The Section on Political Economy of the World-System (PEWS) brings together scholars committed to the critical study of the capitalist world-economy and other historical social systems. The PEWS Section seeks to foster an intellectual tradition that finds its roots in the anti-imperialist and anti-capitalist analyses forged during struggles for decolonization by scholars in the Global South. With a focus on world-systemic dynamics, PEWS members are united by the use of political economy as an analytical frame, while exploring the intersection of political economic change with race, gender, class, imperialism, neo-colonialism, and the environment. This Section maintains PEWS’ legacy as a radical critique of disciplinary boundaries and thus embraces diverse disciplinary, epistemological, theoretical, and methodological approaches. We seek to provide a forum for intellectual exchange and debate among kindred sociologists, scholars, activist-practitioners, and teachers in both the Global North and the Global South. We welcome members with wide-ranging substantive interests in world historical perspectives and are strongly committed to promoting a diverse membership.

PEWS Anti-Oppression Statement
World-Systems analysis originated alongside African liberation movements during the 1960s and 70s. The world-systems perspective aimed to take a historical materialist and dialectical approach to social science history in order to aid national liberation movements in the Global South. World-systems scholars from different parts of the globe analyzed anti-racism and patriarchy as constitutive of historical capitalism. Given these origins, we as a section must challenge ourselves to be more inclusive, actively anti-racist, and actively anti-sexist.
there are resurgent women’s movements, black liberation movements and anti-colonial movements which have challenged fundamental global inequalities of power. Yet as a section, we were far more male, and also more white, than ASA as a whole. As we work towards both intellectual and ascriptive diversity in our section, PEWS can embody the liberatory goals of anti-oppression movements across the world.

As the PEWS Anti-Oppression Committee, we propose a comprehensive approach to diversity and inclusion. Our section strives to foster a grassroots movement to enlarge and diversify PEWS membership and participation, including on conference panels, papers, and invited sessions. While the current moment calls loudest for addressing concerns of anti-blackness and anti-indigeneity, we also seek to engage with ALL who are drawn to the world-systems perspective. This includes people from all genders and those who live, work, and struggle for justice in the Global South.

Our actions as PEWS members should actively disrupt any reproduction of hierarchies in our professional networks and in our intellectual frameworks by:

- Promoting anti-oppression requires thoughtful interpersonal actions that acknowledge power inequalities
- Acting responsibly toward others creates a supportive environment
- Focusing on the intellectual merits of scholarship fosters a horizontal exchange of ideas.
- Being cognizant of power dynamics cultivates a welcoming social space
- Fostering an environment where racism and sexual harassment are not tolerated is our shared responsibility

We recognize the necessary changes for an inclusive section take time and offer this statement as a starting point that charts a way forward. Further elaborating and concretizing these practices, we hope to make PEWS panels, receptions, and the mentoring program welcoming for all. In this manner, world-systems analysis as practiced through the PEWS section of the ASA will live up to the values set by its founders in the heat of liberation movements of the mid-20th century. PEWS can once again become a leader among ASA sections in redressing anti-blackness and patriarchy, in service of dismantling global exploitation and oppression.
