foundation

Much social science research is motivated by a desire to solve social problems through informed policymaking and practice. This session explores the role of culture in structuring the reception and use of social science research in the policymaking process and implementation of policies and programs. What can we learn about the role of social science research in policymaking from applying the conceptual tools of cultural sociology? How do the cultural logics of policymakers and policymaking institutions influence how they use, misuse, or ignore evidence from social scientists? When and how do ideas and knowledge travel from academia to public discourse and policy debates? Panelists from both inside and outside academia will address these questions across policy domains and in comparative perspective.

383. Thematic Session. Post-Bourdieuian Theoretical Agendas

Discussant: Mustafa Emirbayer, University of Wisconsin at Madison

This session explores the contemporary fruitfulness of Pierre Bourdieu's work for setting new theoretical agendas. It features contemporary research breaking new theoretical ground by going back directly to the work of Bourdieu and developing original readings of it, or building on some of its previously overlooked aspects. The session pays special attention to issues of culture and social boundaries, two themes that stand prominently on the Annual Meeting's agenda. The work of panelists will illustrate how Bourdieu-inspired insights into these themes can be creatively recombined to think anew about stratification, reproduction, and inequality in contemporary societies. Most significantly, these new theoretical developments share an interest in understanding these phenomena at a finer-grained level than was typically done in prior waves of Bourdieusian research. Presentations will reflect in particular on how Bourdieu's sociology of culture may serve as a foundation for a social aesthetics and a general cultural sociology (Martin and Merriman); on the mutual constitution of cultural and social structures and its relevance for thinking about status and valuation (Accominotti); on the influence of the Bourdieusian legacy for theorizing processes of exploitation (Mears); and on the new social physics of inequality (Menger).

384. Thematic Session. Secularism and Religion in the Public Sphere: Unintended Cultural Consequences

Palais des congrès de Montréal, 511A, 2:30-4:10 p.m.

Session Organizer: Michele Dillon, University of New Hampshire

Presenter: Gene Burns, Michigan State University

From the Axial Age to our Age: Religious Explanations of the World and their Rejections. John C. Torpey, Graduate Center, City University of New York

The Liberal Politicization of Pope Francis's Critique of Climate Change. Michele Dillon, University of New Hampshire

Strangers in a Strange Election. Michael Hout, New York University; Arlie Russell Hochschild, University of California-Berkeley

Discussant: Gene Burns, Michigan State University

This panel will offer diverse perspectives on the cross-cutting ways in which religious ethics and secular pressures are re-orienting American society. The first paper, by John Torpey, will critique recent theorizing on the so-called axial age by demonstrating how its one-sided, religious-ideas framework for the emergence of modernity does not satisfactorily account for the persistence of cultural conflicts and societal problems. In the second presentation, Michele Dillon will discuss the secular reception of Pope Francis's critique of climate change, drawing attention to its politicization in the U.S. by those on the left (as well as the right), and how this politicization contributes to distorting public communication. This will be followed by a conversation between Michael Hout and Arlie Hochschild on the growing religious and cultural divide in the U.S. Hout will draw on national survey data, and Hochschild on her qualitative research in Louisiana, to explore current tensions at the intersection of religion, secularism, and political culture. The panel discussant, Gene Burns, will draw on his expertise in religion and political sociology to offer integrating remarks and reflections on the issues at stake.

385. Special Session. Religion's Role in International Conflicts and Violence (cosponsored with Association for the Sociology of Religion)

Palais des congrès de Montréal, 513A, 2:30-4:10 p.m.

Session Organizer: Michael O. Emerson, North Park University

Presenter: Michael O. Emerson, North Park University

Religion as a Weapon of War: An Anthropological and Ethnographic Account. Jordan Kiper, University of Connecticut

Discussant: Sarah L. MacMillen, Duquesne University

This session invites scholars to discuss religion's role in violent international conflicts. Papers to be presented in this session contribute to our empirical understandings about religious conflicts, advance the development of scholarly understandings of religious violence and terror, and draw our attention to methodological concerns about religion's role in global peace and violence.

386. Special Session. The Rise of Sociogenomics: Cultural Context and Consequences

Genetic data and methods have a growing presence in sociology as well as other social scientific disciplines. In recent years, the new research fields of genoconomics, genopolitics, and genosociology have emerged. What aspects of contemporary American scientific, political, or popular culture have favored the rise of such fields? And what are their likely consequences? This panel will combine presentations from leading sociologists who are currently working to integrate genetic research into social science and those from sociologists who are studying the ramifications of their efforts.

389. Professional Development Workshop. From Dissertation to Book

Palais des congrès de Montréal, 512B, 2:30-4:10 p.m.

Session Organizer: Dawn R. Norris, University of Wisconsin-La Crosse

Co-Leaders: Valerie L. Chepp, Hamline University

Kristen Barber, Southern Illinois University, Carbondale

Tristan Bridges, The College at Brockport - SUNY

A completed but unpublished dissertation differs greatly from a book based on dissertation research. Dissertations use a clear methodology to research and explain a topic to a scholarly community so that advisers will understand and validate the work. By contrast, a published book must tell the story of research differently, with fresh insight, clarity, and a new audience in mind. This workshop focuses on how to make the writing transition from dissertation to book. It outlines: (1) differences between the dissertation and the book manuscript; (2) the intermediate stages in transforming dissertation research into a book manuscript; (3) common barriers to this transformation and strategies to overcome them; and (4) elements of a book prospectus. The workshop will provide informational materials and will include a brief audience Q&A and a hands-on workshop in which participants will work on one of three stages in the book development process: (1) deciding whether to write a book/writing the proposal; (2) shopping the proposal/negotiating the contract; or (3) writing the full manuscript/preparing for marketing.

390. Policy and Research Workshop. New Tools for Measuring Culture

Palais des congrès de Montréal, 515C, 2:30-4:10 p.m.

Andrew J. Perrin, University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill

Henk Roose, Ghent University

The sociological study of culture has long been advanced through qualitative methods that focus on problems of interpretation, hermeneutics, subjectivity, "thick description," and the study of implicit knowledge. Over the last 25 years quantitative sociologists have also increasingly been turning their attention to the study of culture. Initially this work embraced a production of culture approach which de-emphasized cultural content in favor of studies of cultural organizations and markets, but more recently we have also seen many new projects that seek to use formal methods to pursue more interpretative analyses of culture. This tendency has accelerated with the rise of social network modeling and more recently with an explosion of techniques for Big Data analysis, as many more opportunities are opening up to study culture in its relational aspects (both social and semiotic), to mine cultural content that is stored in digital formats, and to move from content analysis to the large-scale study of (what many analysts consider to be) unmediated text data. In this workshop we will review some of the main styles of formal studies of culture with the goal of providing a general overview of these methodologies, showing what they can and cannot do, and pointing workshop attendees to other important citations, training resources, and new research tools. Topics include forms of cultural analysis that employ network analysis methods, correspondence analysis, computational linguistics, social media data as well as other forms of Big Data.

This session considers the forms that poverty takes, the extent to which the poor are stigmatized across societies, and the circumstances that make the non-poor more likely to support social inclusion. Participants consider various cultural, institutional and social processes as well as policies that are put in place to improve social inclusion. This ranges from interventions in rural India that aim to transform social networks outside traditional caste and kinship networks, to studies that investigate how cities respond to housing crisis across continents and how non-profit aims to mobilize the poor for greater community involvement.

418. Thematic Session. Changing the Cultural Narrative

Palais des congrès de Montréal, 511A, 4:30-6:10 p.m.

Session Organizer: Marc W. Steinberg, Smith College

Presider: Marc W. Steinberg, Smith College

Panelists: Wendy Leo Moore, Texas A&M University

Zulema Valdez, University of California, Merced

Joyce M. Bell, University of Minnesota

Discussant: Matthew W. Hughey, University of Connecticut

Recent surveys suggest a waning belief in the Horatio Alger story and the metanarrative of the American Dream, particularly among younger generations. If this is the case there are important questions about how alternative narratives—particularly those which emphasize the collective rather than the individual and equity rather than hierarchy—might supersede this metanarrative. This session focuses on the possibilities for the rise and dissemination of alternative narratives in arenas such as politics and popular culture. How do such narratives gain legitimacy and achieve diffusion? In what ways does narrative struggle channel and limit the rise of alternatives?

419. Thematic Session. New Perspectives on Culture In, Around, and Through Social Networks

Palais des congrès de Montréal, 511C, 4:30-6:10 p.m.

Session Organizer: Mark C. Pachucki, University of Massachusetts, Amherst

Presider: Mark C. Pachucki, University of Massachusetts, Amherst

Panelists: Peter S. Bearman, Columbia University

Neha Gondal, Boston University

James A. Evans, University of Chicago

Kevin Lewis, University of California, San Diego

In recent years, a growing amount of scholarship has benefitted from interrogation of synthetic approaches to studying culture and social networks in order to understand micro-, meso-, and macro-level social processes. This session will explore theoretical and methodological challenges as well as rewards of doing so. Leading scholars in this area will present their recent work on this topic, which will be followed by a panel discussion of how their perspectives overlap as well as differ.

420. Thematic Session. Race, Culture, and Exclusion for People on the Move

Palais des congrès de Montréal, 511E, 4:30-6:10 p.m.

Session Organizer: Tiffany D. Joseph, Stony Brook University

Presider: Tiffany D. Joseph, Stony Brook University

Panelists: Pawan H. Dhingra, Tufts University

Tanya Maria Golash-Boza, University of California, Merced

Jessica Tollette, Harvard

Sylvia Zamora, Loyola Marymount University

Discussant: Tiffany D. Joseph, Stony Brook University

Global migration has played a significant role in transforming the locales to which individuals immigrate and the communities from which these migrants come. In recent years, Global North countries have struggled to incorporate larger influxes of (Global South) migrants amid a global recession and fiscal budget constraints as well as increasing socio-political conflict and concerns about climate change that have put people on the move. In receiving countries, a big concern is how these migrants, who hail from Africa, Asia, the Middle East, and Latin America and have different cultures, religions, and languages, will “fit” into their new societies. These migrants also bring significant ethno-racial heterogeneity and challenge cultural and national understandings of belonging and citizenship. Likewise, immigrant-sending countries struggle with how to fill the social, economic, and political absence left by these migrants. Yet, through transnational ties maintained while residing in host countries, migrants transmit global cultural and racial conceptions to family, friends, and institutions at home. This transnational movement has yielded challenges in what it means to belong to and be included in one or multiple nation-states, as well as a (re) construction of social and symbolic group boundaries. Therefore, this panel of race, culture, and migration scholars will discuss how race and ethnicity factor into cultural interpretations of inclusion/exclusion at the micro or macro level for migrants of diverse ethno-racial backgrounds in Brazil, Mexico, Spain, and the United States.

421. Special Session. Learning Race and Ethnicity: Socialization in the Family

Palais des congrès de Montréal, 516D, 4:30-6:10 p.m.

Session Organizer: Chinyere Osuji, Rutgers University at Camden

Presider: Chinyere Osuji, Rutgers University at Camden

Panelists: Jenifer L. Bratter, Rice University

Angela D. James

Velma McBride Murry, Vanderbilt University

The family is one of the most important institutions of socialization, including for membership into racial and ethnic groups and categories. With Asians, Blacks, Latinos, and multiracial individuals comprising the majority of children in the U.S., it becomes more imperative to understand the role of race and ethnicity in families. It will highlight emerging research on: multiracial identification; parental ethno-racial identification of children; the role of race in defining family; and the social psychological factors of ethno-racial socialization. The work and perspectives shared in this session will stimulate thinking on how to best conceptualize the roles and patterns of race and ethnicity in one of the most key institutions of socialization, the family. Keywords: family, race, ethnicity, multiracial, African American, youth, children

426. Professional Development Workshop. Creating and Using Accountability Groups

Palais des congrès de Montréal, 512A, 4:30-6:10 p.m.

Session Organizer: Craig Upright, Winona State University

Professional academics work in a unique institutional environment juggling teaching, researching, writing, and administration all with a typically flexible schedule. However, some of the most important career impacting projects -- such as dissertation writing, article publishing, and manuscript proposals -- have no deadlines and often take a back seat to more pressing and time-contingent matters. This workshop will introduce the concept of "accountability groups," informal collections of scholars who keep each other "accountable" daily on the progress of certain projects. Craig Upright will explain how the accountability group he created helped him stay focused by employing a relatively simple program. At the end of the workshop participants will have an opportunity to form their own accountability groups with each other.

HOROWITZ
Foundation
for Social Policy

Grants for Social Policy Research

Objective

The Horowitz Foundation for Social Policy supports the advancement of research and understanding in the major fields of the social sciences. Its specific purpose is to provide small grants to aspiring PhD students at the dissertation level to support the research they are undertaking for their project. The foundation targets projects with a social policy application on either a global or local level.

Funding Amount

Each grant is worth a total of $7,500; $5,000 is awarded initially and $2,500 upon completion of the project.

Criteria for completion include one of the following:

- approval of the dissertation
- acceptance of an article based on the research by a peer-reviewed journal
- invitation to write a book chapter based on the research

Grants are non-renewable. Recipients have 5 years from announcement of the award to complete their project and claim their final payment.

Eligibility

- Current PhD candidates who are working on their dissertation
- Applicants who do not already have a PhD; those who do, are ineligible
- Applicants must have defended their dissertation proposal or had their topic approved by their department
- PhD candidates from any country and any university in the world may apply; U.S. citizenship or residency is not required

About the Foundation

Irving Louis Horowitz and Mary E. Curtis established the Horowitz Foundation as a not for profit 501(c)(3) organization in 1997 as an expression of their commitment to the advancement of research in social sciences and to affect social policy change.

For information on criteria, conditions of the grants, special awards and how to apply visit:

www.horowitz-foundation.org

Applications are currently open and close on December 1, 2017.

Confronting Racial Inequities in Health: Challenges and Opportunities. David R. Williams, Harvard University

This session focuses on the interplay of structural and cultural processes that produce health inequality. The overarching question this session addresses is: How are structural and cultural forms of exclusion, domination, boundary maintenance, and the like implicated in health beliefs and behaviors, health disparities, disease-related stigma, and experiences in the health care system? Following a brief introduction, four panelists—each of whose work extends beyond the United States—will describe how their research on health inequality answers this broad question. Following the panelists' presentations, the presider will lead a general discussion on these questions: • Can material and symbolic processes of health inequality be distinguished empirically? Is there value to doing so? To what extent are material and symbolic processes mutually reinforcing? To what extent do they counteract each other? • What lessons does research on the interplay between material and symbolic processes offer to theory, health interventions, and health policy?

454. Thematic Session. The Social Construction of Intellectual Property

Palais des congrès de Montréal, 511D, 8:30-10:10 a.m.

Presider: Bruce G. Carruthers, Northwestern University

Panelists: Bruce G. Carruthers, Northwestern University

Jeannette Anastasia Colyvas, Northwestern University

Heather A. Haveman, UC Berkeley

The leading firms in the world economy are increasingly formed around the control of intellectual property rights (e.g., patents, copyrights, trademarks). If the economy of the future is all about ferreting out and exploiting the rent-generating opportunities around intellectual property rights, it is important to understand how these rights are constructed, the implications of alternative forms of construction for the economy and employment, and the main ways in which the construction of such rights might change or evolve.

Climate Change and the Future of Cities. Eric Klinenberg, New York University; Liz Koslov, New York University

This session is supported by the Federation for the Humanities and Social Sciences. This session will examine climate change and climate action in the Post-COP21 era. It will examine how regime shifts have affected policies, practices, attitudes and protest around climate change as well as public participation and perception of environment and environmentalism. Papers will explore whether or not new directions of policy and action have affected broader cultural norms and attitudes towards the environment and conversely how those have influenced political actors ranging from protesters to policy makers and states. The social, cultural and political dynamics of climate change are riddled with tensions and contradictions. While international climate policy-making submits often fail to make significant progress, many cities and sub national states as well as mobilized citizens are taking action towards mitigation and adaptation. Despite increasingly stern warnings of irreversible ecological change, polar sea ice melts, circumpolar nations look at these transformed environments as potential new resource frontiers for oil and minerals. The 2014 People's Climate March was the largest public mobilization around climate change to date, but climate skeptics continue to receive media attention that is disproportionate to their standing within the scientific community. This session will explore a diverse range of topics related to the sociology of climate change, including: climate change adaptation and mitigation, media representations and climate discourse, public opinion and behaviour, and protest around social inequality and climate justice.

457. Professional Development Workshop. Preparing Young Scholars for the Future of Disability Studies

Palais des congrès de Montréal, 512B, 8:30-10:10 a.m.

Session Organizer: Tom Gerschick, Illinois State University

Leader: Tom Gerschick, Illinois State University

Despite being a status much like sex, gender, race, ethnicity, social class and sexual orientation, scholarship on disability has significantly lagged these contemporary research and social action areas. Existing disability scholars understand the necessity of training the next generation of scholars to broaden sociologists' understanding of the importance of studying disability in its own right and for its implications for intersectional theory and scholarship. Our expressed goal is to demonstrate the many research gaps in the sociology of disability and to demonstrate ways of addressing them. We envision this session as a catalyst where young scholars can get ideas for new projects, network with potential collaborators, and learn of publication opportunities and outlets.

458. Policy and Research Workshop. Rethinking Data Collection with Public Records Requests: Perspectives from the U.S. and Canada

Palais des congrès de Montréal, 512A, 8:30-10:10 a.m.

Session Organizer: Pierce Greenberg, Washington State University

Leader: Pierce Greenberg, Washington State University

Co-Leaders: Kevin Walby, University of Winnipeg

Tia Dafnos, University of New Brunswick

Governments across the globe afford the public access to a variety of documents and data through open records laws. However, sociologists rarely use this valuable resource. This workshop will introduce sociologists to the process of filing public records requests to collect both qualitative and quantitative data. Presenters from the U.S. and Canada will (1) discuss potential applications of public records requests in sociological research and (2) overview guidelines for procuring data through open records laws. The workshop will also include a small-group brainstorming session to ensure that participants come away with ideas for implementing public records requests into their research. The intended audience is all sociologists who conduct research. Drs. Kevin Walby and Tia Dafnos have written extensively about using public records requests in critical criminology in Canada. Dr. Walby edited "Brokering Access: Power, Politics, and Freedom of Information Process in Canada," a definitive volume on the use of public records in sociological research. Session organizer Pierce Greenberg recently published a review article on the use of public records requests in sociological research in Social Currents and has used public records requests to collect data about coal waste facilities in the U.S.

459. Teaching Workshop. Group Work that Works

Palais des congrès de Montréal, 516E, 8:30-10:10 a.m.

Session Organizer: Bryan K. Robinson, University of Mount Union

Leader: Bryan K. Robinson, University of Mount Union

This workshop introduces Team-Based Learning (TBL) as a classroom management strategy. TBL's unique approach to groups provides all the benefits of collaboration while still holding individual students accountable for their fair share of the work. Along with basic implementation of TBL, this workshop will cover examples of productive group assignments as well as strategies for effective team evaluation.

460. Regular Session. Boys, Men, and Masculine Spaces

Palais des congrès de Montréal, 512C, 8:30-10:10 a.m.

- The session will revolve around the theme of delineation (and around the main mechanism making it possible, namely boundaries), which is the sociomental act underlying the way individuals as well as groups include and exclude other individuals and groups. It will encompass different substantive domains (gender, nationality, race and ethnicity, sexuality) as well as tackle with those domains at both the macro-, meso-, and micro- levels of social analysis. To accomplish that, I have secured the participation of four colleagues, who will present papers on "social speciation" and the politics of ethnicity (Erikson), the politics of ethnoracial classification (Loveman), the politics of sexual marginalization (Brekhus), and the politics of "social deservingness" in welfare policy (Battle).

490. Thematic Session. The New Philanthropy as Social Investment: Theorizing the Philanthrocapitalist Turn

Linsey McGoey, University of Essex
 Presider: Darren Thiel, University of Essex
 Panelists: Emily A. Barman, Boston University
John D. Arena, College of Staten Island
 Discussant: Linsey McGoey, University of Essex

First coined in 2006, the term 'philanthrocapitalism' turns ten years old this year – and yet conceptual and practical understandings of the concept remain in their infancy. Where has the term come from; who are its main proponents; and what risks and opportunities does it herald? In this session, a range of scholars analyse the hope, hype and tensions of the philanthrocapitalist turn, exploring a number of novel developments in global philanthropy, including the rise of 'impact investing' and the new trend of establishing limited liability companies (LLCs) rather than traditional foundations in order to disburse large fortunes. Panelists will address questions such as: is there a direct relationship between growing philanthropy and growing wealth inequality, and if so, how can we improve the measurement of that relationship? How to study new philanthropic entities such as philanthropic LLCs where grant-making is less open to public scrutiny than at traditional foundations? How to document the ways in which corporate donors enlist new charitable 'subjects' and populations as entrepreneurs are positioned in both theory and practice to produce a return on investment? The conceptual themes and empirical developments addressed by panelists are increasingly urgent at a time when a growing number of major philanthropic institutions announce initiatives to address entrenched patterns of poverty and inequality by mobilizing capital created through patterns of wealth production that can contribute to the very problems they aim to solve.

491. Thematic Session. The World According to U.S. Social Science

Palais des congrès de Montréal, 511F, 10:30 a.m.-12:10 p.m.
 Session Organizers: Cynthia Miller-Idriss, American University

 Presider: George Steinmetz, University of Michigan
 Panelists: Raewyn Connell, University of Sydney
Charles Kurzman, University of North Carolina
John Lie, University of California, Berkeley
Florencia Torche, Stanford University
 Discussant: George Steinmetz, University of Michigan

American scholars working in the academic disciplines of economics, political science, and sociology have long made the United States their default object of study, largely delegating inquiries beyond U.S. borders either to "area specialists" or to anthropologists, historians, and humanists. Whether this national parochialism is good or ill for disciplinary social science is a perennial question, even as recent events on the global stage give it new urgency. Are U.S. social scientists currently giving the world its due? What would our discipline look like if 'the world' became a larger part of our research and teaching? How ought the production of knowledge about the 'rest' of the world be organized in U.S. universities today?

 Student parents represent a rapidly growing and significant portion of the undergraduate population, yet most colleges and universities have not yet researched or identified these students or developed any specialized support services that they need to be successful. According to data from the Institute for Women's Policy Research, students with children make up 4.8 million students or 26% of the undergraduate student population nationally. Yet the six-year baccalaureate graduation rate for student parents is alarmingly low. Emerging research and initiatives are beginning to address student parents both as a high-risk population, and a diverse population in need of a range of student support services from their colleges and universities to increase their retention and degree completion. Sociology faculty are often most aware of student parents through their direct interactions and relationships with students but may feel frustrated or helpless about how to support their student parents and how to approach college administrations about institutionalizing support systems. The National Center for Student Parent Programs has partnered with the Program Evaluation & Research Group to develop and pilot The Family Friendly Campus Toolkit, a set of instruments and guided process through which institutions can conduct a self-assessment and program development initiative to improve their college/university's approaches to supporting parenting students on their campuses. This workshop will address these issues exploring both effective strategies for advocating for institutional change, as well as interpersonal and classroom strategies that can be implemented by individual faculty members or departments. The workshop will cover the following topics: 1. Who are student parents? 2. What do they need? 3. Examples of strategies and best practices from college and university student parent programs across the U.S. 4. Classroom strategies & faculty interactions 5. How to build an institutional initiative on your campus utilizing the Family Friendly Campus Toolkit as recently developed at Endicott College's National Center for Student Parent Programs and piloted at eight colleges & universities including two-year, four-year public and private institutions. The workshop will cover the following topics: 1. Who are student parents? 2. Why are they returning to school after starting a family? 3. What do they need? 4. Examples of strategies and best practices from college and university student parent programs across the U.S. 5. Classroom strategies & faculty interactions 6. How to build an institutional initiative on your campus utilizing the Family Friendly Campus Toolkit as recently developed at Endicott College's National Center for Student Parent Programs and piloted at eight colleges & universities including two-year, four-year public and private institutions.

This panel session speaks to how public discourse shapes material and cultural inequalities by specifically examining how the news media shape group boundaries. News media representations of social groups shape people's understandings of themselves and of others. By drawing on a range of specific case studies, this panel will contribute to our understanding of how the news media draw symbolic boundaries around groups in ways that produce, maintain,
and sometimes challenge social inequality.

522. Thematic Session. The New Anti-Inequality Philanthropy. Is it Working?

Palais des congrès de Montréal, 511E, 12:30-2:10 p.m.

Session Organizers: David B. Grusky, Stanford University
Robert Reich, Stanford University

Presider: David B. Grusky, Stanford University

Panelists: Sheldon Danziger, Russell Sage Foundation
Ryan Rippel, Gates Foundation

This session is supported by the Canadian Institute for Advanced Research (CIFAR). This session is supported by It is suddenly fashionable to engage in anti-inequality and anti-poverty philanthropy. This development leads us to ask (a) whether the new philanthropy is indeed working (when assessed against some counterfactual world without such anti-inequality philanthropy), and (b) whether the decision to off-load worries about rising inequality to the nonprofit sector leads to a new breed of programs and interventions that neither reflects the evidence on what works or the public's sensibilities about how best to take on poverty and inequality.

523. Thematic Session. The Unevenness of Feminist Social Change

Palais des congrès de Montréal, 511A, 12:30-2:10 p.m.

Session Organizer: Christine L. Williams, University of Texas at Austin

Presider: Megan Tobias Neely, University of Texas at Austin

Panelists: Susanna Walters, Northeastern University

Adia M. Harvey Wingfield, Washington University in St. Louis

Michael A. Messner, University of Southern California

Arlene Stein, State University of New Jersey-Rutgers

This panel will investigate the unevenness of social change around gender and sexuality. A number of milestone victories, such as the recognition of LGBT relationships, the removal of barriers to women in the military, and the first woman presidential candidate for a major party have occurred at the same time as we are witnessing renewed attacks on abortion rights and the virulent harassment and assault of women on college campuses. Previous metaphors used to describe the unevenness of feminist social change include "waves," "backlash," and "stalled revolution." In this session, panelists will be invited to expand on or replace those metaphors. The goal will be to understand the patterns of feminist social change historically, and for different social groups. For example, panelists will be asked to address whether the expansion of gender and sexual rights has favored particular social groups, such as those privileged by race and class.

524. Special Session. Technology, Culture and the Future of Work

Palais des congrès de Montréal, 511C, 12:30-2:10 p.m.

Session Organizer: Jerry A. Jacobs, University of Pennsylvania

Presider: Jerry A. Jacobs, University of Pennsylvania

Panelists: Jerry A. Jacobs, University of Pennsylvania

Stephen R. Barley, University of California Santa Barbara

Ariane Ollier-Malaterre, Université du Québec à Montréal

Stories about how technology is changing the production of goods and services appear almost daily. Some of these innovations are already familiar: self-checkout scanners at the grocery store;
touch-screens for ordering at airport restaurants, surgery-assisting robots in the operating room. Others, we are told, will be introduced in short order: self-driving cars, automated investment advising, automated document translation, and drone aircraft for agriculture, rescue and even for express delivery. These along with a host of other technological innovations have led to a series of questions: Will work disappear? For work that remains, how will the culture of the workplace change, specifically with respect to its character, location, skill requirements, scheduling and monitoring of jobs? This session plans to bring together researchers and scholars who are tracking these developments. In addition to including sociologists, the session will also cast a wider net to include researchers from management, technology, labor history and related fields.

Conventional sociological research on migration has focused on the economic, social and political domains, with cultural dynamics of migrant inclusion and exclusion remain in the shadow of scholarly inquiry. This proposed thematic session brings to the forefront the various cultural processes and institutional dynamics that construct the symbolic boundaries between natives/locals and different migrant groups, and the repertoires mobilized by social actors to sustain, challenge, and cross these boundaries. It asks: 1) what are the symbolic messages legislation, migration policies, traditional and social media send about a particular migrant group and how they intersect to demarcate the 'we' and the 'they' division, and to legitimize the marginalization of the 'they'; 2) how migrants mobilize and select certain cultural discourses to challenge and cross the boundaries, and 3) the consequences of successful or failed boundary crossing on the identity of migrants. Recognizing that most existing migration research is based on the experiences of countries in Europe and North America, which may not reflect adequately the distinctive experiences of Asian and African societies, this proposed thematic session focuses on perspectives from Africa and Asia. We believe that in an era of globalization and digitalization, an interrogation of the cultural logic of migrant inclusion and exclusion is one of the most urgent and timely issues awaiting sociologists' attention.

553. Thematic Session. We're All Telling Our Stories But Is Anyone Listening? Capturing Narrative Impact

Palais des congrès de Montréal, 511F, 2:30-4:10 p.m.

Session Organizers: Kelly J. Nielsen, University of California-San Diego

Francesca Polletta, University of California, Irvine

Presider: Kelly J. Nielsen, University of California-San Diego

Panelists: Christopher A. Bail, Duke University

Wendy Griswold, Northwestern University

David J. Harding, University of California at Berkeley

Jennifer M. Silva, Bucknell University

Discussant: Kelly J. Nielsen, University of California-San Diego

As cultural resources, stories are often central to both analyses of inequality and struggles for equity, inclusion, and resilience. This session focuses on ways of conceptualizing and measuring narrative impact. By asking when stories work, when they do not work, and what it means for stories to work, this session will consider how to disentangle the effects of culture on inequality. At the level of both individuals and political groups, the question of narrative impact has implications for how we study social inclusion and exclusion, group boundary making and solidarity efforts, and social resilience and well-being.

554. Special Session. The Future of Muslim Societies: Governance, Movements, and Religion

Palais des congrès de Montréal, 511D, 2:30-4:10 p.m.

Session Organizers: Rachel A. Rinaldo, University of Colorado, Boulder

Colin J. Beck, Pomona College

Panelists: Mounira Maya Charrad, University of Texas at Austin
Kevan Harris, UCLA

Fareen Parvez, University of Massachusetts- Amherst

Mbaye Lo, Duke University

In the wake of the Arab Spring, prospects for transnational movements and changes in governance across the Muslim World seem bleak in some places (e.g., Egypt, Mali) and brighter in others (Indonesia, Tunisia). This panel explores the past and future of politics and religion across different regions, including the Middle East, Asia, and Africa. Connections across Muslim societies and to the transnational system are emphasized. Possible topics include, but are not limited to, the nexus of religion and democratization, development, collective action, gender and sexuality, and globalization in various contexts.

Palais des congrès de Montréal, 512A, 2:30-4:10 p.m.

Session Organizers: John Paul DeWitt, University of Michigan
William H. Frey, Brookings Institution

Leader: John Paul DeWitt, University of Michigan

Panelists: Jill Bouma, Berea College

Katherine R. Rowell, Sinclair Community College

Esther Isabelle Wilder, Lehman College

Graduate students at research-intensive universities often receive substantial mentorship aimed at research activities, but mentorship aimed at teaching activities often goes overlooked. Often, graduate students may harbor a desire to pursue careers focused more on teaching than research, yet comparatively fewer opportunities for pedagogical mentorship exist. In this session, faculty will reflect on their experiences as teacher scholars and discuss strategies for promoting a culture of pedagogy in academe. This session will also examine tools for effective pedagogical training among sociologists as well resources for teaching sociology. In addition to graduate students, the session invites faculty at teaching-focused institutions to attend and contribute their insight.

558. Teaching Workshop. Selecting Readings for Introductory Sociology: Content and Format

Palais des congrès de Montréal, 512B, 2:30-4:10 p.m.

Session Organizer: Nancy A. Greenwood, Indiana University Kokomo

Leader: Nancy A. Greenwood, Indiana University Kokomo

Co-Leader: Stephanie Medley-Rath, Indiana University Kokomo

The goal of this workshop is to help instructors who are teaching introductory sociology (especially for the first time) to become aware of the array of options available for readings in this course. We will discuss traditional and not so traditional textbooks and readers, the “no-text” option, as well as various formats for reading materials such as paper, e-books, and open access materials. We discuss the pros and cons of each option and tie that knowledge to the literature on the scholarship of teaching and learning, to selected learning goals, content and/or theoretical variation, student characteristics, as well as pedagogies for this class. We will offer some helpful handouts. Participants are encouraged to bring their questions or issues for discussion.

Comparative Sociology

Editor-in-Chief: David Weakliem, University of Connecticut.

Book Review Editors: Mehdi P. Amineh and Sander De Rijke

Comparative Sociology is an international scholarly journal, published in six issues per year, dedicated to advancing comparative sociological analyses of societies and cultures, institutions and organizations, groups and collectivities, networks and interactions. All submissions for articles are peer-reviewed double-blind. The journal publishes book reviews and theoretical presentations, conceptual analyses and empirical findings at all levels of comparative sociological analysis, from global and cultural to ethnographic and interactionist. Submissions are welcome not only from sociologists but also political scientists, legal scholars, economists, anthropologists and others. Indeed, the journal is particularly keen to receive works of comparative political sociology, comparative legal sociology, comparative economic sociology and comparative cultural sociology.

Articles for publication in Comparative Sociology may be submitted online through www.editorialmanager.com/compsoc.

Selected Indexing and Abstracting: CSA Worldwide Political Science Abstracts; Emerging Sources Citation Index (Web of Science); SCOPUS; Social Sciences Abstracts
